School district announces staff changes for next year

TEACHERS

This fall she will teach half day kindergarten and beginning garden.

Dawn Hovie

in early childhood education."

Hovie will be teaching reading, English and math.

"I'm really excited about it. It's going to be a lot of fun," she said.

She added, "I'm just excited to work with young students who are excited about learning, although I'm really going to miss the high school staff and the high school age students."

After 26 years as head junior varsity football coach, Brian Certa made the difficult decision to retire.

"I started coaching the same year I came up and started teaching, that was in the fall of 1979," Certa said. "I coached all those years and really enjoyed coaching football."

Certa said he was asked over the years to move up as assistant or even head varsity coach, but he enjoyed the junior varsity kids too much to make the move.

"I've always enjoyed that age group," he said. "I didn't really have a desire to move on or change." Certa said he will miss his ninth and tenth grade football players, but he is looking forward to seeing more of his wife and children.

"It was a hard decision. It took me pretty much the school year to make the decision, but I felt it was just time," he said. "I'm going to miss Thursday nights."

"It will be hard for me to go to a game and see someone else coaching the team," he added.

Certa has and will continue to teach the construction technology program at the high school wherein students build a home.

Certa told his team to continue to play hard and from the heart.

"Be a team, be united and give it your best effort," he said.

Changes in the classroom will be accompanied by changes in bus personnel. Bus drivers Paul Stephan and Jim Stapleton are retiring.

After retiring from 28 years in the United States Post Office, Stephan gave bus driving a try.

Paul Stephan

"I loved it. I hate to give it up, but when you're 70 years old you have to think about doing something else," he said.

Stephan said he decided last fall that this would be his last year.

"I just want to do more volunteer work with the Knights of Columbus, American Legion, St. Mary's Church and the Charlevoix Senior Center and spend more time with family and friends."

Stephan said he will miss the kids and the camaraderie he's had with them.

"I have ones that I've driven 10 to 15 years ago that come up to me and introduce themselves."

Stephan said he will miss the sports trips for which he often drove.

"That was a fun part of the job," he said.

Stapleton also retires this year. He could not be reached for comment.

Union employees file claim against St. Mary's

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

In mid-April, representatives with the International Brotherhood of Boilemakers, the local D480 union, filed charges with the National Labor Board claiming Charlevoix's St. Mary's Cement Company failed to bargain in good faith.

According to Paul Parrish, a member of the local D480, the union's claim is a reaction to the dismissal of 12 former St. Mary's employees who were let go after St. Mary's purchased the company from Cemex on April 1.

"It's our contract, they were wrongfully dismissed. They should have honored our contract," said Parrish, who has worked at the cement company for the past 35 years and is a current cement loader.

Ron Plocki, the human resources director for St. Mary's Cement Company, said, the company is reviewing the charges. He declined to comment further.

Parrish said when St. Mary's took over, management issued a letter in which they agreed to honor the D480 contract.

"By accepting our contract, they accepted the employees and they should follow the contract they accepted," Parrish said.

He explained that under that contract, St. Mary's management has the flexibility to let workers go, as they opted to do in this case. But, Parrish said the approach they took in letting workers go did not follow the contract's guidelines.

Plocki declined to comment as to why the workers were let go.

Parrish said that under the contract, when the company wants to cut the workforce they have to do so by seniority, with those having been there the longest receiving preferential treatment.

"They went about lowering the manning at the plant wrong," he said.

Instead, Parrish said all employees were on probation for 90 days, were subject to monthly evaluations and were required to apply for their positions. In the end, some were rehired and some were not.

"That's not unusual for a new company. But, it is when you've worked there over 30 years," he said.

This action resulted in the union filing three grievances with the company and one with the National Labor Board.

Today, June 22, St. Mary's representatives met with Mark Kelly, an international representative of the D480, to discuss the employee grievances filed with the company.

The outcome of the meeting was not available by press time.

Kelly said he anticipates the grievances filed with the company going into arbitration. He explained this means the issues will be heard by a representative of the American Arbitration Association.

"It has to go through the steps. It doesn't happen fast, which is hard for the guys who are out of work," Kelly said.

Currently, the charges filed by the union against St. Mary's are being investigated by Thomas Good with the National Labor Relations Board in Grand Rapids.

According to Chet Byerly, resident officer for the labor board, this investigation will culminate in a report for review by labor board regional director, Stephen Glasser.

Byerly said from that report, Glasser will determine whether there is reasonable cause to believe the company violated the National Labor Relations Act.

If they do find there is reasonable cause, the labor board will issue a complaint and set a hearing. If the complaint can't be solved at the hearing, it will go before an administrative law judge in Charlevoix who could require the company to pay back wages.

Parrish is hoping that the final outcome includes rehiring of those who were let go and the contract being honored.

"It's not going to be a win-win, no matter what. People are still going to lose their jobs. If those 12 come back, 12 others have to go," he said.

Sports cuts won't help school budget crisis

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Public Schools 2005-2006 budget passed with a little over half a million dollars in cuts.

The largest savings came in the form of not rehiring three-and-a-half of the five retiring teachers which amounted to $390,000, according to Charlevoix Public Schools Business Manager Shawn Biddle.

source outside of fund dollars and we're also going to a substitute teacher calling system," she said.

The reason for the cuts in teachers was that the school could simply not rehire instead of having to lay off additional staff.

Biddle said, "85 percent of our budget is personnel, so when you have to make cuts it has to come from people."

According to Biddle, Charlevoix schools previously cut central office staff, custodial staff and others.

"We're pretty much to the point where we're running at minimum as far as support staff," she said. "And that's why we're kind of to that point where you can't start making $2 million in cuts and not start feeling it in the classroom."

Some residents are concerned that staff and programs have been cut, but the sports program and coaches salaries were not touched this year.

According to Becky Swayze-Doan, a concerned parent, she has no desire to see sports cut, but she would like to take a look at the salaries of coaches.

"I'd like to see what our sports budget is compared to other school systems," Swayze-Doan said. "If that is true that we are the highest paid, are we gaining any students? Are we gaining any children because of our sports program?"

She added, "If we are, then everybody would like to know about it."

Biddle said the sports budget is $170,000. Which is about 1.3 percent of the overall projected budget. She added that the amount of money it would cost the school system if sports were cut could be devastating.

"If you really eliminate sports you would have people leaving right and left," Biddle said. "And you would quickly lose more students than would be worth cutting."

She added, "If you lost 20 students, which is probably not unreasonable if you eliminated sports from Charlevoix schools, then you would already have lost the money."

The $170,000 covers salaries for all coaches, fringe benefits and the federal tax withholding and retirement dollars required by the state.

"Referees and umpires are paid with revenues from gate admissions," Biddle said. "The only thing the general fund covers are coaches salaries."

"The schools made some major cuts to the sports programs two years ago when they cut nearly all assistant coaches. Charlevoix Middle School principal Keith Haske took on the responsibilities of middle school athletic director for which he receives no extra compensation.

New piano tuner offers services in Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

A new business proprietor in Charlevoix reminds piano owners that regular tune-ups are as important for pianos as they are for cars.

Katherine Koucky Ackerman, sister of former Koucky Gallery owner Chuck Koucky, offers piano tuning to Charlevoix residents.

She said owners of new pianos need to tune the instrument four times a year in the first year and twice a year thereafter.

Choosing not to tune a piano can result in string damage and the piano's inability to stay in tune, she added.

"Most of the parts are wood, and so they change with the weather and humidity and the parts can crack, break and move. Pianos along the lake are particularly vulnerable to damage from humidity changes," she said.

Ackerman, an Associate Member of the Piano Technician's Guild, has studied tuning, repairing, regulating and voicing techniques for piano tuning.

"Tuning is another dimension of musical involvement for me, and something I had been interested in learning about for some time," she said.

Her training includes hands-on lessons and an apprenticeship, coupled with a correspondence course and an annual 70-hour seminar she completed in January. Ackerman, 49, plays in a steel drum band at Michigan State University in East Lansing, where she lives most the year. She has visited Charlevoix since 1978 and said she wants to establish a business here as it may be her new year-round home after her 16-year-old twins graduate.

"Many tuners are getting ready to retire, and there seems to be a need for many more. In the directory from the Piano Technician's Guild, there are only 14 tuners listed in all of northern Michigan," she said.

For more information or to make an appointment contact Ackerman at (517) 927-6415.

Ways buy Hoskins Manufacturing site

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

DBS Development, LLC recently purchased the defunct Hoskins Manufacturing site, located at 5339 M-66 North in Charlevoix's Marion Township.

The nearly 10 acres of hilltop property, built in the 1960s, had been on the market since its official closure on Nov. 13, 2001.

According to representatives of the Charlevoix County Equalization Department, the property was sold April 19 to DBS Development, LLC, with offices on M-66, for $875,000.

DBS operates under the ownership of Dawson Way, a local developer; Barney Way, Dawson's son and co-owner of Dry Harbour-Motor Sports; and Scott Way, cousin of Barney and co-manager of Way Transportation in Charlevoix.

Preferring not to disclose details about the site's intended use, Barney Way simply stated the Hoskins facility was purchased by DBS "for an investment" from a firm in the Detroit area.

"It is now being used for warehousing and boat storage," he said, adding that operations within the site have not been solidified at this time.

Marion Township Zoning Administrator Bob Drebenstedt said, "People with money know how to make money. It (the DBS takeover) will create jobs. These people have a track record of hiring community workers. I'm hoping they'll hire some veterans."

Drebenstedt admits that he was mildly surprised to hear DBS had gone through with acquiring the facility, noting that he cautioned Dawson Way about adopting the site because of its history of improper waste disposal.

"There was some concern about environmental issues, but (the site) has a clean bill of health," said Barney Way.

The Hoskins site, which had specialized in the production of wire used in conducting heat, was scoured for abandoned hazardous waste in late 2002 by the Grosse Isle post of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Michigan

In September 2002, the EPA discovered such abandoned hazardous wastes as acids, caustics, solvents, lubricants and metal wastewater treatment sludge at the Hoskins facility.

In November 2002, the MDEQ was given clearance to access the exterior of the property after groundwater and soil contamination was detected and the waste disposal practices at the hands of former Hoskins employees were made public.

The EPA's removal of hazardous material at the site concluded in March 2003, with the clean-up cost to Hoskins' parent company, Bloomfield Hills-based Armada Corporation, approaching $300,000 at the time.

Currently, the Hoskins site is secure and poses no imminent threat to the community, according to a February 2003 statement made by Jeffrey Kimble, on-scene coordinator with the EPA's Grosse Isle office.

Scott Way chose not to comment on details of the DBS transaction. Dawson Way could not be reached for comment.

SPORTS

Yacht Club race results for June 1 and June 8

'Sports cuts won't save school budget shortfall'

While Charlevoix is okay now, there will soon be problems, Biddle said.

"In a couple years we're looking at hitting the wall," she said. "And cutting the sports program for $170,000 doesn't go very far toward cutting $2 million out of your budget," she said.

According to Biddle, the current projected expenditures for the 2005-2006 school year are $13,014,706 with an income of $12,239,145 which forces the school to use $775,561 out of their rainy day fund.

Though the budget goes into effect next month, it will be amended several times throughout the next year due in part because Charlevoix, as school districts all over the state, still do not know how much of an increase, if any, they will receive in the basic foundation grant.

Biddle said, while there is often talk of Sheriff makes major meth bust in Hayes Township

A methamphetamine bust shook down in Charlevoix's Hayes Township last week.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department has sought felony warrants from the Charlevoix Prosecutor's Office to hand down to an individual. They are seeking numerous counts including delivery of methamphetamine, possession of methamphetamine and maintaining a drug house.

The individual, whose name is being withheld pending arraignment, has prior drug charges and is facing enhanced sentencing as a repeat offender.

Detective Vondra received information that the individual was residing at a home on Burnett Road and had an outstanding bench warrant out of Grand Traverse County pertaining to methamphetamine charges.

Vondra along with detective Church staked out the residence and apprehended the individual leaving the home and placed him in custody on the outstanding bench warrant.

A search of the vehicle revealed a glass pipe commonly used to smoke methamphetamine and a glass beaker.

Vondra secured the vehicle, obtained search warrants for it and the home and contacted the methamphetamine team from the Michigan State Police.

A search of the car revealed a plastic tube containing methamphetamine, a glass beaker, a glass pipe, a blow torch, a can of butane and 11 syringes. A search of the home revealed a digital scale with residue, tin foil with residue, two plastic Gerber baby food containers containing drugs and a marijuana cigarette.

why the schools don't go to pay to play for their sports programs, the amount of money generated by such a system is so insignificant that even if the school system only lost one child as a result, the school would lose money.

"Typically pay to play will have a cup and they generally don't generate a lot of money. If you got $5,000 or $10,000, that would be significant, if you lose one kid because of that then you haven't gained anything."

Swayze-Down said by no means does she want to see the sports programs cut.

"I was talking about looking at how much the coaches are being paid. I think sports is very important. I played it, my kids played it," she said. "I would just like to see some comparison to other towns that are in the same class."

She added, "And by no means do I think this would fix the state budget, but as a parent I need to understand our local budget to understand the full realm of where the spending is going on."

East Jordan's most recent sports budget is about $202,000 according to East Jordan High School Athletic Director and Assistant Principal, Steve Hines.

And, while East Jordan schools have a slightly lower enrollment, their sports programs offerings are pretty comparable, Hines said.

Biddle said she understands parents have concerns about their children's education and the school budget.

"I would invite those people to come in and talk to Dr. Stuvok or myself so we can help them understand it (budget)," Biddle said. "School finance is very confusing and there a lot of misunderstandings. If anyone has a question they are welcome to call us."

For more information about school finance you can reach Biddle at (231) 547-3200.

In light of the budget crisis Swayze-Down said she and some other concerned parents are currently in talks with the school board about possibly starting a PTO or similar organization at the Charlevoix Middle School to help the kids.

Hankins featured in Michigan book

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Some local children captured in oil have recently been blended with prose.

Local fifth grader Allison Hankins appears in the pages of "I'm A Michigan Kid" which was written by northern Michigan author Gary Bower and illustrated in oil paintings by his wife Jan.

"They took kids from all over Michigan, but I represented Lansing," Hankins said. "I think it's a really cool opportunity because not all kids get to be in a book and I was chosen to be in it."

She added, "I think it's cool that they have a poem for every page, it puts a little spice in the book."

Hankins was featured on a page all about the state capital, because of her interest in public service.

"I like politics and I like learning about them," she said.

An excerpt from the book "I'm A Michigan Kid" reads, "My name is Allison. I'm a Michigan Kid today and someday I might be a Michigan legislator and work in this beautiful building. Who knows? I might even be elected governor."

Hankins said she is glad she lives in Michigan because it is so beautiful. "I think people should come visit it because there is so much to do and so many places to go."

According to Bower, who has been publishing and writing books for about six years, the people and the land are what gave him the idea to write his most recent book.

"I was inspired to write it by meeting kids and I was inspired by the beauty of Michigan," he said.

As a mother of 12 and an avid oil painter, Bower said his wife's interest in working on this book was just natural.

And, he said, they wanted to do something different, which is how they came up with what he calls an artistic tour of Michigan through oil paintings, facts and poetry.

"Our goal is to be able to put it in any cottage on the coffee table and have it serve as a gentle tour," he added.

Bower said, this book is for kids and adults of all ages.

"There is a lot of diversity in it," Bower said. "We feature 22 different kids."

Some highlights in the book are the Soo Locks, Tahquamenon Falls, the Mackinaw Bridge, Pictured Rocks, Sleeping Bear Dunes, Frankenmuth and more.

"What we really wanted to do was instill strong pride in these kids, in their state," Bower said. "It's really easy to live here a long time and not realize what a paradise we have."

"I'm a Michigan Kid" books are available in Charlevoix at the Bridge Street Book Shop, Trademark and on-line at www.bowerbooks.com.

Bower will sign books from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday, July 21 at the Bridge Street Book Shop located at 407 Bridge Street in Charlevoix.

Author Gary Bower holds up the copy of the book he wrote entitled, "I'm A Michigan Kid," which he sent to Allison Hankins who appears in the book.

Opening night strong for new island theater

A summer of theater on Beaver Island kicked off June 17 with a lively, musical aimed at adult audiences.

The last few weeks have seen a group of professional actors arrive on Beaver Island's shores and start rehearsals for the inaugural season of the Emerald Isle Repertory Theatre.

Alison Show of New York, John Keller of New Jersey and Katie Deal of Georgia have joined the theatre company for the summer and starred in the June 17 musical, "I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change."

The cast also included veteran actor Brian Porter, who is Artistic Director for the theatre and was directed by Kyle Barnette.

"I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change," is currently the longest running off-Broadway show. Song and dance routines explore the sometimes poignant, sometimes hilarious world of romance and relationships between the sexes. The show will run through Sept. 28, with all performances in the Parish Hall on Beaver Island. This show contains some adult language and situations.

A special "sneak preview" night was held on June 10 at Stoney Acre Grill. Islanders and visitors got the opportunity to meet members of the Resident Acting Company and were treated to several numbers from the production.

Tickets are $20 for adults and $12 for students. Special group rates are also available. The box office is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, in the Cole Gallery. Call (231) 448-3188 for reservations.

Two other shows are planned for the summer season. Wives of an American King, showing from July 12 through Sept. 2. This will be the debut of an original play about the wives of James Jesse Strang, the Mormon, self-proclaimed king of Beaver Island. Written by Anne-Marie Oomen, a faculty member at Interlochen, the play is being produced in association with the Beaver Island Historical Society.

On August 19, "Steel Magnolias" will debut, with yet another professional actress, Mandy Lane, joining the theatre's Resident Acting Company. The play involves the bonds of friendship between six southern women. "Steel Magnolias" will run through September 18.

For specific show dates and times, visit the theatre's web site at www.eirtheatre.org.

Lockman charged with embezzlement: Doors may close at Northern Preferred Title

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Last week, Karla Sue Lockman of Boyne City was charged with two counts of embezzling more than $20,000 from her employer, Northern Preferred Title Company, and was released on bond while she awaits trial.

If convicted of the charges, Lockman, a 34-year-old mother of three, could be handed a prison sentence.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema, said, "Lockman is charged with two counts of embezzlement by an agent or trustee of $20,000 or more, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and/or a $15,000 fine or three times the amount embezzled."

Lockman stood mute at her June 23 arraignment in Charlevoix County's 90th District Court. Therefore, a not guilty plea was entered on her behalf by the court.

According to Jarema, Lockman was released after she paid 10 percent of a $50,000 bond because she has no prior criminal record and has ties to the area.

Jarema said Lockman is prohibited from transferring or selling any property she personally or jointly has an interest in. So, if she is found guilty, there might be some recovery of damages to the injured parties.

According to a press release issued by Assistant Chief of Police, Jeffrey L. Gettel of the Boyne City Police Department, "A lengthy investigation has determined that a minimum of $670,000 was converted into Lockman's personal bank account

Fourth of July festivities on tap throughout area

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Beaver Islanders and mainlanders from Horton Bay and Charlevoix will celebrate Independence Day with jets, parades and fireworks.

In the city of Charlevoix, entries in the annual Fourth of July parade will march down Bridge Street at 10 a.m.

The parade, sponsored by the VFW and all veterans, will start at the American Legion Post off East Garfield Street and will end in Charlevoix's East Park where a ceremony will take place. Marchers will include the Marine Corps League, the Women's Auxiliary, Boy and Girl Scouts and the Charlevoix City Band, lead by Gary Stutzman.

The annual Horton Bay Parade, orchestrated under the direction of "parade czar," John Rohe, will make its way down Boyne City-Charlevoix Road at 1 p.m.

This wacky procession of individual and float entries will begin at the intersection of Horton

Bay and Boyne City-Charlevoix roads and will proceed toward Boyne City, ending near the town limits.

Rohe was excited to announce that early this week, 18 entries had already officially registered. He is expecting about 30 to make the final count.

"The distinguishing feature of the Horton Bay Parade is there are no commercial entries allowed. It is a tribute to the resourcefulness and ingenuity and good cheer of the people of Horton Bay," he said.

When asked if entrants are required to be Horton Bay residents or if he himself is a resident, Rohe replied, "Horton Bay is more of a state of mind at this time of year than a geographic location. We are all from Horton Bay."

Two big events planned for the parade which will carry the theme "Commencement Ceremony of l'Université de Bay Horton," include a float entry from "The College of Genetic Manipulation" and was used to purchase a new home and furnishings, new vehicles, horses, trailers, and other personal possessions or expenses."

Lockman, a closing agent for Northern Preferred Title Company for about a year and a half, allegedly embezzled the money from January of 2005 to May of 2005.

On June 1, John Taylor, co-owner of the title company, and attorney, Ed Engstrom, contacted the Boyne City Police Department regarding a possible embezzlement from their escrow.

Jarema said, "We did a search of her bank records and we believe that it shows that she was writing checks from the escrow account to herself and depositing it into her personal account."

Gettel said Taylor and Paula Barron, owners of Northern Preferred Title Company, became aware of the thefts when their checks began bouncing, and terminated Lockman's employment when it became obvious she had stolen the funds in question.

Gettel went on to explain that Lockman said she received a large inheritance in February from her parents to explain the amount of money she had.

"Lockman's parents have rebutted her claim, telling officers that they did not give their daughter any such money," Gettel wrote in the release.

Jarema said this embezzlement has severe implications for the community since this case deals with such a large sum of money.

According to Taylor, 10 people have been laid off so far from the title company's three locations in Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan.

He added, "We're wrapping up existing files. We are no longer taking new orders for title insurance products."

According to Harry Golski, the Charlevoix attorney representing Northern Preferred Title Company, Jarema's investigation is ongoing and therefore he doesn't want to engage in speculation.

But, he said, "There is a civil and criminal litigation pending and we will allow the criminal case to work toward justice."

Lockman, who is being represented by Fred L. Gibson, is scheduled to appear at 2:45 p.m. July 12 in Charlevoix Circuit Court for a preliminary examination.

Band boosters in search of used instruments

The Charlevoix Band Boosters want your used instruments to benefit the Charlevoix High School Marching Band.

If you would like to pass your old instrument on to a student in need, Jayne Bennett and the Charlevoix Band Boosters would be happy to accept it as a donation to the band program.

Instruments of any age may be donated. Older instruments will be repaired or traded for newer instruments.

Monetary donations are also being sought for the purchase of larger instruments including a bassoon, marimba and a concert tuba.

Contact Bennett at (231) 838-8100 for additional information or to arrange for a drop off site for your old instrument.

The Charlevoix High School Marching Band for 2005 will have 84 members and will travel to Lake Superior State University in July for band camp.

"The Rayder band is very appreciative of the community support that they have received, which has enabled the program to grow and expand over the last three years," Bennett said.

which will unveil a race horse crossed with a corn stalk and the official naming of a new "Fat Lady." During the parade a puff of white smoke will be let off to commemorate the official naming of the new "Fat Lady."

At noon, before the parade, local bluegrass band, Horton Creek, will perform on the front porch at the Horton Bay General Store.

For Horton Bay Parade entry information contact Rohe at (231) 347-7327.

While mainland visitors and residents celebrate the birth of the nation at these two parades, islanders will be celebrating island style — with a parade, sky divers, jets and fireworks.

"Beaver Island is the most patriotic place in the world," said Steve West, executive director of the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce.

Festivities there will start and end with a boom.

At around 2 p.m., festivities will kickoff when a full-sized civil war canon replica is fired and a pair of F-16s with the Michigan Air National Guard huzz the island.

The mile-long parade will take its cue from the jets, making its way through downtown St. James.

In conjunction with parade activities, Luther Kurtz, owner of Sky Dive Harbor Springs, will perform an exhibition sky dive over the harbor.

A kids carnival, jam packed with activities, will immediately follow the parade.

Island activities will end with a bang — fireworks will begin at dusk, around 10 p.m. over the harbor.

City needs to demand accountability in funding

EDITORIAL

It's great to see members of Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority taking a proactive approach to muddy situations and looking at ways to promote Charlevoix.

But the time to follow the paper trail and quantify results is now.

At the authority meeting Monday night, members voted unanimously to dole out over $16,000 to cover a one-year shortfall in the city's budget so Christmas lights can be renovated and replaced.

The light project is about a $20,000 annual expense. Charlevoix City Council recently agreed to cover a little over $6,000.

Mayor Norman Carlson has been proactive and discussed possible corporate sponsorship of the lighting with St. Mary's Cement Company.

The authority also discussed bringing a farmer's market to downtown from the end of August through October. Castle Farms currently hosts such a market from 4 to 9 p.m. on Wednesdays at their site off M-66 but the city wants to work in cooperation with them to bring people into our beautiful downtown.

These are two examples of what we feel are good, proactive approaches to enhancing the city.

We were happy to see the authority once again being proactive and nipping a squabble in the bud.

Monday night, Mayor Carlson announced the beginning stages in the formation of a three-party committee made up of authority reps and those from the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau.

We hope the new committee will bring long overdue accountability to a friendly financial situation between the chamber and the city.

One of the authority's committee goals is to get a better handle on the role and duties of the downtown coordinator. This individual works out of the chamber office off Bridge Street and contracts with the authority for $13,000 a year.

The authority also recently agreed to give the chamber $5,000 for the Thursday night concert series which kicks off this week.

Charlevoix's City Council gave the chamber $6,700 out of the city's promotional budget this year.

Beyond that, at a March of 2004 joint meeting between the chamber, the authority and city council, the city agreed in concept to lease the former Mason Street post office to the chamber for $1 a year for 10 years with an automatic five year renewal.

This lease has not been finalized.

Before finalizing the lease or releasing any more hefty handouts, we urge city council and the authority to demand some accountability.

You can imagine our surprise when we learned last month that city staff doesn't even have a copy of the chamber budget.

The chamber is a private body, crying financial distress with their hand out and the city just keeps filling its pockets without aiming a magnifying glass at the situation.

The chamber is not a public body — you are.

We believe in the promotion of the city, but when tax dollars are the cheerleader, we need to know where they are going, when and why.

The chamber needs to report back with specificity as to how that money is being spent.

Don't let another $25,000 a year and free real estate slip away without concrete answers.

Strength of 'hybrids' can be seen in plants and people

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

When selecting seeds for this year's garden I chose a packet of hybrid cucumbers, and when choosing tomato plants, I picked up one group described as hybrids. They were more costly than the non-hybrid alternatives, and while neither of these plants has done anything yet except for showing rapid growth in the early summer heat.

I have every expectation, that as hybrids, they will outperform in some ways non-hybrid tomatoes or cucumbers.

I am old enough to remember when hybrid corn seed was first available to farmers in Western Minnesota. My father and grandfather had previously selected corn seed from each year's crop. They saved seed from the best plants for the next year's planting. This process of selection had been going on for enough years to have produced the very best seed that could be had for our farm. My father's, and every other farmer's first try with hybrid corn seed produced plants and yields that were far superior to the seed carefully selected for generations. Hybrid corn replaced all the home grown varieties in a single year. While it was some years before I completely understood the process of making hybrid corn seed, I understood its superiority at once — everyone did. The very word "hybrid" seemed almost magical.

Hybrid corn seed is produced by crossing several genetically different races or strains of corn. The offspring of such a cross often combines the best of both parental varieties, while leaving behind most of the problems. Hybrid seed of other plants provides may of the same advantages. Animal hybrids, produced by the same process of crossing genetically different races or strains, are most often superior to parental animals.

hy combining the desirable qualities of both parental types. Both plant and animal hybrids commonly demonstrate what is called heterosis or hybrid vigor. They are better than their parents in measurable ways.

Considering how remarkably successful hybrids have been in both the plant and animal communities, the still quite common negative feelings often ascribed to human hybrids is puzzling. While most states have laws prohibiting the marriage of close relatives like cousins, because we generally recognize the deleterious effect on their offspring, we have been much slower to recognize in law or culture, the advantages of hybrids. Words like half-breed or quadroon suggest that such offspring are somehow a fraction of something rather than a superior product. Much language that is less complimentary has been and is now directed at people of mixed ethnic or racial heritage.

Webster's Unabridged Dictionary defines a hybrid as a plant or animal whose parents belong to different races, breeds or varieties. It also suggests the use of that term for a person whose parents belong to different ethnic groups. Our thinking seems to have a long way to go to catch up with Webster's meanings.

I am the proud grandparent of four hybrid children. Two are the combination of Mexican (probably itself a combination of Spanish and Native American) and blond, blue-eyed Northern European genes. Two are the offspring of Norwegian-English and European-Jewish genetic lines. I, of course, think they are superior grandchildren.

It is unlikely that I will be able to observe the full flowering of their superiority, but I have every genetic and cultural reason to believe they will be taller, healthier, more resistant to disease and more capable of dealing with a complex and rapidly changing world than their non-hybrid peers. Just like the hybrid corn, cucumbers and tomatoes.

A columnist, who will remain nameless, proposed a few months ago that interracial marriage should not be discouraged, but rather should be made mandatory. For the good of humanity, I am inclined to agree with him.

Roger Knutson is a columnist for the Charlevoix Courier. He can be contacted by phone at (231) 547-6558 or by e-mail at news@charlevoixcourier.com.

Education funding changes

Editor:

The Michigan House Appropriations Committee proposed a budget that would undermine education for years to come.

The Senate and House have adopted the basic, and severely flawed, principles in that budget and are now working in conference to craft a bill to send to the Governor. In its effort to set budget priorities, the Michigan Legislature has designed a "formula" that would tie roughly one-third of state funding to the "types" of degrees Michigan universities and colleges grant, prioritizing — above all others — health care and engineering degrees. Certainly health care professionals are critically important for the state, but are not teachers?

In the formula proposed, a student who chooses teaching as a career is worth only one-fourth what a student who chooses teaching as a career is worth only one-fourth what a student who chooses engineering as a career is worth.

In other words, the Michigan legislature proposes to put into law a formula that declares engineers are worth four times as much to the state as teachers. Do we really agree with these elected officials that education and teacher training are of such low importance? Is this what we expected from legislators who assured us education was a priority when they were campaigning? Under-funding the state's schools will have a long-term impact on the quality of education all of our children receive — whether they go to public schools or private. Unless, that is, the legislature proposes that we should have our teachers trained in another state, one that will fairly fund its universities and colleges.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office responds to motorcycle and boat calls Deputies with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office recently responded to the scene of two motorcycle accidents and the scene of a sinking boat.

On Friday June 10, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office responded to Charlevoix Area Hospital where a man was being treated for injuries he received in a single vehicle motorcycle accident.

The male rider stated he was traveling westbound on Ferry Road when he attempted to turn south onto Sanderson Road in Eveline Township. The rider lost control of the cycle on the gravel road as the tires lost traction.

The rider had on full protective clothing and only received a rib fracture and several bruises to his thorax.

The man was treated and released.

At around 11 p.m. June 23 Deputy McAuliff with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office was dispatched to Charlevoix Area Hospital for a motorcycle personal injury accident.

The accident occurred earlier that afternoon at approximately 6:45 p.m. on private property in Hayes Township in Charlevoix County.

The victim was an 11-year-old male riding a dirt bike on a home-made dirt track. The boy hit a series of bumps which caused him to fall off of his motorcycle. The victim suffered a broken collarbone as a result of the crash and was transported to the Charlevoix Area Hospital by his father in a personal vehicle.

The boy was treated and released for his injuries that same evening.

At approximately 7:30 p.m. Monday June 20, 2005, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office received a report of a vessel taking on water on Lake Charlevoix, near Hemingway Point.

Five people and two dogs were aboard the vessel. The U.S. Coast Guard arrived first on scene. A side tow was given to the Ironton Public Access, where the vessel was originally launched.

All passengers were secure on land by 8:30 p.m. No injuries were reported.

Beetles to the rescue

On May 31, under the guidance of Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, a small group of dedicated folks got together on a local lake and collected nearly 200 Garucella beetles for release to areas infested with the invasive species Purple Loosestrife. The beetles consume the stems and leaves of only Purple Loosestrife, thereby reducing its vigor and capacity to produce flowers and spread.

Marvel enjoyed collecting clown figurines and having good times on annual weekend trips with her mom and sisters. She loved to laugh and would soon have everyone in the room laughing along with her. What may have meant the most to Marvel was spending quality time with her family, especially her husband. They shared a lifelong bond of mutual love and adoration that never wavered. They lived in harmony to the beat of their own drum.

Memorial contributions may be made to East Bay Calvary Church. Reynolds-Jonkhoff Funeral Home is serving the family.

He was born April 30, 1918, in Frederic, the son of Ernest and Anna (Blanchard) Richards.

He married Dorothy Staley in 1938. Dorothy died in 1993.

Tony served in the U.S. Army from 1945 to 1946 during World War II.

After discharge, he lived in Charlevoix and moved to Florida in 1950. He moved to St. Louis, Mo., in 1952, where he worked as a truck driver for Orchard Paper Company delivering wrapping paper. He retired and returned to Charlevoix in 1968.

He was an avid gardener and raised some of the largest and unique vegetables around. He enjoyed shooting pool with his friends. Homemade soups and breads were a specialty at Tony's house.

Surviving are his son, Lynn Richards and his wife, Esther, of Plano, Texas; a daughter-in-law, Gail (Jerry) Barnes, of St. Louis, Mo.; grandsons, Chris Richards and his friend, Chic, of East Jordan, Tad (Diane) Richards of St. Louis, Mo.; great-grandchildren, Jordan and Jenna, of St. Louis, Mo.; brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Ken and Arlene Staley, of Charlevoix; nieces, Donna (Dave)

Seven vie for Venetian queen's crown

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Seven, young, Charlevoix women, are competing for the coveted 2005 Venetian Festival queen's crown.

The 2005 Venetian Queen will be crowned at about 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 22, in the East Park band shell.

Diana Phillips, who is in her eleventh year coordinating the queen competition, calls them the "ambassadors of our town."

Phillips emphasizes the annual scholarship competition is not a "beauty contest." Rather, the race for Venetian Queen is one in which presentation, articulation and personality prevail.

"The girls are judged completely on their own merit," she said.

Danielle Kimble, the reigning Venetian Queen, was awarded $2,500 last year. Although the prized dollar amount has not yet been solidified, this year's contestants can expect a similar figure.

Candidates acquired local sponsors and applied to compete in the event individually.

Candidates for Venetian Queen must be 16 to 22 years old, have a primary residence in Charlevoix or have graduated from the Charlevoix School District, be single, never have been married and have no children.

The candidates for the 2005 Venetian Queen crown and their sponsors are: Rachel Bellairs, Cross Fisheries and The MacDougall House Bed & Breakfast; Carolyn Bellairs, Closets 1, 2 & 3 and Edgewater Inn; Jenna Engman, Rick Wertz Builders; Brenna Bergmann, Bergmann Marine; Kari Way, Dry Harbour Motor Sports; Brittany Niswander, Charlevoix Country Club and Northwest Heating & Air; and Amber Milton, Charlevoix Public Schools.

Rachel Bellairs, 20, is a lifelong resident of Charlevoix and the daughter of Bob and Jenny Bellairs. Her twin sister, Carolyn, is running alongside her for this year's crown. Rachel is a graduate of Northwest Academy and is currently beginning her third year at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, Mass. She has been awarded the New England Conservatory Merit Award, the MEAP Scholarship and the Discover Card Tribute Award. Additionally, Rachel was valedictorian at Northwest Academy's 2003 commencement ceremony. She plans to pursue a master's degree in opera performance and perhaps audition for a position in an orchestra.

"This town and its people have shaped me and watched me grow," she said. "This is a place I will forever call home and I wish to represent the very best of Charlevoix, wherever my future leads me."

Carolyn Bellairs, 20, is also a lifelong resident of Charlevoix. A graduate of Northwest Academy, Carolyn has attended North Central Michigan College in Petoskey and Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City. She has been the recipient of the MEAP Scholarship recipient, the Carrie E. Smith Schuyler Scholarship and has been recognized on the Northwestern Michigan College Dean's List. Carolyn has also been a member of the Blue Lake International Symphony Band and Jazz Ensemble.

The music lover plans to transfer to Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant to pursue a degree in elementary education with a minor in music. "It would be a great honor to represent Charlevoix all over the state, and the scholarship would help a great deal with college," she said.

Jenna Engman, 18, has lived in Charlevoix for six years and is the daughter of Bryan and Debbie Engman. She is a graduate of Charlevoix High School, where she was continuously named to the honor roll. Engman plans to initialize her college education at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City and eventually transfer to Central Michigan University. Her major is currently undecided.

"To be able to win the scholarship and have a sense of accomplishment would be great, as well as becoming part of the history of Charlevoix," she said.

Brenna Bergmann, 19, is a native of Fairbanks, Alaska, and has lived in Charlevoix for 14 years. Daughter of Susan and Daniel Bergmann, Brenna graduated from Charlevoix High School and is currently a sophomore at Albion College. She is working toward multiple degrees in English, art, French and Spanish and intends to put her education to use in the field of foreign relations. Brenna has been awarded the St. Thomas Aquinas Scholarship, the AQ Women's Cross Country/Track Grant and the Michigan Tuition Grant. She recently traveled to Australia, representing the state in international cross country championships.

"I have a lot of family in Charlevoix," she said. "One of the greatest feelings to me is making my family and friends proud of me."

Kan Way, 18, is a native of Charlevoix and the daughter of Barney and Kris Way. A recent graduate from Charlevoix High School, Way plans to attend Grand Valley State University in Allendale to pursue a major in biomedical science. She one day hopes to become a pediatrician or OB/GYN doctor. During her junior and senior years in high school, Way earned All-region Volleyball recognition and an Honorable Mention award from the Detroit Free Press for basketball during her senior year. Way currently works at the Charlevoix City Marina.

"I want to represent Charlevoix and show others what a great place Charlevoix is," she said.

Brittany Niswander, 19, is a lifelong resident of Charlevoix and the daughter of Joe and Lorraine Niswander. A graduate of Charlevoix High School, where she was named top 25 in her class and was a member of the National Honor Society, Niswander is planning to attend Central Michigan University to pursue a degree in counseling or elementary education. She is the recipient of the MEAP Scholarship and the Board of Trustees of Central Michigan University Scholarship. Niswander enjoys playing softball, tutoring children and donating money to emergency services, hake sales and canned food drives.

"It (Venetian Queen) is such an honor," she said. "I would represent Charlevoix and it would help me with my education at Central."

Amber Milton, 18, is a longtime resident of Charlevoix and the daughter of Mark and Cindy Meier. She has attended Inland Lakes High School and Charlevoix High School, where she graduated with honors and participated as a member of the National Honors Society. Amber has earned the Michigan Merit Award and the Presidential Scholarship from Albion College. She plans to attend Michigan State University in East Lansing and major in psychology or law. Studying abroad is also a temptation at this point in her education, she said. Milton devotes her time to the Grand Traverse Band youth activities, volunteering with United National Indian Tribal Youth (UNITY) and assisting the Charlevoix Area Hospital with various functions.

"I think it is an honor to represent my community," she said. "Also, the scholarship is a wonderful opportunity to help fund my many years of schooling."

In the coming weeks, each young woman will present two timed speeches, endure 20-minute personal and panel interviews with three out-of-town judges selected by the Venetian Festival committee, and compose a college-level essay to be evaluated by a University of California, Berkeley professor.

Because the judicial process is closed to the public, community fund-raising is a significant facet of the competition. Last weekend, the women coordinated a car wash and, in the next few weeks, will participate in the 7th Annual Garden Walk. All money earned through local activities contributes to the Venetian Queen's grand prize.

When the women aren't planting petunias for the city or riding floats through downtown parades, they will likely be researching the history of Charlevoix and its annual Venetian Festival. During their timed speeches, judges will expect the women to pinpoint areas of distinction that make the town a unique cubby of northwest Michigan.

"We want you to know this town and share it," Phillips told contestants at a recent luncheon prior to a St. Agnes classic Corvette show parade, in which the women rode a float together.

The scholastic competition not only recognizes a queen, but also honors Miss Congeniality — who is nominated by her fellow running mates — and a Scholastic Achievement award recipient — determined by individual essays.

City contracts with lobbyist for $18,000

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The City of Charlevoix recently signed an $18,000 contract with a lobbyist hired to push for a replacement ship for the United States Coast Guard cutter ACACIA.

At city council's June 20 meeting, Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner suggested council vote in favor of hiring Bob W. Davis, president of Bob Davis and Associates in Washington D.C. and a former Michigan Congressman (R).

"He has political connections and is familiar with Charlevoix and the situation with the Coast Guard," Wiesner said.

Council voted unanimously in favor of paying Davis $3,000 a month from July 1 to December 31, 2005. The money to cover this expense will come from the city's industrial promotions account.

"We're going to work together to try to get positive results," Davis said.

His top priority is to get a replacement ship allocated to Charlevoix when the ACACIA, which is currently docked in Round Lake, is decommissioned in the summer of 2006.

According to a memo written by Wiesner, to members of city council, Davis' consulting services are also being pursued because the city has not received adequate representation on the matter at the federal level.

Wiesner wrote, "In repeated attempts to contact Congressman (Bart) Stupak and his staff, by the mayor, myself and others, the Congressman and staff have been noncommittal in working with Charlevoix to maintain a Coast Guard presence. Indicating to us that the Congressman may be supporting another port."

Wiesner added, "As a result of the above information, we felt it may be potentially beneficial to enlist the services of Bob Davis who is certainly familiar with the area and the Coast Guard."

At the council meeting, mayor Norman Carlson echoed Wiesner's thoughts about Charlevoix's federal representation in this matter.

"There may be another port he (Stupak) has in mind in his district. I think we would be better off with someone who only has the city in mind," Carlson said.

According to Stupak, he isn't sure where the city got the idea he may be supporting another ship.

"Am I supporting any other port or ship?"

"No. There is none. We checked to see and the Coast Guard has a limited mission in Charlevoix," he said. "The Coast Guard is military and they support missions, that's where I think everyone's losing sight here, it's not the boat, it's not the port, it's the mission."

According to Stupak, it has been general knowledge for the past 12 years that the ACACIA would be leaving.

"The idea behind the buoy tenders was to make them more efficient," he said. "This is no surprise to anyone."

But, he said, "If Charlevoix has a new idea on a new mission I would be happy to advocate it."

Stupak said he wishes the Coast Guard could expand Charlevoix's role as it pertains to homeland security.

"But, unfortunately or fortunately, we are not a homeland security threat. When they look at their map to conduct terrorist activities Charlevoix does not come to the top of their list," he said.

According to Stupak, no one from the city of Charlevoix has contacted him in a long time regarding a replacement ship.

Stupak said he feels it is a disservice to the community to give them false hope that the ACACIA may stay in Charlevoix or that there is a chance of them getting a replacement for it.

"It may not be the answer we want to hear, but it is the honest answer," he said. "Over the past couple years, my staff and I worked hard to keep the ACACIA in Charlevoix. The Coast Guard loves Charlevoix and Charlevoix loves the Coast Guard. Unfortunately, the USCG's decision is a matter of economics and the amount of resources necessary to carry out their mission. Their decision not to replace the USCG ACACIA was based on the premise that they will be able to complete this mission in the Great Lakes with the three new ships."

In light of Stupak's comments on the situation, third ward council member Shirley Gibson isn't sure the city's decision to spend $18,000 is a good one.

"I think $18,000 is a lot to spend for someone (Davis) with just a maybe," she said.

After some prodding from her fellow council members, Gibson ultimately voted in favor of hiring Davis.

"Charlevoix stands to lose a lot if we don't get a replacement," mayor Carlson said.

He explained that the Coast Guard presence means shoppers downtown, more kids in schools and people buying houses.

Carlson said Davis has connections in Washington D.C. which could be of great help when it comes to lobbying for Charlevoix.

The United States Coast Guard cutter ACACIA will be decommissioned in 2006. The city has hired Bob Davis, a lobbyist in Washington D.C. to help secure another ship.

"He is the one who is going to be bending Stupak's ear in Washington and he has contacts in the Coast Guard," Carlson said.

Because there is still time before the ACACIA is decommissioned, Carlson said, he wants to exhaust all options to get a replacement ship.

"I wrote a letter to the rear admiral Papp and he sent me a letter back stating MORROBAY could be commissioned to the Great Lakes and that was the one I was trying to get," Carlson said.

The cutter, MORRO BAY, which is currently docked on the East Coast has not been released to the Great Lakes.

Charlevoix resident June Cross presented a form letter to council members drafted by Jacqueline Merta, director of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce. Cross requested that all members of council sign it and send it to Michael Chertoff, the Secretary of Homeland Security, Senator Debbie Stabenow, Senator Carl Levin and Representative Kevin A. Elsenheimer.

On June 16, Senator Jason Allen and Merta testified before the Senate Committee on Local, Urban and State affairs about resolutions 40 and 24, both of which urge the Coast Guard to maintain a ship in Charlevoix.

City, chamber and visitors group to form committee

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor
and
By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Promotion of the city of Charlevoix will take a unified direction.

At the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority's June 27 meeting, Mayor Norman Carlson, representing the authority announced the formation of a new three-party committee. The committee, made up of representatives from the authority, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau will begin meeting bi-monthly in early August.

"If we can have participation between the various groups, mission accomplished," John Yaroeh, a member of the authority, said.

Carlson said he hopes this will provide an even playing field for the chamber and visitors bureau, two groups he said have had problems recently finding middle ground.

"No one has to feel like they are being singled out, everyone comes to the table as equals," Carlson told the authority.

He added that the role of the downtown coordinator, who works with the chamber and is funded in part by the authority, will top the city's list of agenda items when the committee meets. The authority has a $13,000 contract with the chamber to fund the coordinator. The authority also gave the chamber $5,000 to fund its Thursday night concert series.

Last month, the three groups were scheduled to meet for a mediation to iron out any differences they have. But, that mediation was canceled.

"It was called off because the chamber chose to have legal representation and the visitors bureau felt that that wasn't in the best interest (or) spirit of mediation," Carlson said. "What we were supposed to do was just discuss if there were problems and air them out."

Vera Mckown, president of the visitors bureau, said, "We felt that this was not a legal issue and we felt there was no reason to participate."

According to Dr. Jane Millar, Executive Director of Northern Community Mediation, mediation is always confidential and it is not uncommon for parties to sometimes bring legal representation.

"In mediation attorney's are more for reference. Mediation is not an adversarial happening, attorneys don't do the talking," Millar said.

She added, "With mediation, both parties decide what they can agree on. If they can come up with agreement it is a legally binding document."

Carlson said he was disappointed that the parties didn't meet and hopes the committee will meet the mark of the mediation.

"I didn't feel that there was anything to hide. It wasn't a court of law," he said. "It wasn't like we're going after the chamber."

According to Carlson, his interest is to get the visitors bureau and the chamber to have a good working relationship.

"The idea is to get everyone to come together and put the past behind them and start working on other goals to help the city," he said.

Since the split between the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau (CVB) last fall, there has been some speculation that it might not have been an amicable one.

According to Steve Bennet, former president of the visitors bureau, as far as he knows there were no problems when the bureau became independent of the chamber.

"Last fall they filed for incorporation in September or October just to be their own entity. There was no conflict with the chamber at that time," he said.

Bennet said most convention and visitor's bureaus are separate from their local chamber of commerce.

"I would call it a natural progression for us. We felt we needed to become separate, but not independent. We didn't want to break ties with the chamber we wanted to just be our own entity," Bennet said. Mckown said she doesn't believe the intended mediation had anything to do with the split because, as far as she is concerned, it was a peaceful one.

"We have no hostility toward the chamber whatsoever. We worked together and we've been cooperative," she said. "There's no smoking gun, so-to-speak, the CVB has grown up and basically that's all it's about."

Chamber director Jacqueline Merta did not return calls regarding the mediation.

Local woman sells stones for causes

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Betty Barton, a local woman with a passion for Petoskey stones donated more than $6,000 to the City of Charlevoix last year.

Barton, a Charlevoix summer resident with her husband, Graham, since 1991, earned the sizable sum crafting with and selling Petoskey stones.

"I'm very happy to have people buy the stones and help contribute to the area," said Barton, who is in her 70s. "It's a real pleasure for me to take a raw stone and polish it until the true beauty is exposed. And then, to be able to make some contribution to the needs in the area — that just makes my day."

Barton has been manipulating Michigan's official state stone, indigenous to northern Michigan and abundant in the Little Traverse Bay region, for nearly seven years.

From the fossilized coral, she produces glossy pendants and picture frames for public consumption — gaining nothing more than the satisfaction of contributing to the community that she adores.

About six years ago, Barton expanded her hobby into a charitable community outreach effort when she approached directors at the Charlevoix Public Library. She asked for permission to leave with them a small basket of polished Petoskey stones, secured to bookmarks detailing the mineral's history, to be sold to the public. Today, this basket still sits at the library's front counter.

"It's a nice service we can provide to the public," said library director Valerie Meyerson. "It's not even the money, it's the service. People really enjoy this."

Over the past five years, Barton has sold her stones outside the former Murdick's Ice Cream store off Bridge Street. High volume sales have allowed her to expand her outreach effort.

Because she has tagged her proceeds as donations, the city granted Barton a permit to sell her crafts on its sidewalks. Complementing her street sales are several community establishments that regularly stock her stones, including hair salons, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, the Charlevoix airport, The Acorn Café and the Inn at Bay Harbor.

Last year, 18 local groups received financial support from Barton's sales.

Among those Barton has donated to are: the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, the Charlevoix Fire Department's EMT scholarship fund, the Charlevoix Police Department's DARE program, the Charlevoix County Humane Society, Good Samaritan Family Service, the Charlevoix Venetian Festival, the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry and the Charlevoix Historical Society.

"I wish I had more money to give because I keep finding more places with needs," she said.

Although Barton scours Charlevoix's lake shores in the summer months to collect stones, her handiwork is completed during the winter. For years, she has retreated to Sun City, a senior community in Tucson, Ariz., during Michigan's blustery off-season.

Using heavy-duty equipment within a communal lapidary workshop, Barton cuts, sands, polishes and -- in the case of pendants -- drills about 10 stones at a time. Scraps from the carving of hearts, crosses, butterflies and bears are used in the creation of picture frames, she said. Working with multiple stones simultaneously cuts down on production time, but working on 10 stones still takes her about two weeks.

Barton said her parents were "rock hounds," which fed her intrigue and appreciation for Petoskey stones.

But this art of chiseling and huffing antique stones wasn't learned quickly. About eight years ago, Barton sought the assistance of a Petoskey shop owner to gain and hone her skills.

"Just learning how to polish the stone wasn't enough," said Bailey, owner of Bailey's Place Petoskey Stones Stuff, who is known simply by her first name. "She wanted to do more."

Barton put on her "grubbies," as instructed by Bailey, and observed her handiwork for several summers. There, Barton watched the veteran artisan carefully sand

'No problem' open through July 3 at the Crooked Tree

The Crooked Tree Arts Center's premier performance of the new play, "No Problem," by northern Michigan playwright, Bill Wheadon opened June 23.

The play is directed by Dale Hull, the executive director of the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

"No Problem is a comedy-drama that examines a variety of family issues that come to the surface just after the funeral of Herm Peterson's wife Flo, his life partner of 42 years," explains Hull. "The rather unconventional funeral proceedings, designed by Herm himself, are not at all appreciated by his two adult children, so over the next two days they begin to question Herm's ability to take care of himself. In the process they learn a lot about themselves and the rights of older people to live an independent life, even if that independence includes some risk."

"No Problem," runs at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday evenings and at 2 p.m. Sundays through July 3.

Tickets are available at the door, by calling the Crooked Tree Arts Center box office at (231) 347-4337, or on line at www.crookedtree.org.

and shine the precious stone with lapidary equipment, Barton still calls on Bailey today for procedural tips when experimenting with new ways to refine the raw artifacts.

"She has a love and fascination for Petoskey stones," said Bailey, who has owned the specialty store off US-31 for 12 years. "She's got so much energy. She's like a little firecracker."

According to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality's web site www.michigan.gov/deq, Petoskey stones are made primarily of calcite and found exclusively in outcroppings of the Alpena Limestone, which makes up most of the northern Lower Peninsula bedrock.

Barton's latest contribution is the donation of a picture frame to the Charlevoix Area Community Pool for its sixteenth annual auction, scheduled for Aug. 7 at the Charlevoix Country Club. Proceeds from the auction will go toward the facility's operating expenses, maintenance and water safety programs.

Bruce MacArthur, a member of the pool's board of directors, discovered Barton's stonework while seeking out a gift for his wife.

"Petoskey stones are such a mark of Charlevoix," said MacArthur. "She has done so much good. I'm really impressed with her generosity."

Pool auction slated for Aug. 7 at country club

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool's Annual Dinner Auction Fund-raiser will take place Aug. 7 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

"I am excited about the many, many things on our wish list that we hope to accomplish after a successful auction. From updating the building, to expansion of program offerings, to keeping our fees low so everyone can continue to enjoy this wonderful community asset, this fund-raiser can make those dreams come true," said event director, Linda Jelinek, of Hayes Township.

Fourth of July safety tips from the state department

The Office of the State Fire Marshal recently issued a reminder to practice fire safety when using fireworks this Fourth of July.

"Fireworks are a fun way to light up a summer night," said Andy Neumann, State Fire Marshal. "However, injuries are all too common, and can often be avoided when you follow basic fire safety tips like lighting only one firework at a time."

If you decide to have your own firework display, make sure that fireworks are legal in Michigan. Do not purchase or use unlabeled fireworks, and never experiment or make your own fireworks. Once purchased, store them in a cool, dry place and check each package for special storage instructions.

Other firework safety tips include:

- Designating a cleared, outdoor area for lighting the fireworks with a minimum distance of 15 feet from houses and flammable materials such as dry grass or mulch.

- Connecting a garden hose to a tap and have it on hand at all times. It is also a good idea to keep a few buckets of water and wet towels handy to extinguish small fires. If you have mulched gardens, consider running the sprinkler system.

- Wearing eye protection when handling them, and never carry them in your pocket.

- Never have any part of your body over the fireworks, set them off in a container, throw or point them at other people or re-light a "dud" firework.

"Fireworks should not be given to small children, and an adult should always be present to supervise children at all times," added Neumann.

Finally, wet down all fireworks debris during and after the celebration. Dispose of fireworks properly by soaking them in water before putting them in a garbage can.

As fireworks season begins it is important to know that if you are using regulated devices you must contact the local unit of government where the proposed display will be conducted and obtain a permit. Call the Office of the State Fire Marshal at (517) 241-8847.

The theme this year will be, "Charlevoix Community Pool, We take your fun seriously."

Jelinek graduated from Charlevoix

High School and has raised her three sons in Charlevoix. She has been a lifeguard for the pool for three years and co-organized the 2004 Annual

Former owner returns to Charly's

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

An Australian woman came half-way around the world to do more than just say "G'day" to Charlevoix.

After a five year hiatus, Helen Coon, current owner and originator of Charly's restaurant, is back at the helm of her establishment which overlooks the Pine River Channel.

"I think I've had a rest for five years and I feel rejuvenated and hopefully all the work I put into my food will be appreciated by the people of Charlevoix," said Coon, who is the lead chef at the restaurant.

Opened by Coon in 1997, Charly's restaurant was sold in 2000 to Carl Johnson who ran Charly's until the winter 2005 when Coon regained possession of the restaurant because Johnson defaulted financially.

According to Coon, patrons will see some definite changes.

"They are going to notice a very clean place," she said.

Upon returning to Charlevoix, Helen spent about eight weeks cleaning and repairing the building to get Charly's up to par for the summer. "You wouldn't believe it, but we used 16 gallons of bleach and 16 gallons of degreaser to get it back to where it was."

And while Charly's will not be serving breakfast and lunch, at least in the beginning, Coon said she will be open six days a week.

She added, "Since I'm going to be doing all the cooking myself I've reduced the number of seats."

Despite Coon's several year respite from the restaurant business, she is no novice.

According to Coon, she has over 30 years in the food business and has owned several restaurants including Ballarat and Raj — Toorak in a Australian suburb.

Coon wants people to know she provides nothing but the best for her customers.

"Everything I do I start from scratch and everything is done the right way," she said.

She added, "I want to be appreciated in this area for my food which is unusual."

With her penchant for the peculiar, there is a big change in the way of décor and menu.

"When Carl Johnson ran it, it was Charly's seafood, but now that I'm taking it back there is a small menu with international flair," she said.

According to Helen, because of the Australian desire for Asian food, there is a lot of fusion of Thai, Malaysian and Australian cooking which she hopes her Charlevoix Customers will love.

"I think they will be pleasantly surprised to find the old Charly's back again. And, with new dishes," she said.

While the menu may look familiar to customers, the faces might too. Coon has hired some of her original staff to help out for the summer.

A new addition to Charly's includes the more than 20 pieces of artwork for sale from all over the world which her husband, Tim Coon, has collected over the years.

"The hope is we would sell art from the restaurant," Tim said.

Tim said customers should also be sure to enjoy one of his wife's edible works of art such as the Malaysian

Travel baseball loses in southern Michigan tourney

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Lake Michigan Mariners played at the North Farmington/West Bloomfield Summer Classic in Farmington Hills last weekend.

The Mariners lost to Grosse Pointe/St. Clair Shores, 16-0; to Dearborn, 12-7; and, to Livonia, 7-5.

In the opening game, Danny Waldron singled and Ethan Towsley doubled for the Mariners' only hits. Waldron took the pitching loss. Ty Telgenhof threw three innings of relief, yielding only three earned runs and striking out two.

Lake Michigan jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead against Dearborn but couldn't hold on. Michael Heckendorn walked and stole second and scored on a Waldron single. With two outs, Kyle Jones singled in a run and Nate Golovich's single plated Jones.

Dearborn tied the game in the second inning but the Mariners rallied for two more runs in the top of the third on an error and singles by Towsley and Golovich. Dearborn scored two in the third, one in the fourth and five in the fifth to break the game open.

Golovich was 3 for 3 at the plate in the game. Waldron, Towsley, Jones, Telgenhof, Sam Balasz and Woody Nitchman had hits for Lake Michigan.

Heckendorn was the losing pitcher while Waldron threw two innings of one-hit, one-run relief.

In the tourney finale for the Mariners, they gave up an unearned first inning run but battled back with two runs in the bottom of the third to take the lead. Balasz singled, Nic Williams reached on an error and Golovich's single plated both runs.

Waldron quieted the Livonia bats, giving up only three hits through the first three innings. A Mariner error led to two more unearned runs in the fourth and in the fifth, Waldron tired as Livonia scored four runs to take a 7-2 lead.

Lake Michigan refused to fold, however. In the seventh and final innings, Towsley led off with a single, followed by a Heckendorn double. Wild pitches allowed both runners to score, cutting the Livonia lead to 7-4 with no one out.

Jones singled, stole second and advanced to third on a ground out. Balasz bounced back to the pitcher who trapped Jones in a rundown. Balasz alertly took second while Jones was tagged for the second out of the inning.

Trevor Cole then followed with an RBI single to cut the lead to 7-5. Williams then walked to bring the winning run to the plate. Golovich hit a shot between third and short but the Livonia third-sacker made the play for the final out to thwart the Mariner rally.

Balasaz finished with two hits in the game. Telgenhof threw 2 2/3 innings of shutout relief to keep the game close. Waldron pitched 4 1/3 innings, giving up four earned runs and striking out three.

Schools receive hike in funds from state

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

After three years with no increase in the State of Michigan's Basic Foundation Grant, Charlevoix Public Schools will receive some much needed relief this fall.

The Michigan House recently approved an amendment to Bill 4887 which increased the current planned $175 per pupil increase by $25 for a total of $200 per child.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Schools, Dr. John Sturock, said, "We're certainly grateful for any increase in revenue we can get."

Sturock said the $200 is a far cry from what this school system needs in order to get out of their financial hole.

But, he added, "We'll take whatever we can get."

If Charlevoix schools receive all of the proposed $200 per child, it will mean approximately $276,000 more for the school system than it received last year.

"It will help offset some of the costs," Sturock said. "In two years we're looking at a $2 million dollar deficit. With a $200 increase for us that's $276,000 dollars of increased revenue."

He added, "It will certainly reduce some of the debt on that $2 million dollars but we'll still have $1.7 million we'll have to cut out of the budget."

Sturock said about 13,000 people showed up at the K-16 Coalition rally in Lansing last week to advocate for increased school funding from the state which may be why the Michigan House decided to approve the increase in per pupil funding.

"It was one of the largest rallies they've ever seen," he said. "That shows there was an impact, they (legislators) noticed all those people."

Sturock said, he understands that the leaders in Lansing have their hands tied in some respects, but that they need to show the citizens of Michigan where their priorities are.

"We're pleased there is an increase for the first time in three years, but it's not going to solve the problem," he said. "We cut over a half million this year and $276,000 is about half that, so even with this piece we are in need."

Sturock said people should continue to contact their legislators and call on them to prorrate the money our school system has lost over the last few years.

Sheriff: 'Mind emergency vehicle law'

Charlevoix County Sheriff, George T. Lasater, wishes to educate Charlevoix County citizens on Michigan's Emergency Vehicle Law designed to protect the safety of men and women who risk their lives every day to protect the citizens of Michigan.

The operator of a vehicle on a roadway which has one-lane of travel for each direction shall, upon approaching a stationary emergency vehicle with its emergency lights activated, carefully move over into the open lane if possible. If this is not possible due to traffic, weather, or road conditions, the operator shall slow down and so the emergency vehicle can pass with caution, allowing the emergency vehicle as much space as possible.

On roads with two or more lanes of travel in the same direction, the vehicle operator shall carefully move into an open lane at least one lane away from the emergency vehicle. If this is not possible, the operator shall slow down and allow the emergency vehicle to pass with caution, allowing the emergency vehicle as much room as possible.

The penalty for a person found responsible for violating this law is guilty of a misdemeanor. If injury or death is involved with the violation then it is a felony punishable by up to 15 years in prison and/or a $7,500 fine.

Sheriff Lasater reminds motorists to drive with caution and have respect for others on the roadway.

Venetian Games team sports packed line-up

Many team sports are scheduled for the 2005 Venetian Games. In most cases, team captains will need to register their official rosters and secure team rules, schedules and appropriate material from the City Recreation Department Office located in the City Hall at 210 State Street, in Charlevoix or, for more information, call (231) 547-3253.

Team events begin with a three-on-three basketball tournament scheduled for Sunday, July 17. The move to a new location, Lake Michigan Beach, has proven to be a good one as the event has drawn raves from competitors and spectators alike.

The paved parking lots accommodate all the courts needed and the additional benefit of having the lake to cool off in and the beach to provide more family fun, will provide for an excellent event. Official registration forms are available at the City Recreation Office.

Tuesday, July 19 there will be three-on-three soccer at Shanahan Field. Last year, the tournament had to be extended to two days because of the large number of team entries. Boys and girls under eight years of age will kick off the tournament with brackets designed for all ages, child through adult. Entry forms can be secured at the City Recreation Office. The event is managed by Carol Madison and Tom Conlan.

A tournament for co-ed beach volleyball teams will be the evening of Wednesday, July 20 at Ferry Avenue Beach sand courts. Teams must play three female and three male players. Official registration forms are available at the City Recreation Office. Carol Loper will be the event manager.

Team croquet is a two-person event that has been very popular for both spectators and participants. It is scheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday, July 20 at East Park. There are several flights, the first of which is a celebrity match between well-known media invited to town to cover the festival. Then, the service club flight matches local groups against each other. One of the hottest competitions finds the two fire departments, City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, squaring off. The winner rides first in the popular street parade. Then there is open flight which has both adults and youth playing for the Venetian Crown. The Charlevoix version of "cottage croquette" has a few rule wrinkles that make the game fun for participants and spectators.

The annual Venetian Cup Sailing Regatta is indeed a team sport. Each of the nearly 100 sailboats making up this popular event train a team of deck hands that provide a spectacular sight Wednesday evening, July 20 on Lake Charlevoix. Fleets featuring several different sizes and makes of boats are handicapped so all racers have an equal chance to become the Venetian Cup winner. Entry forms and more information may be obtained at the City Recreation department.

Whether you appear as a games participant or as a spectator, there are a variety of events and a week jammed with exciting sporting events. Next week we will review the many individual sports that make up the Venetian Games.

First Charlevoix mayor named June 29, 1905

By DAVID MILES
Special to the Courier

Once the State of Michigan elevated Charlevoix from village to city status on June 1, 1905, a city mayor replaced President of the Village.

Harvey Lee Iddings, first mayor of the City of Charlevoix. He served from 1905-1907.

Our first resident to bear that honor was businessman Harvey Lee Iddings, proprietor of a highly reputable hardware and home appliance business. It was located in the first brick structure erected in Charlevoix, the large Morris J. Stockman building that stood across Bridge Street from the Central Drug Store where the Clinton Street corner of East Park is now.

One hundred years ago today, on June 29, a special session of the Village Council was called to report the June 26 vote tally. The minutes of this meeting contain the first reference to Charlevoix as a City. Iddings had defeated incumbent Village President Harry Nicholls, owner of the Charlevoix Lumber Company beside the bridge, in an upset, 315 to 276, total 591 votes.

Henry Cooper (306) defeated Horace S. Harsha (272) for Charlevoix City Clerk, total votes 578.

For City Treasurer, attorney and pioneer settler E. H. Green (305) won over Horace R. Fowler (272), the headlight of whose 1907 Cadillac is on display at the Harsha House Museum, for a vote total of 577. What happened to the other 13 and 14 votes? Were there hanging chads in 1905?

The first session of the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on June 30. The minutes of this meeting contain the first ever officially recorded mention of the "act incorporating the City of Charlevoix." Immediately things heated up. A dispute arose over the tally for Third Ward Alderman, Irate loser, Amos Webster (103), petitioned the council for a recount. Ward winner, Archie Aleox (110), resigned shortly thereafter. No reason was given. Apparently the issue was settled over the summer off the record and Webster gained the seat in September. From then on Iddings and the Council continued their work with relatively smooth sailing.

Harvey Lee Iddings was born in Oxford, Ohio in November of 1856. After graduation from Albion College he came to Charlevoix in 1883 and entered into a 50 percent partnership with pioneer settler Stockman, the firm being known as Stockman & Iddings Iron and Hardware Merchants.

The Charlevoix Sentinel referred to our new arrival as "a gentleman who will prove a valuable accession to our village." And so it proved.

Iddings bought his partner out several years later and renamed the prosperous store the Charlevoix Hardware Company.

Nellie Gale became Harvey Lee's wife in Albion. Their family grew with the arrival of three daughters. Charlevoix resident John Gaskin is Mr. Iddings' grandson.

From the day of his arrival Harvey Lee Iddings gained a reputation as a humorous impromptu speaker in demand for many an occasion. He was also known for accomplished declamations of poetry, literature, and passages from Shakespeare.

The family lived at 300 Park

Avenue on the corner of Grant Street, the two-story house in the Earl Young block overlooking Lake Michigan. Harvey Lee knew which schooners were scheduled to bring in what merchandise to the dock below his store. He would stand watch behind the windows of the house to await their arrival. As the vessels appeared and were towed by tug into the channel, he accompanied them in to safe harbor through a long telescope kept on a special stand.

Iddings headed first Charlevoix city government

A staunch Republican, Methodist, and Mason, member of the Charlevoix Historical Society and the Knights of the Mystic Maccabees fraternal lodge, Iddings was one of the most civic-minded citizens Charlevoix has ever had. He served as a supervisor of Charlevoix Township, was a member of the Village Board and eventually became President of the Village. Long involved with the schools, he was President of the Board of Education at the time of his death.

After his tenure as mayor from 1905 to 1907, Iddings received a beautifully printed multi-page resolution from the city that thanked him for his contributions. It noted his "signal ability, untiring zeal and persevering faithfulness with which he has conducted the business of the city and discharged the duties of his office."

Much of the paving of and sewer installment under the downtown streets west of Bridge Street was accomplished during his time in office, a vast improvement over the rutted, dusty and muddy streets that had existed since our initial settlement.

Harvey Lee Iddings died in 1910.

He had just finished talking with a friend in the Block Bros. grocery store, holding a bag of oranges, when he collapsed as the other man turned to leave. He was pronounced dead at the scene. Charlevoix was saddened by this sudden loss of one of its most prominent and respected citizens. His body was taken back to Albion for burial.

Thus began the long and often distinguished line of Mayors who have presided over and guided Charlevoix's affairs and represented the City for the past 100 years.

The resolution booklet, along with Iddings' formal photo portrait, telescope and Masonic pins are on exhibit at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State Street next to the Congregational Church. Three reproduced leaves from the book display the ornate calligraphy and printing techniques of the era. Artifacts and photos from Charlevoix's past 100 years are also on exhibit. Museum hours are Monday through Saturday

1 to 4 p.m. through Labor Day weekend. Call (231) 547-0373 for more information.

Major intersection to close for repair

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Construction on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road scheduled for July may be postponed for reasons including public safety and the local economy.

The section of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road which intersects with US-31 will have improved drainage, new tile and ditch work and it will be wider with dedicated left turn lanes to Charlevoix and a right turn lane toward Petoskey to help the flow of traffic.

"The start date presently is July 25," said Patrick Harmon, manager of the Charlevoix County Road Commission. "It will be a lot better than it currently is."

He added, "We might end up holding this project off until after Labor Day. We haven't decided yet. We're still looking at a lot of options."

Harmon said if the construction date was changed, it would most likely be moved to September.

"Manhet said they wouldn't have a problem backing the project off until Labor Day. So there's a lot of things we have to hammer out before we make a decision," he said.

Friday, June 24 there was a meeting at the Argonne Supper Club in Charlevoix where some business owners and citizens who live near the proposed construction site voiced concerns about lost business and potential emergencies due to the closing of the intersection.

Harmon said, the decision, which could potentially impact the businesses and residents near the intersection, was not taken lightly.

"There was a lot of thought that went behind this. This wasn't something that we decided out of the clear blue," he said. "We sat down with MDOT last January."

Harmon said, while there are some potential downsides to closing this particular portion of road, there are also some negatives to keeping it open.

"When you start looking at putting flag people in the highway and stopping traffic, then you're looking at people waiting in line somewhere from 15 to 20 minutes," he said.

County-wide smoking ban takes effect July 14

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Several employers in Charlevoix County are preparing for the July 14 official adoption of the Workplace Tobacco Ban, which prohibits smoking in all enclosed areas of workplaces.

The measure, a facet of the Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation, was approved in early March by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and passed April 14 by the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency. The ban has also been given the green light in Antrim, Emmet and Otsego counties.

The regulation zeroes in on public and private work sites that may currently allow smoking in designated areas, such as break rooms. The community health agency, citing the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's reports that secondhand smoke is known to cause lung cancer and heart disease, believes the ban will curtail businesses' rising health care costs and encourage greater worker productivity.

"We estimate that there are about 24 people in our four counties who die every year from the effects of secondhand smoke," said Jane Sundmacher, spokeswoman for the community health agency, who predicts the ban will not generate much public controversy. "There's only one reason we're doing this: To save lives."

Some City of Charlevoix officials, challenge Sundmacher's view, arguing the ban's guidelines may be too vague to have a significant impact on public health.

"I really don't know how it's going to affect me. It's been years and years since I've worked in an office where you've been allowed to smoke," said City Hall Zoning Administrator Diane Manore, who is one of only two people in the building who smoke. "It (the ban) doesn't surprise me, but it seems like overkill. Does this mean we have to stand on the corner or sit in our car?"

According to Sundmacher, about 80 percent of businesses in the four counties implementing the ban are currently smoke-free establishments.

"Those that still allow smoking are generally places like manufacturing plants, a few Laundromats, industrial kinds of work," she said.

One such work site that will be directly affected by the ban's smoke-free policy is Harbor Industries, located on US-31 at M-66. According to Tim Parker, vice president of operations at the manufacturing plant, the building's remodeling plans in 2000 included a break room that was two-thirds nonsmoking and one-third smoking. The staff's smoking area is ventilated and partitioned by a wall, Parker said.

Registration for annual Helen Open this weekend

The 2005 Helen Open, the fifth annual golfing event, held in honor of Helen Weislik, is just around the corner.

Captains for last year's teams are invited to register their returning golfers at 3 p.m. Sunday, July 10 at the Townhouse.

First priority is given to those who golfed in last year's tournament. Individual registrations from golfers new to the tournament will be accepted after returning golfers have registered.

These registrations will be used to fill openings on existing teams. Entry fee remains at $50 per golfer and must be paid at registration. Food will be available during the registration for a nominal donation. Everyone is welcome to attend a light dinner.

This year's Helen Open will be Sunday, August 21 at the Charlevoix Municipal Course.

Signs with donor names will be printed and placed on the course, and every donor will be acknowledged in the printed program. Two complimentary drinks at the Townhouse will be provided for each person or business donating at least $50, and food will be available on tournament day for a donation of $10 per person.

An auction will be held and everyone is invited to bid on their favorite items.

Last year's response was nothing short of incredible. The "smallest little tournament" in town raised another $10,000, bringing the total raised and donated to Hospice of Northwest Michigan in memory of Helen Weislik to over $39,000.

For those who may not be familiar with this event, the Weislik family has owned the Townhouse Bar for over 40 years, and this tournament was established as a lasting tribute to Helen Weislik, who dispensed spirited advice as freely as she dispensed spirits.

Several generations of Charlevoix residents have benefited from Helen's caring and commitment to the community. In keeping with her dedication, the proceeds from the 2005 event will again be directed to Hospice of Northwest Michigan.

For more information, call Cheri Hoffman (231) 547-4578 or Ron Weislik (231) 547-6690.

Pistons and Shock to be in town for Venetian Festival

The Charlevoix Venetian Festival has announced that the renowned Detroit Pistons and Detroit Shock will both be a major part of the upcoming festival.

Commissioner of the Venetian Games, Dean Davenport, said, "We are thrilled that one of the most successful National Basketball Association franchises and the 2003 WNBA World Champion Shock have chosen to participate in our 75-year celebration of the Venetian Festival."

On Friday, July 22, the Pistons and Shock "Year-round Hoops Truck," with a display area containing championship trophies and other memorabilia, together with four adjustable height basketball hoops on one side, will be at East Park for fans to view and experience first hand.

In addition, teaching coaches will introduce and teach skills and principles that have brought success to Shock and Pistons players. Plans are to divide into various age groups and meet at the Charlevoix Middle School gymnasium where skills will be polished and souvenirs will be distributed. There will be a charge of $10 for the 75-minute sessions.

On Saturday, immediately following the street parade, the teaching staff will conduct skill contests including free throws and three point shots.

Pistons/Shock coordinator, Aaron Smith stated, "We are excited to be in Charlevoix, one of the premier basketball towns in the state. We know the spirit of the Pistons and Shock will enhance all that goes on during the sensational Venetian Festival."

Harmon said the potential wait motorists could face was a large factor in the county's original idea of using the Burgess Road detour.

"If you drive at 45 mph you could do it in 11 minutes. So, we thought, 'Well, it would just seem you can drive it in 11 or would you rather sit in line for 15 or 20,'" he said.

The 11 minute time Harmon gave is for travel one-way, while the total detour length there and back is 16 miles, or roughly 22 minutes.

According to Charlevoix County Undersheriff, Don Schneider, the potential cost to lives could be high if a shorter detour than Burgess Road isn't found.

"It doesn't take a rocket scientist to understand that," he said.

Schneider said if emergency personnel, fire or police must go to the area near the Argonne, Pine Point it would make for a much longer trip than necessary.

"You're talking about some narrow roads, particularly when you get off on Burgess, rough and curvy, same thing when you get off of 31 and it's worse for EMS and fire trucks because of the stability of the vehicles," he said.

Doug Bergmann, owner of Bergmann Marine, said, "If you want to really consider an ambulance has to go to the Argonne, an ambulance is going to have to go and extra 18 miles round trip."

Bergmann said the Argonne will be hardest hit if construction occurs during August.

"It will just cripple their business in the busiest time of the year," he added.

Due to the concerns about the impact on businesses and the effectiveness of emergency vehicles when the intersection is closed, a meeting between the Traverse City Transportation Service Center and MDOT took place. At that meeting, it was decided to allow temporary emergency vehicle access off US-31.

"We're looking at a few alternate locations, all of which will cross Bergmann's property," said Lucas Porath, civil transportation section manager of Northwest Design Group and the design engineer on the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road project.

"And we're reconsidering the timing of the construction. The downside of doing it in the fall was it would impact the school bus traffic," he added.

Harmon added, "We're not going to make everybody happy. But, if we can get that stuff addressed, I think maybe we can make most everybody that had concerns happy."

Fudgie isn't a four letter word

Benjamin Gohs
Staff writer

They don't wear white hoods or burn torches and you'll never catch them holding rallies, but there is an ever-growing number of anti-fudgies in our local population.

You know who you are, driving around town in summer, grumbling about the traffic, the noise and the seemingly inept pedestrians. The urge to floor the gas pedal and play tourist bowling with your car may be a strong one, but before you sideswipe a family of six for stopping in the crosswalk to take pictures of East Park, remember that anti-fudgism is an ugly, ugly thing.

It's gotten to the point where "fudge" has become a four letter word. I half expect to see ruffians in overcoats selling it in dark alleyways. "Pst. Hey buddy, wanna buy some fudge? I got the good stuff — 100 percent pure Mackinaw."

"Not me," you say to yourself. "I'm no anti-fudgie. Why, some of my best friends are fudgies."

Oh, it usually starts off innocent enough, with a look and muttering something under your breath along the lines of, "Why don't you go back where you came from." The next thing you know you're letting the "F" word fly. And let me tell you my friends, once you start using the word "Fudgie" there is no turning back. So before you take that step down the awful road to placism, stop and think about the people behind the label.

"Fudgie" is a slang term for traveling fudge-loving American, which was originally coined in the early twentieth century by the first anti-fudge movement.

What early anti-fudgies didn't understand was that Fudgies cannot fight the instinct to travel and buy confections. Some tried to blame candy makers for creating a decadent treat so delicious, but for the most part these confection-ers were tolerated as long as their sales were kept to the summer months.

Despite the fact that geography, not chemistry, makes one a fudgie, the question remains, what is it that makes fudge so irresistible? The magical powers it possesses to draw normally lucid folks hundreds or even thousands of miles from their homes. Its ability to reduce normally snappy dressers to wear Hawaiian shirts and neon framed sunglasses.

Understandably some beleaguered townspeople will inevitably be distraught by the sudden swarm of disoriented vacationers clad in khaki shorts and brown sandals driving recreational vehicles the size of double-wide trailers and taking pictures of anything that won't flee from their snapping, flashing, finger pointing frenzy.

But all this brings us to the real crux — What's in a name? Would a tourist by any other name be any less desirable?

To my never-ending shame I grew up in a household full of anti-fudgies. When I was a kid I heard the name "Fudgie" scomed as though it carried satanic connotation. It was whispered by my grandparents with the same tone of fearful contempt they used to utter "cancer" and "polio."

As a child I lived in Cheboygan, Indian River and Onaway, so I had always heard the "F" word but I had never actually laid eyes on one until I moved to Charlevoix.

Once I saw a few I realized there was nothing to be frightened of. Convinced there was something positive about these so-called Fudgies, I set out on a quest to follow the migrating and spending patterns of these fascinating creatures.

I learned that the common North American Fudgie (Spendus — Indiscriminatus) spends an average of three months a year, generally the warm summer months of June, July and August traveling from town to town patronizing stores, hotels, campgrounds and many other "tourist attractions." Not only are the Fudgies far from harmful, they seem to share a symbiotic relationship with the towns in which they stay.

You may think the only folks benefiting from the annual migration of tourists to Charlevoix are the downtown shop owners, but it trickle down economics teaches anything, it's that money makes its rounds.

And let's face it, the explosion in numbers of the local population may seem like an annoyance with long lines at the Dairy Queen and frequent stops for the bridge. But it is all just a minor inconvenience when I realize one cannot exist without the other — our local economy depends upon those Fudge-bucks.

The next time you see an out-of-state license plate, take a deep breath and remember, whether you scoop ice cream for Kilwin's, cook at the Flap Jack or serve drinks at the Townhouse, tourists are here to rest, relax and support your business.

This country has come a long way in improving it's place-relations, but there is always more that can be done. Remember, whenever you leave town, you too become a Fudgie of sorts.

Letters to the editor

Thank you supporters

Editor:
The weather couldn't have been more perfect. Clear, sunny skies, calm winds and excitement in the air.

It was an incredible day for me and one I wish those who weren't there could have shared with me. I did carry each and every letter that all of you sent with me in the back of my neon running/biking jacket so that you were there in spirit.

I kept thinking how grateful I am to have so many incredibly supportive friends and family. It is because of each and every one of you that I made it through this last year, through the roller coaster of emotions, surgeries, recovery and now fulfilling this dream of mine. I am truly blessed and I thank each one of you from the bottom of my heart. Because of you we were able to raise almost $2,500 for the American Cancer Society and for the Circle of Strength. Next year, I hope many of you will join me, to have fun, raise more money for cancer research, and together we will find a cure, one step, one pedal, and one lap at a time.

Editor:
The Charlevoix State Bank drive-in on M-66 makes it much easier for us to do our banking without having to tackle the line-up of traffic waiting for the bridge while we attempt to maneuver downtown.

An added bonus is the replacement of the clock and temperature sign. We have missed it and love having it again. It's even easier to read than the old clock was.

Thank you, Charlevoix State Bank, for this new/old addition to Charlevoix.

Break-in crime spree solved and prosecuted

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Two men are facing hefty prison sentences in connection with a rash of break-ins that plagued the Charlevoix area during the first quarter of 2005.

According to Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema, Jerry Steele, 39 of Detroit, and Mark Cooper, 50, whose address is unknown, met while serving time in the same prison and began a crime spree in Charlevoix and Emmet counties about eight months ago.

"These guys are what I would call professionals," Jarema said. "They'd stake out the place, smash and grab and then take the cigarettes to the Detroit area and sell them."

According to a press release by Jarema's office, Don's IGA, located off Petoskey Avenue in Charlevoix, was first broken into on Dec. 16, 2004.

In the same time frame, the Boyne City Shell was broken into, as well as the Bay Shore Food Market in Charlevoix County and numerous stores in Emmet County.

Detective Mike Wheat, of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, investigated the Bay Shore store incident which resulted in charges being brought against Cooper.

As a result of those charges Wheat developed the Don's IGA case and the Boyne City Shell gas station case with the assistance of the local city police departments.

As a result of Wheat's investigation, warrants from the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney's office were secured for Steele.

Jarema said, Steele plead to two counts of breaking and entering a building with intent.

Steele was ordered to pay over $20,000 for his participation in the Bay Shore Food Market, Shell station and IGA break-ins and sentenced to prison for a minimum of four-and-a-half to a maximum of 10 years in prison.

According to Jarema, Steele is currently facing a parole violation because he was on parole for a prior breaking and entering conviction.

"Steele has 10 prior felony convictions and seven prior prison terms," Jarema said.

His prior convictions, according to Jarema, include breaking and entering, receiving and concealing stolen property and assault with the intent to do great bodily harm less than murder.

Cooper has been ordered to pay $9,453.81 for his part in the Bay Shore break-in and sentenced to a minimum of three years to a maximum of 10.

Cooper has involvement in three incidents in Charlevoix County and alleged involvement in two counts in Emmet County, Jarema said.

Cooper's prior convictions include fleeing and eluding a police officer and two counts of possession of a controlled substance.

According to Jarema, the number of felonies occurring in the area seem to be on the rise.

"Unfortunately we're now to the point where we need to make sure our doors are locked and make sure our cars are locked," Jarema said.

In an unrelated event, Raymond

McManus was sentenced to six months in the Charlevoix County Jail for his part in a second case of breaking and entering on April 9, 2005 at Don's IGA.

"McManus broke into Don's because he was out of cigarettes. The Charlevoix City Police were dispatched to the scene when a neighbor called 911 after hearing breaking glass and seeing an individual, later identified as McManus, crawling out of the window," Jarema said in a press release.

Charlevoix City Police Officer, Gerard Doan arrived on scene within two minutes and apprehended McManus as he was fleeing.

McManus was charged with and plead guilty to breaking and entering a building with intent.

Sheriff reminds parents to keep watchful eye on kids

Sheriff George T. Lasater is issuing a reminder to all parents to keep a close watch on your young children this summer.

With school out for the summer, many children are outside enjoying summer activities.

In a press release, Sheriff Lasater wrote, "Charlevoix County grows each summer with the influx of many vacationers. This growth not only brings extra traffic, but those type of people who may try to prey on young children. There is nothing more heart breaking than to have a child missing."

Sheriff Lasater encourages each and every parent to keep a close watch on their most precious gift, their children. If playing outside, ensure they are being supervised by a competent adult. Do insist on knowing where your children are and who they are with. If spending time at a friend's house, insist they be supervised at all times. Know who your children are with.

You are encouraged to contact 911 if you see anyone you don't know making contact with any child. Lasater advises, "Please have your neighbor look out for your children and you look out for theirs."

eddi Award nominees sought by Crooked Tree

Each year, Crooked Tree Arts Center hosts The eddi Awards, a celebration of those individuals and organizations that appreciate and participate in the arts in northwest Michigan.

The name, The eddi Awards, honors the late eddi Offield, an accomplished artist in her own right, as well as a generous benefactor and advocate for the arts in our area. A humble woman, Offield always spelled her first name with a lower case "e."

Serving as Co-Chairs of The eddi Awards 2005 are Teresa Crouse of Petoskey and Steve Spencer of Harbor Springs.

Awards are presented in the following categories: Visual Artist, Performing Artist, Arts and Cultural Organization, Arts in Education, Arts and Cultural Leadership, Individual Patron, Benefactor, and Lifetime Achievement.

Nomination forms are now available at Crooked Tree Arts Center, as well as on-line at www.crookedtree.org. It is very important that nominators include a description of why their nominee should receive an eddi Award.

Winners of The eddi Awards are selected by a volunteer committee representing a wide range of artistic & cultural disciplines in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Each year Crooked Tree assembles a new group to review nominations and select winners.

Nominations are due by July 29. The celebration and presentation of The eddi Awards is Friday, Sept. 16 at Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Hospice golf event raises over $14,000 for House of Care project

The beautiful links at Harbor Point Golf Club was the setting for the 2nd Annual Ladies Golf Outing to benefit Hospice of Little Traverse Bay.

Over 60 ladies took part in the event held to benefit the House of Comfort, House of Care hospice residence campaign.

The golf event raised over $14,000 for the hospice residence including generous support from area businesses who helped to underwrite the cost of the event.

This year's champs included two teams, on the front it was the foursome of Maureen Nicholson, Gretchen Olsen, Jinny McCoy and Jan Mancinelli and the back nine saw Rachel Swiss, Bonnie Busch, Phyllis Linek and Ruth Barnes come in with the lowest score. Other prizes were awarded to: Laura Kors, Katie Ogden and Sally Lehmann.

"This event was a lot of fun. The caddies really got into it and are already planning on what they are going to do next year," said Maurika Reed, a development associate with Hospice of Little Traverse Bay.

Not only did the ladies have a great round of golf but they were able to bid on caddies for their team. Thirteen brave men put themselves up for bid and many brought along treats for their ladies including wine, gourmet snacks and chocolates. One caddy even gave each golfer a carnation before play began.

The caddy bringing in the most tips for the day was Brian Lutz.

Over 54 percent of the funding necessary to make House of Comfort, House of Care a reality is already in place. Plans, permits and other documentation are in hand.

"The needs are real, the time is now and, at this point, it all comes down to raising the balance of the funding required to proceed with the project," Reed said.

The goal of the hospice house campaign is to raise $3.5 million needed for construction of the building plus $1 million for an operating endowment to ensure the financial stability of the project into the future. All proceeds from the golf event will be used to help reach that final goal.

Workplace smoking ban may be difficult to enforce

"Our staff is quite surprised by this," he said. "They have a lot of questions. We took great pains to design a building with ventilated areas."

Parker noted that one of the company's major clients is Philip Morris USA. Harbor Industries has produced their cigarette merchandising equipment for use in gas stations and convenience stores for years.

"This could have a major impact on future business," he said, adding that Philip Morris may view the countywide initiative negatively. "Smoking is someone's choice. On private property, it's not the government's place to tell us what we can and cannot do."

Parker's disagreement with the upcoming ban is further fueled by what he says are insufficient instructions on the part of the county as to how the ban should be implemented.

Randy Frykberg, vice chair of the county board of commissioners, asserts that the regulation's intent is not to demand smokers quit their habit, but to restrict the presence of secondhand smoke for the sake of fellow staff and patrons.

"When it impacts somebody else in the workplace, when it can give them cancer, when it can seriously affect their life, then we need to step in," he said.

Like a double-edged sword, the initiation of the ban has already been met with piercing response by both sides.

"I think it (the ban) will be complaint-driven, but it will save some lives and improve the health of some people," said Frykberg.

According to the office of the Charlevoix County Clerk, the board's final vote on the regulation was 4-2, favoring its implementation. Dissenting were commissioners Shirley Roloff and Ronald Reinhardt.

"Here we are again telling people what to do," said Roloff, a nonsmoker who dislikes the habit altogether. "I don't think it's right for me to tell somebody who is paying somebody else's wages and health insurance what to do. I don't believe in big government. I think we get ourselves into too much that we shouldn't."

Commissioner Reinhardt agreed with Roloff's emotional stance, adding that after 25 years of smoking, he quit on his own terms.

"My basic complaint is that we should not be telling private businesses what to do or what not to do," he said. "The government has no investment in these businesses. If you don't want to work in a place because of the smoking allowed, then don't work there."

Jim Shull, airport manager at Charlevoix Area Airport, said he doesn't expect the ban to have an impact because the facility's interior is currently nonsmoking.

"It may inconvenience smokers a little more," he said of those smokers who will now need to be mindful of their distance to the facility's entrances when standing outside. "There's a considerable distance where people will not be allowed to smoke and we will have to place signs. The nonsmokers might benefit from that."

The exact distance a smoker must now stand away from a facility is not specified by the community health agency. A press release by the organization simply states, "The regulation prohibits smoking near entrances, windows and ventilation systems of all workplaces affected by the workplace tobacco ban."

The question that seems to beg, according to several local officials, is that of enforcement on the part of the community health agency.

"It's something they can't enforce," said Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon, a smoker. "Where are we supposed to go?" According to Sundmacher, the community health agency is not expecting to have to issue many citations, if at all, to businesses for noncompliance with the ban.

"We look at enforcement as an educational process," she said, noting that the Charlevoix City Police Department is not directly involved in the ban's implementation. "If we get a complaint, we will go out to the employer and make sure they understand the regulation and what it entails. This is the kind of thing that has very high compliance."

Those employees or patrons who observe someone disregarding the nonsmoking policy are first asked to take the issue up with their immediate supervisor, the ordinance states.

In the event that the community health agency is called to a work site for a complaint, a warning will be issued as the business's first violation. Within one year's time, a second citation will cost the employer $50, the third citation will cost $100, and the fourth and subsequent citations will cost $500. The ordinance states that those who wish to report ban violators may do so with the reassurance that their identities will be protected.

"I don't begrudge anybody who doesn't want to be around smoke," said Brannon.

"Yes, we should quit. It's a terribly expensive, bad habit. It's a good thing (the ban), it truly is. We'll just see if I spend less."

The Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation was initially brought to the attention of Gerald Chase, officer at the community health agency, more than a year ago by the Tobacco Reduction Coalition, said Sundmacher. The coalition presented various physicians, hospitals and spokespersons from the American Heart Association to county commissioners at a recent board meeting when the legislation was being introduced for a vote. Examples of successful clean air initiatives were also identified to county officials, such as those in Chippewa, Wayne, Ingham and Genesee counties, and the City of Marquette — all of which have smoke-free ordinances.

According to Sundmacher, a recent county survey revealed that 70 percent of voters, smokers included, said they would support a ban on smoking in the workplace.

When asked about the fate of smoking in restaurants and bars, Sundmacher noted their exemption in clean air initiatives is due to a restrictive statewide legislation.

"There is a law in Michigan that prohibits anyone from enacting legislation banning smoking in bars," she said. "Restaurants can choose to go smoke-free, but in Michigan, we're prohibited from requiring them to do so."

Those workplaces exempt from the ban are restaurants, bars, bowling alleys, Indian-owned casinos and tobacco specialty stores.

Packages of materials detailing the ban's guidelines, enforcement procedures and resources for persons who are ready to quit smoking were sent to county employers last week by the community health agency. Also included with the paperwork was a sample decal for businesses to place in their windows notifying the public that they are a completely nonsmoking establishment.

The community health agency has identified the following types of workplaces as future nonsmoking sites: restrooms, lobbies, reception areas, hallways and other common-use areas within a facility; buses, taxicabs and boarding and waiting areas of public transit; depots; retail stores, areas patronized by the public such as attorneys' offices, banks and handstands; all areas of galleries, libraries and museums; facilities that are primarily used for exhibiting motion pictures, musical recitals, stage plays, lectures and any other performance, except when smoking is a scripted act; sports arenas; convention halls; every place of meeting or public assembly, including school buildings; waiting rooms, hallways and semi-private rooms in hospitals, clinics, physical therapy facilities, and doctor and dentist offices; lobbies, hallways, and common areas in hotels, motels, multiple-tenant office and apartment buildings, malls, nursing homes, retirement facilities and residential facilities used for health services, child care or adult day care; and public places where bingo games are held.

Local students embark on Detroit mission trip

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

The Young Neighbors in Action Team, a division of Charlevoix's St. Mary's Catholic Church, will depart July 10 for Oakman Boulevard in inner-city Detroit to conduct a week-long outreach mission.

Nine local members of the parish's Youth Center, ranging in age from 15 to 19, will convene with six additional youth groups to work in "Focus Hope," a facility that is responsible for packaging and distributing food to various shelters and to the homeless. The annual project is coordinated by the Center for Ministry Development, a Connecticut-based non-profit organization.

"The areas we go into are poverty-ridden," said Patricia Furtaw, pastoral and youth minister at St. Mary's and co-ordinator of the team's excursion. "The students are relatively culture shocked."

According to a report by Detroit Health Care for the Homeless, available online at <http://bphc.hrsa.gov>, the estimated homeless population in the Motor City is 16,000. Detroit Health Care for the Homeless operates five outreach sites and one stationary clinic in Detroit.

"I'm really excited," said Michael McDonough, 16, of Charlevoix. "I've had two sisters do this. I'm glad we have a new site."

The eight-year-old St. Mary's team includes six students from Charlevoix and three from East Jordan, several of which are embarking on their third or fourth mission to the city.

Previous undertakings have found them working in soup kitchens, day-care centers, shelters for displaced children and the "Freedom House" — a facility assisting refugees who are seeking asylum in the U.S.

"This is my fourth year going down," said Sonya Plude, 18, of Charlevoix. "Every year is a different challenge because we have to work with different scenarios and different kinds of people. It's fun but it's mentally and physically draining."

Students will be working from about 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day next week. Along with duties at the food pantry, the team may also assist in the renovation of a dilapidated school that has been the victim of neglect and insufficient funding.

Although the mission's purpose shifts each year, the group's lodging at Marlan Hill Retreat Center in Dearborn Heights is consistent. Students say the monastery's limited accommodations, such as the absence of air conditioning, encourage their immersion into a society that is devoid of such luxuries.

"We live a pretty posh life up here in northern Michigan," said adult chaperone Eric Baldwin, 28, of Charlevoix. "Some of these people live on the streets waiting for the shelters or food pantries to open just to get something that's a week old or past its expiration date."

For teens to witness such an impoverished standard of living and trek such a gritty landscape, Furtaw said, is a crucial life lesson — the rift between privileged and neglected classes is realized.

"They feel blessed when they come back," she said.

Baldwin notes that during these week-long missions, "a six-day-old banana starts to look pretty good."

Other students assert that the tasks they complete in Detroit, are challenging in their temporary nature.

Jaleesa Baier, 17, of East Jordan, recalled an emotional bit of dialogue between herself and a child at last year's trip to Lighthouse Path — a Pontiac home for neglected and displaced children.

"She told me I couldn't leave because I had to stay there forever and be her mom," said Baier. "I had to tell her the truth about the situation."

A counterbalance to such short-lived support is found in the formation of lasting friendships with fellow missionaries.

"Most of us know the other youth groups," said Plude, who is currently considering missionary work overseas. "You get to meet friends that you'll have for a long time."

As this longtime camaraderie persists, so does students' urges to explore alternative methods of community outreach once they've returned, said Furtaw.

"Each year, I've been really touched by what has happened down there," said Baier. "You come back and you feel like you need to do something to help out."

Additional members of the Young Neighbors in Action Team include: Lauren Bradley, 16, of Charlevoix; Megan Sell, 16, of Charlevoix; Jamila Baier, 15, of East Jordan; Ellie Strong, 17, of Charlevoix; Jenny Ernst, 15, of East Jordan; and Garrett Troppman, of Charlevoix.

Council to decide fate of park amendment

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Charlevoix's City Council will likely decide the fate of the East Park renovation project this week.

At the June 20 city council meeting, 462 signatures gathered by a group of six Charlevoix city residents in support of East Park changes were submitted for council's consideration.

The official name of the petition group's effort is an initiative action.

Changes they are working toward include removal of the current band shell, construction of a new performance venue with amphitheater seating and reconfiguration of the park's topography.

They submitted 462 signatures to city clerk, Carol Ochs, on June 14 — 126 more signatures than were required.

Ochs authenticated each signature to make sure it came from a registered city voter. According to Ochs, 421 of the signatures checked out.

This means council has been forced to reconsider an ordinance amendment, called "Amendment 5" which it already denied.

On June 20, council members tabled the issue to their July 5 meeting. Results from this meeting were not available by press time.

If they approve it, the decision is eligible for a referendum to overturn that approval, which could appear the soonest on a February 2006 ballot.

Mayor Norman Carlson said this would cause major project delays.

If council sticks to its original decision and declines it, the amendment will be eligible for the Nov. 8 general election ballot.

According to Mayor Carlson, council will likely turn down the amendment again so it will go on the Nov. 8 election ballot.

"Most of council is in favor of letting the people decide," Mayor Carlson said. Charlevoix resident Jill Picha, said if it goes to a vote she will have an army of voters lined up ready to fight.

The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) unanimously offered its support of "Amendment 5" at its June 27 meeting.

Yaroeh, who is also a DDA member, said, "We are the ones holding the purse strings for this project. They (city council) need to know our level of support."

This initiative action is the result of a meeting that took place in March when council voted against initiation of "Amendments 4 and 5," as presented, to the DDA's development plan.

These amendments would have allowed the DDA to pay for 25 percent of the marina, for the total cost of East Park projects and extend the DDA's life.

While marina changes were approved and are expected to start this fall, plans for East Park were nixed.

Council decided to omit plans to build an ice rink in the park from "Amendment 4" and decided against passing "Amendment 5" in its entirety.

"Amendment 5" includes demolition of the current music pavilion in the fall of 2006 and construction of a new facility on the south end of the park. This part of the project would cost the DDA just under $1.5 million.

Council approved extension of the DDA from its expected expiration date of 2013, to 2026, in order to finish the marina project. And approved payment of 25 percent of the total cost of the $10.6 million marina project, including construction of a new harbor master's office. The authority's portion is $3.8 million. The Michigan Waterways Commission has committed to fund 75 percent, or $6.8 million, of the marina project.

The project will be done in phases with construction of the 67-slip dock system and sea wall coming first.

Debt from the marina renovation will cost between $242,000 and $310,000 a year for 15 to 20 years. City manager Mike Wiesner anticipates $100,000 a year being paid for from marina revenue and the rest coming from the DDA.

Charlevoix Public Schools make the grade

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Officials in the Charlevoix Public School District are pleased with the marks they received on their report cards from the State of Michigan.

Dr. John Sturock

Education Yearly Progress (AYP) accreditation system, gave Charlevoix Elementary School and Charlevoix High School a B, while Middle School received an A. In addition, all three schools met their Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) indicating the schools are not in the category of those in need of improvement as outlined by the state.

"We feel good about making AYP again," said Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock. "We're on track. Obviously we did a decent job and we're working to get better at that."

He added, "It's important to make progress in all places, it's a continuous process."

In 1990, officials with the State of Michigan passed a law mandating an accounting of all its schools and every year since there has been an annual report card given to each school. The report card details the grade received from the Education Yes! program and the AYP status under the No Child Left Behind Act.

Grades for the elementary and middle school remained constant from the 2003-2004 school year to the present while the high school fell from an A to a B.

According to Charlevoix High School Principal, Gary Grundman, Michigan schools must exceed the previous year's performance in order to maintain the higher grade.

"The design of this program makes it difficult to maintain the grade of A, even though our test scores and our student performance is better than most school districts," Grundman said. "The grade of B is not a true reflection on how well our kids did."

Grundman said in about two years students in Michigan schools will be taking the ACT or the SAT instead of the MEAP which is a good thing because the ACT and SAT are both standardized tests which are used to prepare students for college. Whereas the MEAP was designed solely as a way for schools to determine whether they were keeping in line with the state's curriculum requirements.

Grundman added that even though much of a school's grade is determined by the MEAP test, the state doesn't mandate students to take the MEAP.

"It's a voluntary test," Grundman said.

He added that, so far, they haven't had trouble getting students to take the test.

According to the Michigan Department of Education Web site, under the federal No Child Left Behind Act, adequate yearly progress is a way of measuring the skill level and accomplishments of schools and their students as it pertains to math and language arts in accordance with the results of state assessments.

Schools must also at the very least meet any other academic guidelines laid down by the state which may include graduation rate and participation in the MEAP test at the high school level.

According to the adequate yearly progress guidelines, if a school fails to attain adequate yearly progress two years in a row in English or math, the school will be identified as needing improvement and will not be removed from that status until it makes the mark for two years.

For grades, adequate yearly progress status and more information, visit the Michigan Department of Education Web site at: www.michigan.gov/mde.

Sun safety tips from the Skin Cancer Foundation

Seventy percent of surveyed Americans are planning to go to the beach this summer.

With the incidence of skin cancer continuing to rise and more than 90 percent of all skin cancers being caused by the sun, beachgoers need take sun protection more seriously than ever.

"The intensity of sun exposure for beach or pool goers is certainly elevated. Water, sand and concrete reflect as much as 90 percent of the sun's rays," said Perry Robins, MD, President of The Skin Cancer Foundation. "However, these activities can be enjoyed safely as long as people take some extra precautions."

The Skin Cancer Foundation recommends the following beach sun safety tips:

- Apply sunscreen first. Use a generous amount (about a golf ball size) of water resistant sunscreen with a minimum SPF 15 all over before putting on your bathing suit. Not only will it protect the skin under the bathing suit, but you are less likely to miss spots and end up with a line of sunburn along the edges of your bathing suit. Don't forget the tops of your feet. The sunscreen should be applied 20 minutes before heading outside and reapplied every 90 minutes or after swimming or sweating excessively.

- Cover up with clothing. If you are not swimming, then keep your head and skin covered with a tightly woven wide brimmed hat, UV protective sunglasses and a beach cover-up. A tightly woven linen or cotton cover-up with long sleeves and pants are best. Many beach shops carry options that will keep you protected and stylish. Brightly colored long sarongs are another good option for women.

- Sit under an umbrella. A beach umbrella will provide necessary shade. However, not all umbrellas are created equal. The most effective ones are made with a sun-protective fabric and will provide a minimum SPF 35. Look for brands, such as Rio, that carry The Skin Cancer Foundation Seal of Recommendation.

- Watch the time. We all know the sun is strongest between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Early birds should head to the beach by 8 or 9 a.m. and plan to leave by noon. Later risers should arrive after 3 p.m. and can stay as long as they like. If you do spend the entire day at the beach, then be sure to take period "shade breaks" when eating lunch or snacks.

Health agency approves new unified sanitary code

On June 10, the local board of health approved a unified sanitary code that reflects community concerns expressed during county-level public hearings held by the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency.

Before it becomes effective, county boards of commissioners from Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Osego counties must approve the revised code.

Gerald Chase, Health Officer, and Scott Kendzierski, Director of Environmental Health, will be presenting the revised sanitary code for vote at upcoming commissioners' meetings.

"We had a great turnout at the public hearings we held in all four counties," said Chase. "There were people who testified in support of the sanitary code revisions and others who expressed concerns. We've listened carefully to concerns and made changes to the revised sanitary code that addresses just about all of them. This is an example of the approval process working." Chase added that this new sanitary code is important because it will better protect safe drinking water supplies and reduce pollution from septic systems to groundwater, lakes, and streams.

The purpose of the public hearings was to solicit testimony regarding three proposed revisions to the existing code: point-of-sale septic system inspections, requirements for advanced waste treatment systems, and requirements for off-site treatment systems.

A committee of health department staff, county commissioners, members of environmental groups, septic waste haulers, and consultants developed these revisions over a year of study and discussion.

Point-of-sale septic system inspections:

Many Realtors expressed concerns about the proposed point-of-sale septic system inspection when it was presented at public hearings. "After hearing Realtor's concerns at the first hearing in Emmet County, we presented a different approach at subsequent county hearings," Chase said.

Instead of requiring a septic system inspection at the time properties are sold, as initially proposed, the revision provides for a computerized database maintained by the health department that monitors when septic systems are pumped and inspected. A point-of-sale inspection will not be required if the septic system has been inspected within the past three years.

"Most people don't think too much about what happens in their septic systems once they flush the toilet," Kendzierski said, "but septic system failure is expensive and adversely impacts the environment — and it's preventable by taking some precautions like regular pumping every three to five years."

Advanced treatment system requirements:

The advanced waste management treatment revision establishes performance and operating standards for alternative and off-site systems. A provision now addresses whether property is defined as wetland before approval for this type of septic system.

"With the new alternative treatment system provision, we will be able to approve septic systems in previously non-buildable sites, but they will require careful monitoring," Chase said.

This revision requires discharge performance criteria for the effluent, or the product of a septic system, as well as an operational permit from the health department, a maintenance contract with a firm that specializes in on-site wastewater management, and includes frequent evaluation of all system components and its operational status.

Off-site waste management:

There were no concerns regarding the off-site waste management revisions to the Sanitary Code. It is used for properties that are unsuitable for a septic system, allowing sewage to be conveyed for final disposal away from the parcel where waste is generated.

The revised Sanitary Code is available for review at www.nwhealth.org.

For more information about the septic system revision, call Kendzierski at (231) 547-7651.

City promotes Scott Hankins to deputy chief

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

After nearly 30 years serving the City of Charlevoix Police Department, Sergeant Dale Meredith will spend his last Venetian Festival on patrol.

Meredith officially retires Nov. 9, but his last day is Venetian Saturday, July 23.

According to Charlevoix City Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, Meredith has been an asset to both the community and the police department.

"He's been invaluable. Besides being a good police officer, his ability to manipulate technology for our benefit has been huge," Halverson said.

"He's excellent with computers. He's been our IT (technology) guy in the department since they invented computers," Halverson said. "Our computer capabilities for a department of this size are unmatched."

Some of the technological advancements Halverson credited Meredith with include changes in the department's overall computer network and computerization of the evidence room.

Halverson said Meredith's contributions to the local police force will be missed.

Including Halverson, the city police department includes seven, full-time and two, part-time officers. Halverson said he is currently interviewing candidates from across the country to fill Meredith's position.

According to Halverson, there have been a little over 30 applications filed for the slot.

The retirement of Meredith isn't the only major change around the police department.

Officer Scott Hankins, 15-year veteran of the Charlevoix Police Department will be taking on the newly created position of Deputy Chief of Police.

Hankins spent eight years in the Army as a Military Police Officer and a Military Investigator as well as a year on the East Jordan Police Department before working for Charlevoix.

Hankins, who grew up just north of Petoskey, has been married to Dawn for 17 years and has two children, Allison and Zachary.

Hankins is eager to begin his new position.

"I feel good about it. I'm looking forward to the challenges of administration in addition to patrolling," Hankins said.

Hankins will be supervising other officers, working in the evidence room and taking responsibility for the department in the chief's absence among other duties.

"This is a good opportunity for me to advance my career and learn other aspects of police work," he said.

He added, "I look forward to the opportunity to work with community members and to continue to provide the best level of police service we can."

According to Hankins, the police department will begin looking at applications to hire a new patrolman in the upcoming weeks.

"We don't have a person on board as of today but we are still conducting interviews," Halverson said. "We hope to have somebody hired for this position relatively soon."

Meredith, a shy person, declined to comment on his retirement.

Charlevoix resident invents sewage treatment system

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A Charlevoix man has developed a new process for treating sewage that will be tested in town.

According to John Campbell, operator of Big Fish Environmental L.L.C., Big Fish is a new method he helped create to deal with sewage which produces something cloudy water instead of thick, smelly sludge.

John Campbell

"We're just really excited about it because it's going to meet all state guidelines and be a year-round facility," he said. "The reason to put it at our front door is that it will be odor free and environmentally safe."

Campbell said, the Big Fish process is a biological way of treating sewage, which is a combination of waste from garbage disposals, bath and sink drains and toilets, without using chemicals.

Big Fish uses both oxygen and naturally occurring bacteria to treat the waste.

"Because of that, we do not generate Hydrogen-sulfide or methane," Campbell said.

The Big Fish pilot program will begin July 8 and Campbell hopes it will run for a little over three months, after which time Big Fish should be ready for commercial use.

"The pilot project is a test phase and our desire is to have all the bugs worked out by Oct. 1, 2005," Campbell said.

But, he added, "We'll always be tweaking it to make the system better."

The bacteria used will all be very similar from application to application, but outside temperature and the consistency of the sewage itself are factors which influence the system.

According to Campbell, two of the most positive features of the Big Fish system are its environmental and financial benefits not only to those who must deal with sewage, but for everyone concerned with the health of the environment.

"It's a very low use of energy," he said. "It will be less costly than traditional methods."

Campbell said applying the sewage or sludge to the ground has pretty much been the primary route of dealing with it in the past, but, because Big Fish is an enclosed system it is a much more attractive alternative than dumping foul smelling human waste directly on the topsoil.

When ready, Big Fish Environmental L.L.C. will serve Southern Emmet, Northern Antrim and Charlevoix counties.

As one of three parties involved with Big Fish, Site Planning Development is the operator. The other two parties involved in Big Fish's development are Interlakes Microtech L.L.C. and Biotech L.L.C. who act as both engineer and consultant on the project.

Not afraid of a little hard work, Harbor Industries Vice President of Operations, Tim Parker, washes assembly worker Vicki Calbfleisch's silver Jeep Thursday afternoon. Maynards offer new home theater options

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Residents and second home owners in and around Charlevoix are getting connected.

In January of 2004, Norwood Township residents Mark and Marilyn Maynard started Get Connected, LLC, a solutions company for home electronic systems.

"We've always wanted to own our own home automation business," Mark Maynard said.

Get Connected offers solutions for home theater, distributed audio systems (whole house music), structured wiring, automation, networking, central vacuum, acoustical room treatments and systems integration.

The company is a Dish Network retailer and offers a multitude of quality brands, including, Bose, Marantz, Jamo and Leviton.

Maynard said unlike some low voltage specialists, he and his staff, which includes two installers, CJ Winnell of Charlevoix and Jim Nowka of East Jordan, are also computer savvy.

In 1995, the Maynard family moved to Charlevoix from Washington Township, near Detroit. The couple has five children, one of which is still school aged, Emma, 14, is a student at Charlevoix's Northwest Academy.

Prior to starting the new business, Mark Maynard was plant manager at CPI for seven years. He said CPI is a Charlevoix machine shop for aluminum and aluminum castings.

After losing the plant manager's position, the Maynard family's soul search found them wanting to stay in Charlevoix but needing to make money. Hence the pursuit of their business ownership dream.

Now, after six months in business, the couple has brought consumer electronics possibilities to a host of commercial and residential outfits.

"I've learned a million things (since opening). From marketing to finance and customer relationships," Mark Maynard said.

The couple plans to expand services to include a showroom the-

Avoiding and treating swimmers' itch tips

While water quality is generally very good in northern Michigan lakes, the local health department wants to remind beach-goers to protect themselves against contracting swimmers' itch.

Swimmers' itch is caused by a naturally occurring parasite that is carried from lake to lake by droppings from ducks, geese, or other waterfowl. The organisms then move into snails where they mature, eventually coming out to re-infect more waterfowl.

When human swimmers leave the water, any parasites on their skin may burrow into the skin in an effort to survive.

The parasites die quickly, but they can trigger an irritating rash, said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Oshtemo counties.

"Your body reacts to the parasite by forming itchy, red bumps. Swimmers' itch isn't contagious, but it is very annoying," Meyerson said.

Meyerson offers the following tips to reduce the chances of developing swimmers' itch: briskly dry off with a towel as soon as you come out of the water, including the area under swimsuits, and shower immediately after swimming if facilities are available.

Not everyone who is exposed to the parasite will necessarily develop swimmers' itch.

"Repeated exposure increases sensitivity to the parasite and increases the likelihood of swimmers' itch," Meyerson said.

He said children are often infected with swimmers' itch since they typically wade in and out of the water and play on the beach as water evaporates on their skin.

Within minutes of swimming or wading in contaminated water, people may experience tingling, burning or itchy skin. Or, symptoms may take up to a week to appear. A small, reddened bump will develop at the entrance site of each parasite, causing periods of itching that can last for several days.

Using calamine lotion, an antihistamine such as Benadryl or corticosteroid cream, cool compresses, baths with baking soda or colloidal oatmeal, such as Aveeno, may control itching.

"The most important thing to do if you do contract swimmers' itch is to try not to scratch. Scratching may cause the rash to become infected. If itching is severe, your health care provider may prescribe lotion or creams to lessen your symptoms," Meyerson said.

Most cases of swimmers' itch do not require medical attention. Contact your health care provider when the diagnosis is unclear, complications such as infection are present, or the reaction is intolerable.

'Wild About Blooms' Garden Walk to take place July 13

Chairperson Mary Watson-Chavez invites you to the 2005 Charlevoix Area Garden Club's Seventh Annual Garden Walk, Wild About Blooms and Butterflies.

The event will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 13.

Watson-Chavez said, "We are very excited to present six fabulous private gardens for your pleasure and to share 11 "civic" gardens the Charlevoix Area Garden Club has developed and currently maintains. Our civic gardens are scattered about the community."

This year's gardens are a mix of three waterfront landscapes, two "city" gardens and a serene, golf course haven.

The Gennett Garden is a lovely example of how to dress a classic, in-town, Victorian home.

The Golden Garden is full of surprises, including rare views of Round Lake.

The Parker Garden on Lake Charlevoix is an outstanding example of an inland waterfront landscape with the environment in mind.

The Reznick Garden meanders through wetlands and soft dunes revealing fantastic views of Lake Michigan.

The Thomas Garden is rich with dappled shade and features an elegant, granite-surrounded, Lake Charlevoix cabana.

The Wingate Garden is sited in a lovely, secluded part of the Charlevoix Country Club and offers attractive treatments for shade and sun.

In conjunction with the Garden Walk, the Garden Club members are offering Lunch Amid Blooms & Butterflies at the Depot Heritage Garden from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Seating for this gourmet luncheon is by reservation only for $25 by calling Margaret Heath at (231) 547-1978.

Ticket booklets for the Garden Walk are available for $10 (advance sales) at the Bridge Street Book Shop and the Appletree in Charlevoix, or by calling Judy Corley at (231) 547-1945. On July 13, the day of the walk, tickets will be $12 at the entrance to any of the six gardens or at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, located off Bridge Street.

Truck donation

On Friday, June 17 former City of Charlevoix Firefighter Gene Bridge, and his wife Ginny, of Belton, Texas, donated their model firetruck collection to the local fire department. Bridge lived in Charlevoix with his parents from 1929 until 1944. He became a firefighter with the city when he was 14 years old. One of the models donated, a replica of the fire department's 1940 Chevrolet fire pumper, was new when Bridge became a member of the department. Bridge moved out of Charlevoix when he was 18, and retired as a Captain with the U.S. Merchant Marines. The donation was facilitated by Don Brown, Bridge's long time friend and a Charlevoix Resident. The models will be on display in the fire training room at the fire station, attached to city hall, once the renovation project is complete.

Operation petunia weeding

Kim Molter, a member of the Charlevoix Band Boosters was weeding petunias last week along Bridge Street. The boosters weed the petunias for the city to raise money for band causes. The organization makes $20 an hour per person for the service. They raise about $3,000 in two days of weeding. To volunteer in the weeding effort contact Sue Barta at (231) 547-4988.

Some messages have to be repeated a few times before they sink in.

Study after study has proven conclusively that the more people are exposed to your advertising, the more they will like your product, and buy your product. Furthermore, the value of repetition is cumulative, which means that far too often advertising is ended just as it is beginning to work.

I can help you plan an advertising campaign that will take advantage of the benefits of repetition.

Let me be your advantage specialist!

City hall renovation faces setbacks

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Renovations at Charlevoix's City Hall have been marked by a few snafus and a completion date that has been missed by over a year.

"It's been interesting," city hall project liaison, Jim Shull, said.

The $2.067 million renovation project which started in April of 2004 has included work by 26 subcontractors under the direction of general contractor, Petrie Construction, of East Jordan. It was slated for completion in June of 2004.

According to Shull, now, a year past its due date, the city hall project is about a month-and-a-half from completion.

Shull said the major setbacks have been installing stairways, a change order in the corridor project at the city fire hall and scheduling with Petrie Construction.

He said Al Petrie, the project foreman and co-owner of Petrie Construction, walked off the job last summer.

Since then, the project has been lead by two other men. The current foreman is president of Petrie Construction, Pat Weisler.

Shull said the time has cost the city his annual salary and the rest of the added expense has fallen on the shoulders of the contractors.

"I can't see how you can make money this far out," he said.

Current work is focused on putting the finishing touches on the police department office space, storage and garage and on the fire department's offices, living quarters and storage area.

The overall upgrade for the departments has included the addition of shower facilities, a fire department training room and a workout room.

The city police and fire departments were relocated to the old post office off Mason Street in October of 2004 to make way for renovations.

According to Charlevoix City Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, who worked in an office that was under construction before making the move, the post office isn't an inconvenience.

Officials discuss local Coast Guard presence

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

An admiral and a congressman both recently spoke in Charlevoix on topics including the ACACIA.

On Friday, July 8, while in the area to look at a water contamination issue at Bay Harbor, United States Congressman, Bart Stupak, stopped into Charlevoix for a town hall meeting. He touched on several topics including the United States Coast Guard Cutter ACACIA which is currently docked in Charlevoix and is scheduled to be decommissioned next year.

"I think he just wanted to hear from the residents, particularly on the ACACIA, but he also wanted to make sure he heard about any other local issues. I think this was a great opportunity for him to communicate with the people in Charlevoix on a local level," said Adrienne Marsh, Stupak's press secretary. "It's important for his constituents to let him know about the issues that concern them."

Bingo and sailing offered in Venetian Games line-up

Over a dozen activities, all part of the Venetian Games calendar of events, have been scheduled throughout the week of Venetian Festival.

Participants will have the opportunity to compete in these same events — you can dance, sail and even play bingo.

Charlevoix Senior Citizens will host Bingo in the Park, which will take place from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 20 in a huge tent in East Park overlooking Round Lake. Everyone is invited to attend, there will be a small charge for the bingo cards. The event is primarily designed for adults. Cash prizes and some merchant certificates will be awarded.

The committee is looking for a short list of "celebrity callers." Interested parties should contact the committee members Earl Munna and Liz Meadows at (231) 547-5361.

Stupak, Papp offer little reassurance to residents told Stupak that when city council voted to hire a lobbyist to help work toward securing a Coast Guard vessel here, the members didn't mean to diminish Stupak's efforts.

"By hiring Bob Davis we weren't trying to go around you, we were just trying every possible avenue," Carlson said.

Stupak acknowledged that Davis is knowledgeable when it comes to lobbying for military assets. And, he reiterated his desire to help Charlevoix in any way he can.

Carlson said he thought Stupak sounded genuine in his pledge to work with Charlevoix to help get a replacement ship for the ACACIA.

"If we get it to the Great Lakes I think Charlevoix has a very good case to make for having her come here for a port," Carlson said.

Stupak also spoke about his work to stop sewage blending as well as drilling for oil and natural gas in the Great Lakes.

Later that afternoon, Rear Admiral R.J. Papp Jr., Ninth District Commander of the United States Coast Guard, spoke in Charlevoix about the possibility of a replacement ship for the ACACIA.

Papp said the name MORRO BAY has been used by some as an example of a ship which may at some point be reassigned, but there has been no indication it will be released to the Great Lakes.

"I'd like to steer clear of saying MORRO BAY," he said. "I'm just saying a presence is needed."

Papp said, there is no timeline for a ship to be released to this region.

"It would be unfair for me to characterize any optimism on my part that we will get a ship on the Great Lakes," he said. "Even if I got another ship, there is no guarantee the ship would come to Charlevoix."

"My primary job as District Commander is to allocate assets on the Great Lakes," Papp said. "When I look at available assets I am confident we can carry out our missions."

Carlson said the meeting with Papp was meant to clarify the situation and make sure everyone is on the same page.

"I know he (Papp) requested that a cutter be sent to the Great Lakes and that decision is made by his boss," Carlson said. "If a cutter is secured to the Great Lakes then it will be his decision on where it goes."

He added, "Nothing has changed. We're going to use all the avenues we can."

City hall renovation over a year behind schedule

RENOVATION

"Even though we look forward to our new facility, it's an improvement from where we were," he said.

Changes in leadership have not been limited to Petrie Construction. At city council's meeting July 5, council voted to reassign a $45,000 sound and audio contract to Blue Water Technologies, of Southfield.

Sound Media of Whitmore Lake, who held the contract before, went bankrupt.

This change cost the city almost $6,000.

While time is of the essence with the project, the city is also beginning to run into some problems with the side of the project that has been completed.

Last month, water poured from the ceilings in the second level new City Council Chambers. City Manager Mike Wiesner's office and the surrounding area and in the planning and zoning office.

Shull said water problems stemmed from two problems.

One, was the air handler on the roof of the building was not water tight and rain blew up under it.

The other issue was the pumps in the heating and air conditioning units had been installed backward because the flow diagram given to the installer, Ballard's Plumbing, Heating, Air Conditioning and Refrigeration of Petoskey, was wrong.

Because of improper installation, condensation filled up in the pan and overflowed. Shull said stained ceiling tiles were the major damage from the water issue.

Ballard's will fix the problems free of charge.

OPINIONS

Enough talk about conflict of interest, it's time to act

EDITORIAL

We've heard enough talk about conflict of interest policy in the city of Charlevoix and want to see city council enact a policy after the July 18 public hearing.

In the interest of fairness, the fact that Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner handed out multiple contracts for up to $10,000 each to city council members in the past should be seen for what it is, an honest mistake — especially when you understand that he was acting in accordance with the city code.

However, now that it has been determined that doing so is in violation of state law, Charlevoix City Council needs to make things right.

In the 1960s, Michigan's Attorney General said local government purchases and contracts may not be shared with city officials without prior approval by city council.

This opinion was written after Charlevoix adopted its code as it pertains to this matter, but it is still the law.

However, according to state guidelines, cities with populations less than 25,000 may make exceptions to the rule.

Therein lies the quandary — not all city council members seem to agree on what that exception should be, if any. Some have said placing a restriction as low as $150 while others feel as much as $1,500 may be needed.

Far be it for us to say what that cap is.

City council, above all others, should know what will best serve this community. What we are saying is end the wishy-washy hand-wringing. The reason city council is the city council is to avoid this kind of indecisive tug-of-war politicking which typically bogs larger political bodies down.

Have some self-confidence, the taxpayers voted you in for a reason.

The amount upon which you decide, no matter how large or small will neither fix every problem nor open the floodgates of impropriety.

Resolve this matter immediately by initiating an ordinance with a reasonable cap on the dollar amount of contracts to be awarded and move on with other, more pressing business.

Remember, you're not going to make everyone happy, trust us on this one.

The longer they debate the issue, the more it will cost the city, not only in attorney's fees, but in possible fines if the State of Michigan were to realize what has occurred.

So far the city has spent $2,898 so city attorney Jim Young can mull over the details.

Before the city spends another substantial chunk of public funds hemming and hawing over this issue remember, $3,000 could pay for a fine community picnic to celebrate Charlevoix's 100th year as a city or it could even cover some of the minor repairs of which this debate is about.

Charlevoix's past as a tourist destination explored at exhibit

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Ahhh, summer in Charlevoix. The food is abundant and good, the weather is fine, there is a lot of water all around, and in general, the living is easy.

None of that is a surprise to any visitor. What may be less known is that this beautiful spot has been a summer haven for more than 4,000 years. An exhibit sponsored by the Charlevoix Historical Society at the Depot Museum, located at 307 Chicago Ave., tells some of the story of the prehistoric fair weather visitors to these shores. The exhibit is open from 1 to 4 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays through July and August.

In 1971 and 1972, after the Beach Hotel was razed and before LaCroft condominiums were constructed, a team of archeologists from Michigan State University, led by Dr. Charles E. Cleland, excavated a portion of an ancient village site at that location. Although less than 10 percent of the village site was completely excavated, more than 20,000 artifacts were retrieved and are now catalogued and stored at the Michigan State Museum. The study of those artifacts by Dr. Margaret Holman revealed a good bit about the summer activities of our earliest visitors.

We know this site was not occupied year-round, because we find food residues (bones, feathers, plant parts, etc.) that point to spring and summer. The site was occupied by families, because we find evidence of children, men and women. The site was occupied for enough years to leave layers of discarded stone chips from the making of spear and arrow points, hide scrapers, knives and other tools, along with hundreds of pottery shards. At various times from 4,000 to about 500 years ago, there may have been as many as 200 people occupying this summer village. On most weekends, there are probably not that many people in the condominiums at the same location. The exhibit is titled "Ancient Charlevoix: Life Before the Written Word." And consists of actual artifacts on loan from the Michigan State University Museum, some fine art work by Jan Glass, the curatorial expertise of Karen Lewis and the Direction of Dr. Cleland who is currently an area resident.

The evidence of thousands of years of human habitation right beneath our feet provides a fine balance for our usual primary concern with the here and now.

The excavation was sponsored in large part by the donations of the present people of Charlevoix, which should be a particular point of pride, since such local sponsorship is rare.

While enjoying your time in Charlevoix, don't miss the opportunity to see what summer was like here hundreds or thousands of years ago.

Letters to the editor

English as official language

Editor: There are times in a nation's history when the people must speak out against injustices or injuries to their nation and demand that their elected officials act for the good of the country.

This is one of those times. Ask you, "Should we amend the Constitution to establish English as our nation's official language?"

Government-mandated multilingualism is destroying our way of life in America by encouraging immigrants not to learn our language or assimilate into our society. There are 322 languages spoken in America today. And according to the 2000 U.S. Census, 21.3 million Americans speak limited English, an alarming 52 percent increase since 1990.

Former President Clinton's Executive Order 13166 is a massive multilingualism mandate requiring the use of Spanish and other foreign languages on election ballots, citizenship tests, Social Security and tax forms, and other programs and services.

For years, immigrants gladly learned English in order to assimilate into our society. This was the American "Melting Pot," which has held our nation together since our founding. But for over a decade, our government has caved in to powerful multilingual interests who believe we must cater to immigrants in their native language. And with immigration at record levels and no end in sight, the politicians appear to be more concerned about losing the so-called "politically correct" and "immigrant" votes than they are about preserving our national unity and American identity. The government is spending $3.2 billion annually in taxpayer money for official multilingualism.

gualism programs and services that discourage immigrants from learning English.

As a result, we see more isolated foreign-language communities that are not part of the "American family" or fully participating in the democratic process. And as history clearly shows, beginning with the Tower of Babel, that without a common language, our communities and our nation will be torn apart. As you may know, 82 percent of Americans believe English should be our nation's official language.

But all too many people are sitting on the sidelines. We as citizens have a stake in America's future — an obligation to leave a better America behind for our children. That is why I firmly believe, as do most Americans, that we need the "muscle," the "reach," and the "might" of a constitutional amendment to preserve English as the single, official language of America forevermore.

So I encourage you to write, call, fax, or e-mail your representative in Washington and let your voice be heard. You and I can only make a difference if we speak out. May God Bless America.

Craft show traffic terror

Editor: Craft show, great, traffic control, terrible.

Trying to make a left hand turn from Clinton to Bridge Street is like the highest obstacle course ever to encounter. People walking slowly against the light, drivers blocking the intersection because they drive through the yellow light creates havoc of which one ever witnessed.

This humble person was fourth in line to make a left hand turn, but had to wait for three light changes before the feat was accomplished.

It surely would have helped the traffic flow move more swiftly if there had been one of our town's finest policemen directing traffic.

Enough said.

Sheriff's office responds to break-in and accidents

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office had a busy three-day stretch responding to incidents that include a breaking and entering on Beaver Island and two accidents on the mainland, one of which involved children.

On Saturday, July 2 there was a one vehicle personal injury accident on Maple Grove and Church roads in Hayes Township.

A 1997 Ford F-250 was being driven by Valerie Mae Reiter, 22, of Charlevoix, her passengers were Jessica Lynn Skop, 21, of Charlevoix, and James Hill, 25.

Reiter lost control after going through a stop sign striking a large tree. The vehicle was damaged severely with Reiter and Skope being transported by personal vehicle to Charlevoix Area Hospital. Hill left the area and did not seek treatment. The driver was issued citations for careless driving and driving while her drivers license had expired.

The Sheriff's office is also investigating a crash between two all terrain vehicles near a residence on Mountain Road in Eveline Township.

The crash took place at approximately 9:30 a.m. Sunday, July 3.

Thomas G. McKenna, 8, of Howell was operating a 70cc Eaton all terrain vehicle when he collided with a 80cc Suzuki all terrain vehicle driven by Zach Duffy, 12, of Caseville. McKenna was transported by private vehicle to Charlevoix Area Hospital for treatment of his injuries, which included a fractured femur. He was subsequently transferred to Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Michigan law prohibits a person less than 10 years of age from operating a 4-wheel all terrain vehicle.

On July 5, Frederick Alexander Wiser Jr. was found in the kitchen of the Shamrock Bar on Beaver Island.

Wiser was caught by bartenders John Matela and Jeremy Morgan.

Wiser was held by Matela, Morgan and bar owner Eric Hodgson until the arrival of Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office Deputy Campbell.

The incident occurred at approximately 3:15 a.m. and Wiser was taken into custody at 3:28 a.m.

CHAIR-ity auction will feature doll house

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

A recent undertaking of a Charlevoix summer resident validates the importance of an artist's attention to detail.

Anne Roby, 47, donated her Four Seasons Fairy Cottage — a handmade, two-story doll house nearly 4 feet high — to the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix's 3rd Annual Take A Seat CHAIR-ity Auction.

Three Toadstool Lane, which took about two years to complete, features the kind of intricate detail only achieved with patience and creative energy: beds are made of twigs and fashioned with hand-sewn comforters; armchairs, tabletops and chairs are carefully painted; hand-drawn pictures are fastened in frames; dishes are stored in cupboards; books with delicately printed titles are shelved; shell fixtures accentuate the bathroom; clothing hangs on pin-sized hangers; tiny letters are stacked in the mailbox; floorboards are laid with stir straws; and an Earl Young-inspired chimney has even been erected.

Roby trawled for the doll house's decorations in flea markets, craft and antique stores, and consignment shops. Many accessories, however, were at Roby's immediate disposal — leftover scraps from previous creations, including squares of cloth, served multiple purposes.

"I just enjoy doing it, especially if it's for a good cause," said Roby, who earned a bachelor's degree in art history from the University of Madrid in Spain. "I have patience for these little details."

The four seasons are expressed on the doll house's three exterior walls with subtle landscapes painted by Roby. Inside the intricate structure sits a mother fairy and her young daughter, wings fastened to the backs of both.

"My brother-in-law found it (the doll house) at a garage sale," said Roby, whose primary residence is in Bloomfield Hills with her husband, Steven, an immigration lawyer. "It was in pretty bad shape. I was so happy when he gave it to me."

Roby's original intention was to donate the finished piece to charity. Her Auld Street neighbor, Joyce Herbert, publicity chairwoman for the CHAIR-ity Auction, made that goal easily attainable.

"I would like to prepare people that this (doll house) will be available," said Herbert, adding that the church's event has never featured an item quite so distinct.

Roby is the mother of three artists — Natalie, Christopher and Anthony. She was born in Manila, Philippines, and moved to Spain with her family at age 11. She and her husband, who have been married for almost 24 years, met in The Netherlands while he was studying law abroad and she was traveling.

When Roby isn't working as a legal assistant with her husband's firm, Roby Law Associates, she may be found working on watercolor or oil paintings, or collecting artifacts for use in her third doll house endeavor — a beachfront property

Rev. James Gunn set to move to Massachusetts

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

The Rev. E. James Gunn presided over his final Sunday service at Charlevoix's Christ Episcopal Church on July 10.

Rev. James Gunn

Gunn, 62, and his wife of 41 years, Jan, have decided to move to Fitchburg, Mass. — located 50 miles west of Boston and about 15 miles south of New Hampshire

— where their son, Joel, currently lives. "The area puts us much closer to family than we are here," said Gunn, a resident of Bay Shore. "The closest child to us is 700 miles away."

Gunn is the father of four children — Lori, Randy, Joel and Jon — and eight grandchildren.

His long-term replacement has yet to be decided by the church, said Gunn, who celebrated the twenty-sixth anniversary of his ordination into the priesthood last December.

An official at Christ Episcopal Church since November 1999, Gunn negated any rumor that he is officially retiring. Rather, his age has allowed him the privilege to begin drawing on a pension. Secondly, he and his wife plan to initiate a healing ministry in Fitchburg — which is one of their main focal points in Charlevoix.

"August 1999 was the first time we set foot in Michigan," he said. "It was beautiful. Then we realized the meaning of lake-effect snow."

During Gunn's time at Christ Episcopal Church, an association was formed between the parish and the Tree of Life Healing Prayer Ministry in Traverse City. He also conducted Praise and Prayer services on infrequent Sunday afternoons at the church for the past seven months.

"An important part of Gunn's ministry was the development and growth in the healing ministry," said Dorothy Miller, senior warden of the vestry at Christ Episcopal Church. "The two ministries — healing and prayer — are living legends. We will continue to be a vital part of them."

In the Charlevoix area, Gunn served as a member of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association; leader of community worship services; chaplain of the local American Legion chapter; member of the PA226 Committee, which oversees sex education curriculum for the Charlevoix School District; and facilitator of weekly communion services at Boulder Park Terrace Nursing and Rehabilitation Center.

Also in the parish, Gunn conducted annual "bible challenges" — a public invitation to read the entire sacred text with him in one year's time.

"He preached a heightened emphasis on the importance of the holy scripture," said Miller, who has been a member of the parish for 35 years. She added that Gunn originated the Order of St. Luke — a healing group.

Gunn spent two years on the board of directors for Charlevoix and Emmet counties' Habitat for Humanity, during which time he assisted in the construction of homes in East Jordan and Petoskey.

A native of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Gunn earned a Bachelor of Science from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, and a Master of Divinity from the Vancouver School of Theology in Vancouver, British Columbia.

He will lead his final weekday service at Christ Episcopal Church today at 12:15 p.m. He and his wife have planned to begin their journey east on July 15.

"It's a new adventure," Gunn said of his decision to leave Charlevoix. "I will miss the many faces of Lake Michigan."

Miller said that while the church seeks a replacement for Gunn, the Holy Eucharist will be celebrated by visiting priests. During the summer, the church will conduct one service at 9 a.m. Sundays at Christ Episcopal Church located at the corner of Clinton and State streets.

City council approves two fireworks permits for Venetian

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Hope is still alive for two nights of Venetian Festival fireworks.

At the City Council meeting July 5, council approved a permit for two fireworks displays. One for Friday night, July 22 over Lake Charlevoix, and stadium fireworks for July 23, over Round Lake.

After reviewing the permit request and display details, City of Charlevoix Fire Chief, Paul Ivan, told council, "Ours are about as safe as I've ever seen."

He said the state mandated setback for the displays is exceeded during both shows.

At the Friday night show over Lake Charlevoix, master pyrotechnicians Frank Loffredo, Jr. and Ron Greco, along with their assistant, Larry Trott, may fire off 875 different fireworks ranging in size from 4 inches to a foot.

The next night, the three will put on a stadium show over Round Lake. At this show, onlookers will enjoy just over 500 different fireworks.

This permit request perked the ears of citizens who thought all hope was lost for the renowned Friday night show.

In the fall, Dan Barron, President of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., announced that the Friday night show was off due to a lack of funding.

The show generally costs about $80,000. But the Festival board is $20,000 in debt to Colonial Fireworks Co. so the grand total this year is $100,000.

Since the announcement, the board has aggressively pursued ways to reinstate the show including planning fund-raisers like the upcoming Rayder Rumble II and the Country Kick-off at Castle Farms.

Barron said business and community donors have also come out of the woodwork to show their support for the big fireworks show.

"At this point it's encouraging, many are doubling the amount they've donated in the past," he said. "But the show is still contingent upon having sufficient revenue."

The board will make its decision about the show by July 14.

Boyne City-Charlevoix Road work pushed back to mid-September

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Proposed construction on Boyne City Road in Charlevoix Township scheduled for July was postponed recently for considerations of public safety and the local economy.

A letter written by Charlevoix Township Board Supervisor, H.

Dale Glass, presented at the July 11 Charlevoix Township Board meeting, revealed the change in the roadwork schedule.

Construction will not begin on the portion of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road near U.S. 31 until the second week in September, Glass said in the letter.

He added, there has been no resolution on the proposed emergency access through the Bergmann property as of yet.

The section of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road which intersects with U.S. 31 will have improved drainage, new tile and ditch work and it will be wider with dedicated left turn lanes to Charlevoix and a right turn lane toward Petoskey to help the flow of traffic.

Street Legends car show at Castle this weekend

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The number 13 may carry a negative reputation, but for owners and lovers of classic cars, the 13th Annual Street Legends Cruise Night and Car Show, it means another year of cars, cruising and fun.

"The draw will be the old cars, the Castle, good food, probably oldies playing over the PA, games, raffles — this is for all ages," said Tom Eggers, president of the Street Legends Classic Car Club of Charlevoix.

At 4:30 p.m. on July 16 in the Kmart parking lot, hundreds of cars will line up for the annual car cruise around Lake Charlevoix.

"For 13 years we've been putting on a car show and each year it seems to get a little better and a little bigger," Tom Eggers said. "Anybody can cruise on cruise night," he said. "If they want to get into their daily driver and drive around the lake they are welcome."

Many different makes and models of cars will end their cruise around the lake by parking in East Park to enjoy the music of Dominic and The Breakers from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Eggers said, aside from the music in East Park, there will be various raffles and a trophy will be given for the best car of cruise night.

Following Saturday night's car cruise is the annual car show held on Sunday.

According to Eggers, the club used to host the car show at Shanahan field, but will use the facilities and show grounds for the second year in a row at Castle Farms.

"I just can't say enough good things about the folks at the Castle," he said.

Eggers added, "The best part about being at the castle is the facilities and the whole atmosphere."

According to Eggers, the Castle and the car show are a perfect match because they are both about restoring things back to their original beauty.

The car show lasts from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. with registration for participants from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. Preregistration can be completed anytime before Sunday by filling out the form on the flyer or calling Eggers at (231) 547-1327.

Entry fee is $12 for pre-registration and $15 at the door.

Eggers said the grand prize drawing will be held after the awards are given out.

"We are offering up a $1,000 grand prize, which is double last year," Eggers said. "All proceeds go to charities picked by our car club."

Some of the charities benefiting from the car show are the Charlevoix Historical Society and the Charlevoix High School Scholarship Fund, Benevolence Fund, Hospice of Northwest Michigan and the Humane Society.

Also on Sunday there will be several raffles including the Woodies Car Race 50/50 raffle and the Camp Quality Auction with proceeds to benefit Camp Quality.

The car club has donated $46,000 to the community over the last 12 years.

The Beaver Island theater group presents play about King Strang

To some, Jesse James Strang was a tyrant, to others a saint.

Whatever history might say about the self-proclaimed "King" Strang, who ruled during the Mormon era on Beaver Island, the man himself is a fascinating character — as were his five Mormon wives.

July 12 is the debut of an original play about Strang and his wives, written by Anne-Marie Oomen, Interlochen's Creative Writing Chair, and produced by Beaver Island's professional acting company, Emerald Isle Repertory Theatre, in association with the Island's Historical Society.

Director Brian Pöhrer describes the play, "Wives of an American King," as, "less a historical drama and more a dynamic journey into the manipulation, blind faith, and sexual proclivities these women endured as they one by one succumbed to the many charms and betrayals of their beloved husband."

Tickets for the show are $15 for adults and $9 with a student ID from July 12-July 20. After that prices are $20 for adults and $12 for students. "Wives" is being performed at Holy Cross Hall, with an 8 p.m. curtain.

The show will run through Sept. 2. Call (231) 448-3188 for reservations.

Two other shows are also being performed by the theater group during their inaugural season. "I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change," is currently the longest running off-Broadway show. Song and dance routines explore the sometimes poignant, sometimes hilarious world of romance and relationships between the sexes.

The show is on now and will run through Sept. 28. This show contains some adult language and situations.

On Aug. 19, "Steel Magnolias" will debut, with yet another professional actress, Mandy Lane, joining the resident acting company. The play, which involves the bonds of friendship between six southern women, will run through Sept. 18.

For specific show dates and times, visit the theater group's Web site at www.eittheatre.org.

Charlevoix man killed in car accident

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

On Friday afternoon Kevin Swadling's signature charcoal gray pickup truck was parked in front of the grounds at Greensky Hill United Methodist Church.

Kevin Swadling

off Burgess Road in Charlevoix's Hayes Township, was killed in a single motor vehicle traffic crash at 12:42 a.m. July 4, just two weeks before his birthday.

He was driving a 1995 Dodge Viper convertible. The crash occurred on Resort Pike Road near Sterzik Road in Petoskey's Resort Township.

According to Emmet County Sheriff, Pete Wallin, the cause of the accident is unknown and an investigation is underway.

His front seat passenger, Ronald Earl Cansky, Jr., 36, of Petoskey, was injured and transported to Northern Michigan Hospital where he was treated and released.

Both men were wearing seat belts.

According to his brother-in-law, Rick Boda, who spoke at the July 8 memorial service for Swadling at Greensky Hill, Swadling's ultimate fate was his greatest fear — dying before having an opportunity to watch his children grow up.

Swadling was the proud father of Nicole, 7, Casey, 9, and Jayme, 16.

His wife, Renee Swadling, who he married June 10, 2000, described him as a loving father, a devoted husband and a steadfast friend.

His neighbor, Sue Chapman said, "I keep thinking I need to call Kevin. He was a good neighbor — he always made himself available to help out."

When Kevin wasn't working or lending a friend a hand, you could find him outside hunting everything from mushrooms to fish to deer.

According to Boda, it wasn't the thrill of the hunt he was after, it was the rush he got in connecting with nature.

His connection with wildlife was evidenced by his relationship with his herd of 10 horses. He could often be seen in a long, weathered leather trench coat and matching cowboy hat in a rolling field near his home, training and working with adult horses as well as colts.

said Renee thought of him as a horse whisperer.

Renee said the strength of his spirit has helped her in his death.

"I can feel him with me," she said.

A group of over 100 people gathered at the memorial service to commemorate his strength of character and to say good-bye to him. A trumpeter played taps to close the ceremony in the exact same spot at Greensky where Kevin and Renee spoke their marriage vows five years ago.

A benefit dinner for the Swadling family will take place Friday, Aug. 5, at the Emmet County Fairgrounds-Community Center. Tickets for this will be available at the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce.

Interlochen to expand radio service to Charlevoix

There will soon be more music in the air of northern Michigan, when Interlochen Center for the Arts expands its popular classical music radio service to counties including Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, Osego and Mackinac.

Interlochen Public Radio's classical music station expects to begin broadcasting on 88.5 FM in Mackinaw City by mid-July.

The frequency, formerly WDQV, will become WIAB, adding a third IPR Music Radio frequency for listeners in northern Michigan. IPR Music Radio also broadcasts at 88.7 and 100.9 FM.

"At a time when other classical music stations are cutting back or closing, we are thrilled to offer this excellent music to more listeners than ever before," said Tom Paulson, Interlochen's vice president for media.

The Federal Communications Commission recently approved the transfer of the license to Interlochen. Service will begin as soon as technical modifications are complete, with a target of mid-July.

IPR Music Radio's addition of 88.5 FM in Mackinaw City strengthens the reach of this popular service to the region including Charlevoix, Petoskey, Gaylord, Cheboygan, and St. Ignace — areas that before were only marginally reached by Interlochen Public Radio.

IPR Music Radio is one of two radio services provided by Interlochen Public Radio, connecting northern Michigan with arts, news and culture on a global scale.

IPR also gives significant focus to local and regional news, information and artists, providing a trusted context for community discussion and showcasing the vitality and diversity of northern Michigan.

Among the programs that soon will be available to more listeners in Northern Michigan are opera, jazz piano, orchestra concerts and symphonies.

A complete program schedule can be found online at www.interlochen.org/ipr.

IPR Music Radio features local hosts for classical music from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, with newscasts from National Public Radio each half hour from 6 to 8:30 a.m. and 4 to 5:30 p.m., as well as every two hours throughout the day and evening.

Charlevoix meter officer discovers stolen car

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A Charlevoix meter officer found a stolen vehicle worth about $20,000.

On Thursday, June 16, summer meter officer Jessica Halverson, 23, of Charlevoix, stumbled on a Ford pickup truck, stolen from the William's Chevrolet car lot in Traverse City. The vehicle was parked in the recreational vehicle (RV) parking lot at the Charlevoix Airport.

According to Halverson, when writing a ticket, she found the permit on the newer, tan colored truck expired on June 14, two days before she discovered it in the overflow parking lot at the airport.

"There was no plate on it and right there I figured they were trying to avoid dealing with the airport or really drawing the attention of the police," Halverson said.

It's not uncommon for the police to find abandoned vehicles in the airport parking lot, but Halverson said, they aren't usually in such good shape.

Being in an area generally reserved for larger vehicles or more commonly used when the other lots are full was also a sign something wasn't right.

"It didn't have a trailer and there was plenty of parking in front," she said.

"My first reaction was to do what I was told to do," Halverson said. "If there's no plate we run the VIN (Vehicle identification number located on each vehicle)."

Halverson took the identification number and a description of the auto to Charlevoix City Police Office Manager, Janine Warner, who entered the numbers into the Law Enforcement Information Network or L.E.I.N. and found the previous owner.

According to Warner, she notified the listed owner that his vehicle was to be impounded. The owner informed her that he had traded the vehicle for another at William's Chevrolet in Traverse City.

According to Jessica, she had no idea she'd found a stolen vehicle until after it was returned.

"I came back to the office the next week and Janine told me of the situation with the vehicle," she said.

Because traffic tickets tend to be an unpopular item to receive, Jessica said her job can be quite difficult at times.

"People don't generally appreciate the meter officer, so it's very nice to have something good come out of what I do everyday."

According to her father, City of Charlevoix Chief of Police, Dennis Halverson, upon investigation it was determined that the people at William's didn't even know the truck had been stolen.

"We recovered it before they even knew it was gone, which is pretty good police work," Dennis said.

Dennis said the truck couldn't have been at the airport very long before it was spotted.

"We routinely patrol that (RV lot) so it was in there less than a week," he said.

Radyr Rumble II brings rivals to the court

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Feuds may come and go but the rivalry between the Petoskey Northmen and Charlevoix Rayders is one that will not soon be forgotten.

This year's Radyr Rumble II will showcase basketball players who attended Charlevoix and Petoskey schools from 1997 to present.

Radyr Rumble II, between the Petoskey Northmen and the Charlevoix Rayders is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Monday July 18 in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

"You are going to see some of the premier talent in northern Michigan playing against each other, really for the first time," said Radyr Rumble II Chairman and dedicated Charlevoix basketball fan, Mark Greyerbiel.

As some northern Michigan residents prepare themselves for the game, they can look forward to rosters which include college record holders as well as some players who spent time in the pros.

According to Greyerbiel, both Petoskey and Charlevoix teams have been good overall and have very competitive programs.

"It seems to me in the last six years that Charlevoix has kept up with Petoskey and Petoskey has had some great teams," he said.

He added that at the "Rumble" Petoskey's outside game is going to be tough to defend.

"If we can defend that, our game is going to be strong. And, if there are rebounds to be made, we're going to get them," he said.

Who is the best?

A question often asked and a question which may be answered at this year's Radyr Rumble II.

Greyerbiel said his amateur prognostication of the game is that Charlevoix will come out victorious.

According to David Meyer, a Petoskey resident and diehard Northmen fan, he isn't so sure this will be a cinch for Charlevoix.

"I don't know that there is any question Petoskey will beat Charlevoix," he said.

According to Meyer, the rivalry between Charlevoix and Petoskey sports teams has gone on forever.

"I'm 52 years old and when I graduated high school in the 1970s it (the rivalry) was a big event, who knows how far back it goes," he said.

He added, "To me it's not a matter of who wins or who loses, I think it will just be a fun event. And since we're sister communities this game will draw a big crowd."

Proceeds from the rumble go to help offset costs of the Charlevoix Venetian Festival.

Northwestern Bank employee Robin Hines was opening the day's mailed-in payments. She discovered that an out-of-town customer had inadvertently sent us a loan payment intended for another bank, and it was due that same day.

Robin knew that mailing the payment back to her customer would guarantee the payment would be late and incur a fee. So she hopped into her car and hand-delivered the payment to the other bank... one of our competitors.

Police crack-down on safety belt law violators

Law enforcement officers in northern Michigan issued nearly 1,900 safety belt citations during the recent two-week Buckle Up or Pay Up, Click It or Ticket enforcement period.

Agencies across Michigan reported issuing fewer safety belt citations than in the May 2004 mobilization but cited more motorists for other traffic violations.

Statewide, safety belt citations fell by more than 3,000, from 34,812 in May 2004 to 31,665 in May 2005.

Officers wrote 13,581 of these citations in grant-funded safety belt enforcement zones. The Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning administered federal traffic safety funds to agencies in 53 counties for the enforcement activity.

As part of the effort to make this the safest summer on record, officers set up safety belt enforcement zones between May 23 and June 5 to cite motorists who

In northern Michigan, 58 agencies in Alcona, Alpena, Benzie, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Chippewa, Clare, Crawford, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Luce, Mackinac, Manistee, Mason, Mecosta, Oshtemo, Otsego, Roscommon and Wexford counties reported their statistics to the office of highway safety.

"This safety belt enforcement initiative is a great start to what we hope will be Michigan's safest summer," said Michael L. Prince, office of highway safety division director. "By issuing citations, officers sent the message that safety belts are important — they save lives."

Officers in northern Michigan found more than safety belt offenders while conducting zones. They arrested 152 motorists for drunk driving, 68 individuals on other felony charges and 444 for misdemeanors. In addition, 2,603 speeding citations were issued.

The office of highway safety is providing federal funds for safety belt and drunk driving enforcement throughout the summer.

The goal is to reduce traffic fatalities by 13, an average of one person a week.

Another sheep shearing season comes and goes

Editor's note: This story is the first in a monthly series highlighting successful farm operations in Charlevoix. Anne Kelly is the contributing writer who will explore these Charlevoix farms.

By ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

Around each bend in Charlevoix's country roads lies history and rural industry.

Tucked away in Marion Township is the Matchett farm where an industrious family recently prepared to shear their herd of sheep.

Tim Matchett and his family live on Barnard Road, just seven miles south of downtown Charlevoix. At a time when the agricultural society is almost an endangered species, Tim and Linda, are third generation farmers dedicated to farm work and family life.

Their four children, share their industry and enthusiasm. Isaac, 17, Mia, 16, Noah, 12 and Lilly Ann, 9, are all active participants and high achievers in school, who take pride in the family's sheep farm.

They all pitch in, helping with the many chores involved with raising lambs. Meat is the main reason for their endeavors. The wool is a by-product, shorn in late spring or early summer. This year, shearing took place in late June.

The whole family is immersed in the business which has been the Matchett mainstay for the past 60 years. Originally relegated for dairy, turkeys and veal calves, the Matchett farm has had sheep since 1945. Linda and Tim and the family spend the winter months, mending fences, doing farm repairs and maintenance, monitoring the flock, and feeding them the hay they have spent the summer gathering.

In the summer, they do "night penning" near the barn to protect the sheep from predators. The flock has to be rounded up each evening, so Linda, more often than not aided by a good friend from church, the children and the family dog, Moses, help with this nightly ritual. They often employ a four wheeler to keep tabs on their 285 acres, to check and repair the pasture fences, and get to sheep that may be in need of help.

According to Tim, some years ago, "lambling" (birthing) was done in March, when lamb was needed for market earlier in the summer months. Because of the changing market, weather and cost of labor, lambling is now a June event. June is a much more conducive month for lambling than March in northern Michigan. In March, newly horn lambs would have to be fed and protected from the early spring elements. By June, the burden of care required is relieved by the warm weather and the mothers are able to graze. A good percentage of newborns in a season would be 170 to 185 percent.

"In other words, if you had 100 ewes," Tim explained, "you would hope for 170-185 lambs."

The sheep rotate to different pastures during the summer. By fall, they move to a field closer to the barn and hay for easy winter access. By fall, the lambs need to be fed grain until they're ready to go to market.

"In January, the rams are sent in to the remaining ewes and by June, we have lambs again," Tim said.

Shearing takes place anywhere from late May until mid-June and is a one or two day operation for the Matchetts.

"Last year we sheared about 290," Tim said.

He explained that the sheep have to be sheared to keep them clean and healthy and make them more comfortable in hot weather. The wool gathered during the shearing is hagged, up to 175 pounds to a bag. About 7 pounds of wool comes off an adult or mature sheep. The shearer the Matchett's employ is a wool broker. The wool eventually gets to the Mid-States Wool Growers in Ohio where it is graded and sold.

"Last year we gathered 1,268 pounds of wool," Tim recalled. "Nine hags at about 140 pounds each."

Linda and Tim agree that the money earned from the wool doesn't quite cover the cost of the shearing. But then, the Matchett's breed their sheep for quality meat traits and when their lambs reach market weight of 120 to 140 pounds, which is usually between six and 12 months of age, they're ready for market. Their pasture raised, high quality, natural lamb is channeled to individual buyers, local grocers, or goes to live auction. They retain about 35 ewe lambs for the following year.

When shearing day finally arrives, the Matchett's are ready. To prepare for the shearer, Tim engineers the penning, makes sure the sheep are dry for the shearers, since wet wool will clog the shears and mold in the bag, and helps the shearers bring in the trailer, which will be the site of operations.

"You can usually locate a good shearer by word of mouth or by checking with the MSU Extension Service," Tim explained.

Jim Bristol of West Branch, Doug Hoolsema, from Melvin and Harold Brunner of Traverse City all have been shearing for several seasons at the Matchett farm. Shearers must be strong and humane and know what they're doing in order to pull off a smooth operation. According to Tim, these men fit the bill.

The shearing itself is a fascinating orchestration of precision. The steady stream of lambs from feeding pen to chute to holding pen depends on the efforts of all the workers and members of the family. The shearers sometimes use harnesses attached to the ceiling of the trailer for support, and wear felt (brushed wool) moccasins to guard against slippage in the trailer.

As the lambs are sent down the chute, the shearers grab them individually, flip them over and work the wool off from the belly up with electric shears. The sheep are then scooped up and sent on their way to the next station. Here, in a holding pen, Linda treats them for external parasites such as lice or ticks and sprays an antiseptic onto any nicks that have occurred.

Meanwhile inside the trailer, Noali and Mia help gather the sheared wool off the floor and stuff it into a machine that feeds into an elongated plastic bag. There's a lot of bleating and organized confusion among the flock, but the operation has been carefully planned and runs like clockwork.

Isaac helps the hired shearers and reports getting quite a workout. He tried his hand at shearing for the first time two years ago, and last year sheared about 120 sheep.

"I did some of the neighbors' sheep too so I could get more practice," he said. "It kills your lower back. You're pretty much done at the end of the day."

Isaac said he isn't sure if he's ready for the Golden Shears 2005, the World's Premier Shearing and Wool Handling Championships in New Zealand, but it's a start.

By the end of the day, everyone is exhausted, but feels accomplished and has worked up a big appetite. This is where Linda and Mia take over.

"Actually, a big part of what I do is feeding the crew. That's part of the sheep-shearing tradition — serving up meat and potatoes or soup and sandwiches that will stick to their ribs," she said.

When asked if she got more than she bargained for when she married Tim and committed to sheep farming, she laughingly replied that she came from a dairy farm where she was used to putting in at least seven hours a day of hard work.

"I was the hired help at the dairy, so when I came here I graduated to 'kitchen maid,'" she said.

Apparently that was a good deal, because Linda said she and her family are ostensibly happy and doing well.

Venetian carnival to expand along Mason Street

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

The carnival, one of Venetian Festival's largest sources of funding and fun, will expand this year.

At the July 6 meeting, Charlevoix City Council approved a $15,000 contract with the Venetian Festival Board of Directors to defray the expense of activities and events and approved expansion of the festival carnival.

The carnival has typically extended through the parking lots behind the Bridge Street buildings between Mason and Clinton streets and into half of Mason Street.

Council approved extension of the carnival along the entire Mason Street block that runs from Bridge Street to State Street.

The Beacon Center private condominium owners lot located next to Harbor Health and Fitness and the SBA Americredit building's driveway will both remain accessible.

"It's an inconvenience. However, it's the biggest attraction of Venetian for kids from 3 to 13. It's a matter of people making accommodations and accepting inconveniences for the benefit of the kids," Venetian Festival Board President, Dan Barron, said.

Barron estimates the extension allowing for about five more rides and bringing in between $5,000 to $10,000 more for the festival.

While the festival board will benefit and carnival loving kids will have more rides available, Mason Street beauty shop owner, Birdie Whitley, said her older customers will suffer.

"There is not one place for an old lady over 80 to park to even get near me," she said.

Whitley urged council to move the carnival out of town.

Barron agreed to find designated parking for Whitley's customers.

Rides Venetian goers can look for at the carnival include the Zipper, bumper cars, Tilt-a-Whirl, Cliff Hanger, High Flyer, Sea Ray and "kiddie rides."

Rides, games and treats will open at 5 p.m. to close Wednesday, July 20.

Thursday, July 21 is Kids Day. Rides will open at 2 p.m. and stay open until close. Arm band cost is $15. The bands are valid all day Thursday and from 1 to 6 p.m. Friday.

The carnival will be open from 1 p.m. to close Friday, July 22 and from 11 a.m. to close, Saturday, July 23.

Gopeds are not allowed on sidewalks

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Some of them may look like children's toys, but mopeds, gopeds, pocket rockets and electric scooters are not allowed on sidewalks.

According to Charlevoix Deputy Chief of Police, Scott Hankins, anyone improperly operating these vehicles can and will be ticketed just like any other driver.

"Anything that is motor driven, either electric or gasoline, is considered a motor vehicle under state law. That means that they are not allowed on sidewalks," Hankins said.

He added, "If they are used in the streets they need all the proper signals, lights, horns and proper vehicle registration. In addition the operator of those motor vehicles needs to be properly licensed."

Operators of these vehicles must be at least 15 to attain a moped license.

"We've had one personal injury accident involving an electric scooter on a sidewalk that was illegally operating," Hankins said.

According to Hankins, the electric scooters and gopeds are relatively new to the issue of safety on the sidewalks involving them is a relatively new one.

"Persons interested in learning more about the legal definition and the law (or) if anybody has any questions feel free to contact the Charlevoix Police Department, we'll be happy to answer those questions," he added.

In addition to these friendly reminders, Hankins said, there are a couple new city ordinances of which both citizens and visitors should be mindful.

One prohibits dogs on the grassy portion of East Park from Memorial Day to Labor Day and during Apple Festival. Hankins said boaters are encouraged to take their dog, on a leash, by sidewalk to the area near the Chamber of Commerce or Veterans Park. The other ordinance prohibits the possession of any dangerous animal in any city park unless permission has been granted by the city manager to possess that animal in a prohibited area.

For more information on any of these prohibitions and laws, call the Charlevoix Police Department at (231) 547-3258.

The above may look like a child's toy, but this motorized, gasoline powered goped and the people who ride them fall under many of the same regulations as cars, trucks and motorcycles including the need for brake and turn signals as well as an operators license.

Venetian brings the Country Kick-off to the Castle

Excitement is building in anticipation of the Charlevoix Venetian Festival Country Kickoff.

On Tuesday, July 19, the 75th Annual Charlevoix Venetian Festival and Charlevoix's Historic Landmark, Castle Farms, will join forces once again and this time it will be quite a ride.

Alan Lovelace, Executive Director of Castle Farms said, "Castle Farms is thrilled to partner with Venetian in a way which promotes family fun and activities. The Country Kickoff not only kicks off Venetian, but also a variety of cultural activities which will be presented at the Castle."

The Super Kicker Rodeo will be showing off professional, tough nosed cowboys and about 30 of their "ranked" bulls in a rodeo which is sure to impress. To accompany the western heritage, local and Nashville, Tenn. country artists, Chris Dominic and Chelcee Oaks, will perform on stage prior to, and at the conclusion of the rodeo.

Children will also squeal with excitement as they are entertained by numerous kid-friendly activities available. These will include rides on "Baby Laura" the elephant and "Mongo" the mechanical bull, the Chamberlain petting zoo, a rock climbing wall and an inflatable slide.

The kids won't have a monopoly on the fun, though. This year those 21 and over will have the opportunity to lounge in the beer and wine pavilion, specially secured to prevent underage entry and alcohol consumption outside the pavilion. Service will be provided by the friendly staff of Whitney's of Charlevoix. Food and non-alcoholic beverages will also be available through the Charlevoix Boy Scouts.

Admission can be gained for a bargain priced, all inclusive fee (other than food and beverages) of $10 of adults and $7.50 for kids under 18. Children under 6 will gain free admission.

The Castle gates will be open from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. with Dominic performing at 6 p.m., the Super Kicker Rodeo bustin' loose at 7 p.m., immediately followed at 8:30 p.m. by the toe tapping tunes of Chelcee Oaks.

Participants are asked to bring your own lawn chairs for the performances, and respect that no alcoholic beverages, food nor pets may be brought in.

To accommodate those unprepared to deal with gnarly summer traffic, a trolley shuttle will be running between the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce off Bridge Street and Castle Farms for a one-way charge of $2.

On Tuesday, July 19, the 75th Annual Charlevoix Venetian Festival will bring the Super Kicker Rodeo to Castle Farms. The event will also feature live music, rides for children, refreshments and more.

Junior league baseball loses to Traverse City

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Charlevoix's junior league (13 and 14-year-old) baseball team lost to Traverse City East, 7-6. The game was the pool play opener for both teams.

Charlevoix trailed 7-0 after five innings but scored two in the sixth and four in the seventh as their rally came up just short.

Woody Nitchman was 3 for 4 and scored two runs. Bill Ivan had two singles. Michael Heckendorn doubled and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly.

Ty Telgenhof was the losing pitcher. He threw six innings, allowed two runs on three hits, walked three and struck out six.

Charlevoix played against East Jordan Wednesday, July 6 and against Boyne City Thursday, July 7. Both games were at Boyne City. Results from these match-ups were not submitted.

Recreation league softball scores for the week of June 30 through July 7

In game one, the Flight Deck beat D480 / St. Mary's Cement 14-10.

Lakeshore Tire won over Swanson's K&D / J. Arnold Painting, by a score of 14-2 in game two. And Carlson's Home

Improvements almost tallied a shut-out in game three, beating Art Form Fabricating / MTP Racing 14-1.

On July 5 women's slow-pitch teams faced off.

In game one, Waterfront Salon beat

Screenmasters 18-5. For Waterfront, Waja Dixon had an in-the-park homerun.

In game two, Kwikie Duplicating beat Burger King 18-7.

The next day, July 6, girls' ponytail teams headed out on the field.

In game one, the Green Giants won over the Red Pirates 14-4. And in game two, the Blue Jays beat the Red Pirates 12-10.

The evening of July 6 the men's slow-pitch teams returned for another night of play.

The final score in that game was 34-9.

For Lakeshore, Mike Miller had two homeruns. For Carlson's, Doug Wajha had a homerun.

In game two, Swanson's K&D / J. Arnold Painting fought for a 9-8 victory over Flight Deck.

In game three, Boss Engineering handily beat D480 / St. Mary's Cement by a score of 20-4.

Six-year-old boy scores hole-in-one at city course

Mathew Vanniman

Mathew Vanniman, 6, of Charlevoix celebrated a major feat on Sunday, July 10. Vanniman was playing a round of golf with his father, Roger, when around 11:30 a.m., the two came up to the seventh hole at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Club.

He said he smacked the ball as hard as he could and watched as it hit the pin. The ball traveled 70 yards from the children's tee.

Vanniman, who has been playing since he was three years old, grinned ear to ear and said, "I want to be the next Tiger Woods."

Four Junior Golf league teams kick off their season

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf program has moved into the popular league play which involves the advanced players 12 and older.

The Belvedere Club Course has hosted the first two Sunday evening clashes. The Spartans have moved through their first two opponents, whipping the Wolverines and the Chips. Kyle Parker led the winners on both occasions shooting a 53 and a 54.

The Wolverines bounced back from their opening loss with a win against the Bulldogs. Clay Mitchell of the Bulldogs shot a blistering 43 but his medallist score wasn't enough. For the Wolverines, Ty Jones and Wyatt Drost shot steady both nights with Jones scoring a 50 and a 53 and Drost posting a 54 and a 58.

All four teams have eight to nine players and the best five scores are tallied to determine the winner. Next Sunday Antrim Dells will host league play with the Spartans meeting the Bulldogs and the Chips tangling with the Wolverines.

Standings thus far are the following: Spartans 2-0; Chips 1-1; Wolverines 1-1; and Bulldogs 0-2.

Charlevoix Public Library wins award

The Library of Michigan recently awarded the Charlevoix Public Library a certificate of completion for meeting the Essential Level requirements of the Quality Services Audit Checklist.

To earn certification, the Charlevoix Public Library demonstrated its competence in seven categories of achievement including human resources; governance/administration; services; collection development; technology; facilities and equipment; and public relations/marketing.

"We are proud that our library has done such good work in proforth in the city code.

Charlevoix City Council excused two absences by First Ward Councilman Bill Haggard, for medical reasons.

The code maintains that council members who miss 50 percent of regularly scheduled meetings, or 12 meetings, in a year, can be dismissed.

The two recent absences brought Haggard's total number of missed meetings to five for 2005.

At this time, it is unclear when Haggard, whose most recent stint on council has lasted just over four years, will return to his council seat.

In mid-June, Haggard, 68, suffered what his brother, John Haggard, described as an episode. This triggered him to go to the doctor at which time he was told heart surgery was the next step.

On June 22, he underwent quadruple bypass surgery at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey. John Haggard said following the surgery the doctor reported no heart damage as a result of the bypass.

"Everything went fine," he said. "He is recovering well."

After the surgery, he went to his home on Beaver Island to recuperate. He is expected to return to Charlevoix early this week.

viding services deemed 'essential' by the Library of Michigan," said Mary Ann Chew, Library board president. "By focusing efforts on these key areas, our library has shown a strong commitment to customer service."

The Library of Michigan has defined "essential services" as the basics of all library service, with relatively low-cost standards that every library can and should achieve.

"Two years in the making, the checklist represents the work of more than 100 library directors, trustees and staff members who together created measures of quality for our state's public libraries," said acting state librarian Nancy Robertson. "The staff of the Charlevoix Public Library is to be commended for achieving a vital milestone in library service."

The Charlevoix Public Library

attends to many of their services, summer reading clubs and computer services, while at the same time building their new facility. The new library is under construction with an opening date of fall 2006.

"Although we are focusing on constructing our new library, we do not want to lose focus on our present patronage. The checklist measures brought our attention to the present," said library director, Valerie Meyerson. "We are delighted with our new essential certification, the seventh of 73 libraries our size to receive this designation."

Charlevoix residents from a 1940 directory

Marilyn Boss
'Days gone by'

The Charlevoix directory which was published in 1940, has given me years of enjoyment, and writing opportunities about the folks we knew as kids.

The man who did all the work of canvassing the town and outlying rural routes, did an excellent job of categorizing the family names, residences, jobs, and phone numbers. It would be a formidable job today, for so many families move from place to place.

Archie L. Livingston Jr., lived at home with his parents, Archie and Marjorie. Janet Livingston, his sister, also lived at home. Elwood Livingston and wife Clara, lived at Division and Michigan. Their children were Fay and David.

Beatrice Locke was a beauty operator and worked for Rose Barber and Beauty Shop, owned by Simon Rose. The shop was at 102 Bridge Street, located directly beside the swing bridge on the south east side of the street.

Herbert Loeb Jr. lived at 101 Ainslie, and also had a home in Chicago, Ill.

Fred and Helen Looze lived at 118 Palmer. He was in the Coast Guard. Their daughter, Beverly, lives in the same house today. She was in Dale's class in school.

Stanley Lord was a driver for Kit Carson Lumber Co., and lived on Rural Route #1.

Neil and Louise Louisville lived at 405 W. Lincoln, with their children, Louise, Barbara, Jacquelyn and Allen.

Sidney Lowenstein lived on Michigan Avenue and also in Chicago, Ill.

Gerald Lowing was a barber at Ted Pearl's Barber Shop. He lived at 225 Bridge Street.

Justus Luce lived at Wood and Sherman. I remember him as an old man, walking to town by my house on Hurlbut.

Gordon and Grace Lystrup lived at 202 Belvedere with their daughter, Nancy. He owned the Charlevoix Shoe Market, which was located at 409 Bridge Street.

Mrs. Josephine Madill owned the Blue Post Inn. She lived at 801 Bridge Street, where the Inn was located. Robert Madill lived at 208 1/2 West Upright. William Schwa also lived there. Robert owned Madill's Cabins, which were located at 1306 Bridge Street.

Paul and Rosemary Maier lived at 308 Park Avenue. He was a sanitary engineer for the District Health Department.

Alice Manly and Daughter, Eunice lived at 210 East Hurlbut Avenue. She was the widow of Garrie L. Manly. Orren Manly also lived there.

Judson and Lottie Markham lived at 118 Belvedere.

Parcy Marsa lived at 543 Petoskey Avenue.

C.Y. and Myrtle Marshall made their home at 302 Antrim. He was a contractor at the time. He put a lot of sewers in the city, and dug them by hand. Dale recalls some of them were 10 feet deep.

Charles (Charlie) and Matilda (Tillie) Marshall were a couple I knew well as a little girl. He was the fire chief, and they lived in a very narrow apartment in the courthouse, which was located on the northwest corner of Antrim and Stag. This building was right next-door to the jail house, where my grandparents lived when he was sheriff. Charlie made me a wonderful big swing in a tall tree in the courtyard. Their apartment must have only been about 9 feet wide, and the length of the building. It seemed very small to me as a little girl. He also let me push the button to sound the siren signifying that it was noon.

Frances Marshall was the widow of John. She lived at 607 State.

Harry Marshall and his wife, Clara, lived at 216 Mason. He was a laborer. In the later 1940s, they moved to Hurlbut Street, several houses down from my house.

J.C. Marshall worked as an operator of the sewage treatment plant. He and his wife lived at 107 East Lincoln.

Mona Marshall lived at 103 State. She was an assistant to Dr. D.C. Nettleton, our dentist.

In 1940, Frances Martin lived in an apartment in the Charlevoix Hospital. Fran was paralyzed from the waist down. She was a very popular person. She was a reporter for the Petoskey News-Review. She also reported for the Charlevoix Courier, later. She was such a confidential person, you could tell her about anything going on, and she wouldn't spill the beans until the time was proper. She kept everyone posted on the latest news when they would call her. If you wanted to know the winner of the ball game, she would tell you, and all the many others who would call. Her phone was always by her side. The townspeople purchased an electric wheelchair for her so she could travel all over town, day or night. She had lights on it, and she really enjoyed being mobile. The late Louie Edwards used to take her wheelchair in his van to out-of-town ball games so she could enjoy them, and report the details in the paper, along with pictures of the players.

Charles and Mabel Martini lived at 406 Park Avenue. He was a barber and worked at Conrad (Shorty) Sternberg's Barber Shop. In later years, he worked in Dal Henry's Barber Shop on Bridge Street in the Ben Brown Building. His wife, Mabel, was the head operator for Michigan Bell Telephone. The phone company was located at 215 1/2 Bridge Street. It was upstairs, in the building next to the Van Pelt Alley.

Hugh Mayne and wife, Catherine, lived at 105 Belvedere. He operated the Sinclair Service Station at 105 Belvedere, located where Robert Hoffman and Craig Lieberman have their law offices today. The Maynes had a daughter, Roberta Lee.

Glenn and Florence Maxon lived at 310 West Lincoln. She was a nurse at the Charlevoix Hospital.

Helen McCafferty was the widow of Francis. She lived at 905 Bridge Street, as did Lillian and Peter, who were students.

Many of our friends are no longer with us, but it is good to remember those who lived and served as good citizens. Many of them helped to make Charlevoix what it is today.

Insurer files claim in embezzlement debacle

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The ramifications and details of a recent embezzlement scandal continue to mount.

Karla Lockman

lawsuit seeking damages of at least $288,625.77 has been filed against both alleged embezzler Karla Sue Lockman, who is still out on $50,000 surety/bond, and her former employers the principal operators of the title company, Paula Barron and John Taylor.

According to Charlevoix County Prosecutor, John Jarema, the amount Lockman is believed to have embezzled is up to $775,000 from the $670,000 his office reported in late June.

Jarema said his office received new information from the Boyne City Police Department which wasn't available at the time of arraignment because they were awaiting records from a bank account in Lockman's name located in Hillman.

Jarema said the lawsuit filed by

Stewart Title Guaranty Company against Lockman and Northern Preferred is a way for the insurance company to avoid covering the debt incurred by the embezzlement.

He said, "They're trying to say it was all negligence on the part of the owner so they don't have to cover any of the lost money."

The suit, which was filed in United States District Court Western District of Michigan on June 15, alleges Lockman may have embezzled as much as $975,023.64.

As a closing agent for Northern Preferred, a couple of Lockman's duties were to collect closing funds from purchasers and deposit them into the escrow account.

Stewart Title alleges that Lockman began in January to misappropriate the funds from the Bank of Northern Michigan escrow account by either writing checks to herself or to her account at Bay Winds Credit Union.

The suit also alleges that Barron and Taylor are responsible for Lockman's ability to access the funds and are therefore also liable for costs incurred.

The papers filed in federal court allege Barron and Taylor, who have been limited agents of Stewart Title since 1995, breached contract by allowing an escrow account to have insufficient funds.

They are also accused of failing to reconcile their Bank of Northern Michigan escrow account state-

Settlement reached in campaign finance suit

By JULIE WITTHOFT

A $4,600 campaign finance fine handed to John Jarema by Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon was voided by Chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, Vic Patrick.

Jane Brannon

"This decision isn't saying I made a mistake and it's not saying he (Jarema) was correct. This was a county board compromise to put an end to it (the lawsuit)," Brannon said.

This decision followed a June 29 motion hearing with Judge Davis when he asked the two parties to look at settling the case.

Friday night fireworks are back on the festival line-up

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

"All systems are go for Friday fireworks," announced Dan Barron, President of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc.

Barron's announcement, which came early on July 15, was a relief for fireworks enthusiasts who were told in the fall that the show would be canceled if contributions in the neighborhood of $100,000 weren't made.

"We've had a steady upswing in contributions promised on Friday night fireworks," he said.

Barron added that Venetian Festival board members are optimistic that two festival fund-raisers, Rayder Rumble II and the Country Kick-off at Castle Farms, which took place early this week, will be lucrative.

The Friday night fireworks show generally costs about $80,000. But the festival board is $20,000 in debt to Colonial Fireworks Co. so the grand total this year is around $100,000.

The display will take place after the sun goes down, on Friday night, July 22 over Lake Charlevoix. Master pyrotechnicians Frank Loffredo, Jr. and Ron Greco, along with their assistant, Larry ments within 30 days of receiving them.

And, Stewart Title alleges that despite receiving notice that Lockman used personal funds to avoid a shortfall in the Bank of Northern Michigan escrow account during at least one real estate closing, Northern Preferred failed to remedy the situation.

"Despite this knowledge, Northern Preferred, Barron and Taylor failed to immediately investigate whether Lockman had abused her authority with respect to the Bank of Northern Michigan escrow account and allowed Lockman to retain control over the escrow account," the Stewart Title filing states.

Another allegation waged against Barron and Taylor is the breach of fiduciary duty by allegedly failing to properly supervise Lockman, allowing her to misappropriate funds from the escrow account.

According to Jarema, the suit filed by Stewart Title against Barron and Taylor hasn't introduced any information that could change his case, currently pending in Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

"It's not going to affect my investigation at all," he said. "As far as we can tell from the bank records, she (Lockman) was the only one a finger was pointing to."

Stewart Title's suit also alleges that Lockman's husband Kevin knew or should have known his wife was embezzling money.

But Jarema disagrees. "Looking at the accounts and seeing where the money was taken out, it's all on the accused Karla Lockman. We haven't found anything that points to anyone else," Jarema said.

Jarema said he is confident that Lockman's husband had no knowledge of where the money really came from.

Jarema, Brannon end their dispute over $4,600 in fines COUNTY

After mulling things over, both parties agreed to end it.

"I didn't think the fines should have been levied. And I don't think justice was served for the taxpayers. This (outcome) is what I wanted before the suit. How much did they spend to chase $4,600 in fines," Jarema said.

The roots of the lawsuit are set in last summer's election.

During the summer of 2004 Jarema, the current Charlevoix County Prosecutor, was in a heated election race for the prosecutor's seat.

Last July he filed a campaign finance report with Brannon's office.

Brannon said there were errors in that report. As a result, Jarema filed an amended report.

Brannon claims that amended report was not filed in a timely manner and she assessed fines according to the State of Michigan's election law.

Jarema beat fellow Republican candidate and former prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur in the August 2004 primary election.

After the primary, a second campaign finance report was due. Brannon claims there were also errors in that report submitted by Jarema for which she levied additional fines.

Jarema's total penalty came to about $4,600.

Jarema faced Green Party candidate Ellis Boal in the November 2004 general election and won.

In November of 2004, Jarema's attorney, Allen Telgenhof, sent a letter to Brannon stating that Jarema followed state law and if she was unwilling to reconsider the fines, Jarema would seek judicial review.

"I wasn't going to reconsider—everything had been done according to the formula set by the state's campaign finance law," Brannon said.

In December, Jarema filed the lawsuit in Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court against the county.

Funding for Friday night fireworks came in FIREWORKS

Trott, all of Colonial Fireworks Co., will fire off 875 different fireworks ranging in size from 4 inches to a foot.

Barron said the enormity of the shells makes it possible for the show to be seen anywhere along the Lake Charlevoix shoreline as well as in downtown Charlevoix.

"That's the beauty of this show," he said.

Loffredo has also produced a custom soundtrack choreographed to partner with the Friday night display which will be played in East Park and at Depot and Ferry beaches.

Friday night's display will be followed by stadium fireworks July 23, over Round Lake. This show, featuring over 500 different fireworks, will follow the festival's signature Grand Electrical Boat Parade. The parade will include around 24 decorated boats that will cruise into Round Lake from Lake Michigan.

The fine line between news and hype

Julie Witthoeft
'Just a thought'

From the NBA, to Hollywood, to Charlevoix — it's all about the hype. According to the Merriam Webster on-line dictionary the verb hype means to stimulate or enliven.

In my five years working with the media I've found as we report on newsworthy coming events in some instances we are feeding the hype machine.

Most recently, I watched as Charlevoix residents closely followed the Venetian Festival's Friday night fireworks quandary.

Word came on July 15 that the Friday night display was a go.

Shortly thereafter I received a call from a resident wondering what the outcome of the Venetian Festival board's July 14 meeting was. I told her all systems are go for the Friday blast.

There was relief in her voice when she said, "I knew you would know."

Since early this fall Charlevoix residents and Venetian lovers from all over were unsure whether the famed show would make an appearance at this year's festival.

We were told big money had to flow in to make it possible.

Since then Charlevoix Venetian Festival, Inc. board members have worked their tails off to make it happen — soliciting funds and offering local media organizations updates on their progress.

As I wrote stories about the funding shortfall I realized that what I was telling people is that their tradition, watching the sky glow over Lake Charlevoix was at risk.

Was the hoard looking to stimulate or enliven people so donations would come in, or was there a genuine need for regular updates on the progress of the contribution drive?

I have found there is a fine line between news and hype that we are responsible for maintaining.

In this case, the Venetian Festival is near and dear to the hearts of many Charlevoix Courier readers which made the stories newsworthy.

But some other recent happenings that have made headlines in area and national media are questionable.

In this year's NBA playoffs, Rasheed Wallace of the Detroit Pistons played the role of Mr. Hype. He called for wins and ran around with an attitude bigger than his high tops. But by game seven I was done listening and done waiting to see the red head hand strip tease.

After game day, newspaper readers and broadcast junkies were drawn to highlights from Mr. Hype.

I claim the mess coming from his mouth wasn't newsworthy. Instead, he was promoting an image of both himself and the team and at the same time may have been pumping up his teammates.

While the hype factor is a tough bugger to tackle as a news organization,

I've also begun to wonder whether those feeding the hype are the problem or are the hype consumers at the root of it all?

Americans are obsessed with hype. Lindsey Lohan wasn't noteworthy until she was blond and sexy and Katie Holmes' Batman movie as well as Tom Cruise's War of the Worlds wouldn't be nearly the box office hits they are if the "couple" they've become hadn't taken center stage in Hollywood.

While I don't agree with the head hands, playing on the fears of consumers and what appears to be spoof love, Americans love sensationalism. And darn it we all love America.

Life's journey from easy bake to gourmet

Gayle Gennett
'A look at life'

From my first "Easy Bake" oven, I was hooked on making and creating concoctions my mother would enjoy again and again.

Those little tasty treats looked darn good to a five year old. It's amazing now as I look back, how one little light bulb in a square metal container became a toy I cherished.

My grandparents were of Polish heritage and grandma encouraged me to take part in the making of egg noodle dough on her large kitchen table, while the smell of soup simmered on a stove that took up most of the kitchen. Even today, 50 years later, the smells of onions frying in a pan, or the pickling of beets, brings back a flood of memories.

So here we are today, I've been retired for two years now and looking to venture back into my childhood memories to do the things I always loved to do and now have the time to do them.

Little did my mother and grandmother know what an inspiration they were for me.

Now I am running a little cottage industry called, "Polish Princess Pierogi Co." A decision made with encouragement from my Polish relatives who gleefully responded with "smaczne."

Making my own pierogi's is not a lucrative business but the memories it brings are priceless. I hand roll the dough the same way grandma did — cutting it with my old Mason jar lid in keeping with tradition.

On the stove I sauté portabella mushrooms, sauerkraut, and olive oil. Okay it's not exactly like grandma as she used Polish mushrooms and butter, but alas it's 2005 and even a simple dumpling can use a facelift. I make a variety of pierogi's to keep up with today's consumer interest. At Thanksgiving the sweet potato pierogi filling with a little dash of nutmeg is a big hit.

Most recently, I entered a contest just for fun to see if my family and friends liked my cooking or were just being kind. When I arrived early at the contest site, women in the kitchen who were running the program greeted me with smiles sharing that I was creating something that brought back memories of their grandma as well. After a tense long morning, the results were in. I came in second place. My dumpling was given the stamp of approval by individuals who had culinary skill and understood food preparation or at least they were not a biased audience. Grandma and mom would have been so proud.

A test of time that the pierogi still hangs in there as one of our family's favorite food groups besides chocolate, but that's another story.

Letters to the editor

Proud to be a 'fudgie'

Editor:

Ode to a Fudgie.

I am a Fudgie and proud of it. I have been one for over 40 years. I love Lake Charlevoix and the whole up north experience. I like to think I love it more than those of you who have the privilege of living there year-round.

I work all year and save to come for a short time in the summer.

The rest of the year I read the Charlevoix Courier and wear my Charlevoix sweatshirt and dream of the color of the lake up north.

Most people who live by me don't understand my love of northern Michigan, you see, I live on Lake Michigan, but in Indiana. Spoiled? Yes. The lovely waters of Lake Michigan are just down the street from me, yet, it is not Charlevoix. It is not the relaxing clem, cool air and water of Charlevoix. The water isn't the same color and the air isn't the same clean, cool up north breeze.

I would love a T-shirt that says "fudgie." Charlevoix Wear should consider it. Also, I want a shirt that says "Lake Charlevoix" as I come for the calming blue of its waters, not the town. I grew up on the beach playing in that lake and I now enjoy it with my children. So don't despise the fudgies, we are good people who value what you have year-round.

Safety concern with road work
Editor:

As you have been aware, there is serious concern regarding the timeliness of the planned re-routing of the Charlevoix-Boyer City Road. Both the Charlevoix County Road Commission and the Michigan Department of Transportation are reviewing timing as well as alternates for the planned repairs.

First off, let me assure you that we are all very interested in the needs for the intersection of the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road and U.S. 31. At the same time there is concern for the safety of our seasonal visitors as well as the obvious needs of the business community. One of the safety concerns was clearly discussed during the most recent meeting held. That is if an ambulance is needed to serve the people of Pine Point, Oyster Pointe and of course the dining public at The Argonne, time is of the essence.

At precisely 7:30 p.m. on Friday, July 8, one of our senior diners at The Argonne was preparing to leave and could not leave the table, she was in some type of shock. The staff promptly called 911 and within 7 minutes the ambulance was at the door and the EMS personnel arrived and the woman was taken on a stretcher to Charlevoix Area Hospital for emergency care.

Just think, had they been required to drive over 16 miles in each direction.

Point made.

New columnist, Gayle Gennett joins the Courier

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

A new columnist, Charlevoix resident, Gayle Gennett, will grace the Courier's opinion page.

Gayle Gennett

Gennett, 55, who has a master's degree in guidance counseling and a bachelor's degree in art education, said she looks forward to writing about life experiences and offering readers helpful information for use in daily life.

In 2003, after three decades working in education Gennett, "the grandmother of elementary school counseling," retired.

She started out in 1974 as the Charlevoix High School counselor moving here from Pinckney.

In 1985, after 10 years counseling at Charlevoix High School, she became one of the first elementary school counselors in the state when she accepted a position at Charlevoix Elementary School.

While at the elementary school she established the first K-Kids Club in the state — a branch of Kiwanis International. She also established the longest running Conflict Manager's program in Michigan.

Her retirement has given her time to spend with her family and to pursue her many interests, including painting and cooking.

"I love to try new things and meet new people," she said.

These two loves are evidenced in her pastimes, traveling and acting.

In 2004, her husband, Lyle Gennett, a former shift commander with the city of Charlevoix Fire Department, retired and joined his wife in their new adventure.

Gennett is a mother of two girls, Mindy Spalding and Christie Kaczynski and a grandmother of three.

Gennett's first submission appears on page four of the Courier, and her column will continue to run the first and third Wednesday of each month.

Community foundation funds abstinence group

"Who's In Charge?" a teen drama group that lives and promotes a lifestyle of abstinence from drugs, alcohol and premarital sexual relations.

They deliver their message in schools and churches through skits developed and performed by more than 30 teen members in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. This school year they reached more than 1,000 students with this message.

Founded in 1993, this grassroots organization has relied on many volunteer hours and outdated office equipment to communicate their program. Thanks to a $2,500 dollar grant from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, "Who's In Charge?" is on their way to fund a promotional DVD video.

According to Program Director, Dan Thompson, "Who's In Charge?" is motivated to reach teens across northern Michigan with a message that will encourage and inspire them to make a commitment to be abstinent from drugs, alcohol and premarital sex. This video will be one of the major tools we'll use to communicate our mission."

For more information, call Thompson at (231) 348-3387.

Obituaries

Darrel Smith: March 14, 1927 - July 1, 2005

Darrel Duane "Smitty" Smith passed away at home on July 1, 2005 after a short struggle with cancer. He was born in Lewistown, Mont. on March 14, 1927 and his early years were spent in and around Billings, Mont. He developed an interest in flying while living near the airport and received his first pilot's license there in 1946.

In 1943 he entered the Navy and was sent to Farragut Naval Training Center in Idaho. He served in the Pacific area with Destroyer Squadron 61 as a gunnery officer aboard the USS Blue and was discharged from the Navy in February of 1946. In July 1949 he enlisted in the U.S. Coast Guard where most of his career was spent on the Great Lakes lighthouses and lifeboat stations. He met his wife, Eileen (Arnold), while stationed in Michigan. In 1965, he was transferred from Harbor Beach where he served for 2 years as officer in charge of the lifeboat station to a Long Range Aids to Navigation station west of Honolulu, Hawaii. His final tour of duty was aboard the ship Avoyal in northern California. He retired from the service in May of 1967 and they moved to Oroville where they raised their family.

After retiring from the Coast Guard Smitty worked at a variety of jobs in the Oroville, Wash. area before following a lifelong dream of teaching others to fly. He returned to flight school in 1975 and in 1976 received his rating to become a certified flight instructor. He started a local flying school in Oroville, Wash. and during the next 20 years taught over 60 students the art of flying. He willingly shared his knowledge of flying "by the seat of your pants" with anyone, young or old, that was interested, and instilled a love of flying in many people up and down the valley. He was actively involved in the Tonasket, Wash. Father's Day Fly-In and liked nothing better than taking youngsters up for their first airplane ride. He became known at that event as "the shortest control tower" in the state as he talked with pilots in the air and on the ground to keep the planes coming and going with no mishaps. Health issues forced him to retire from instructing but he retained his love of airplanes and flying until his death.

He was preceded in death by his father Jett Raymond Smith, his mother Gladys (Dimmitt) Morris and his stepfather Oscar Morris. He is survived by his wife, Eileen, and daughter, Dara (McCoy), her husband, Bill, and their three children, Rebekkah, Hannah, and Jett all of Oroville; his former wife, Jeanne, and their two sons; Dane and wife Eleanor of Georgia; a granddaughter, Heather Smith-Gillson of Portland, Ore. and two great-grandsons Theodore Gillson of Alaska, and Galen Bishop of Oregon; one Aunt, Ida Farrens, of Tenasket, Wash. and numerous cousins.

Smitty was a lifetime member of the Charlevoix Masonic Lodge #282, and a member of the El Katif Shrine Club and the Scottish Rite. He was also a past commander of the Oroville American Legion Post #84.

Funeral services were July 8 at the Oroville United Methodist Church. Interment followed at the Oroville Riverview Cemetery. Memorials may be made to the Okanagan Regional Home Health and Hospice at 800 S. Jasmine, Suite 2, Onak, Wash. 98841, the Oroville American Legion Post 84 Scholarship Fund at P.O. Big Rock to be 'green field' by 2006

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The signature large steel sphere at Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant will come down soon as the lengthy decommissioning process proceeds.

On Wednesday, July 13, Tim Petrosky, public affairs director for Consumers Power, led a tour of the Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant located in Charlevoix's Hayes Township.

"By September of 2006 we hope to have all the buildings gone. In November of 2006 we are expecting the final site survey in to be green field for the bulk of the property," Petrosky said. "But, of course, the dry fuel storage facility will still be here."

Petrosky said the hope is for final site survey to show green field status of about 1.5-miles of lakefront property, with a total of 530 acres of Big Rock Point's 560-acre parcel to be salable.

The other 30 acres will house the dry fuel storage facility which is approximately the size of a basketball court.

For reasons of national security no specifics can be given on what type of security force is at Big Rock, but Petrosky said, there are armed guards, vehicle barriers, and other appropriate security measures.

"We have the appropriate security and maintenance personnel assigned to the dry fuel storage facility," he said. "They could withstand a direct hit from a plane."

Petrosky said the local plant is one of the first in the United States to decommission back to green field status.

"It will all be surveyed to make sure it is clean. When I say clean, I mean we'll make sure it is free of plant generated radioactivity and that is a key point. We're looking for plant produced radioactivity not naturally occurring."

Green field status is a term used by the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission which basically means that a location which once housed a nuclear plant has radioactivity levels lowered to the point that the property can be released for public or private sale.

According to Petrosky, the criteria issued for green field status is that a person may not pick up more than an additional 25 millirem of radiation from the property.

To put that in perspective, Petrosky said, a dose of 50,000 millirem at one time would have to be consumed for ill health effects to ensue.

"Living in Michigan you pick up 100-200 millirem from cosmic rays and other naturally occurring sources," he said.

At 35 years, Big Rock holds the record as the longest running nuclear power plant in the country and is one of 19 plants either decommissioned or in the process of doing so.

Big Rock was the fifth nuclear power plant in America and the first high-power-density boiling water reactor in the world and cost $27 million to build.

The plant officially ceased providing power in 1997 because it was deemed no longer economically viable and efforts have been taken since it's closing to decommission the landmark.

"It's taking a little bit longer than we originally estimated," Petrosky said.

When all the work is complete, the Big Rock decommissioning should take less than two decades. By federal law, nuclear power plants have up to 60 years to decommission.

Following its shutdown in 1997, hazard reduction was one of the first steps in the decommissioning process.

"When you have an operating plant you use a number of fluids and materials — gasoline, oil, batteries. All those things looked at separately can pose a hazard, as soon as the plant shut down we began removing these things," Petrosky said.

"Another big thing was that we removed approximately 90 percent of the radioactivity from the reactor with chemical decontamination, ultimately reducing radioactive contamination."

was pumped through the reactor and piping which helped remove radioactive contamination from it.

The next big thing to be dismantled is the large steel sphere which used to house the reactor.

"We will be cutting it with torches into pieces, lowering it to the ground and once it is on the ground it will be cleaned, decontaminated and cut into smaller pieces for disposal," Petrosky said.

He added, "The metal portion of Petrosky said.

He added, "The metal portion of the sphere should be gone by the end of this year."

According to Petrosky, the below ground portion of the sphere's foundation, which consists of poured concrete reinforced with steel rebar, should be removed by the second half of 2006.

The projected budget for the decommissioning project was $366 million. As of May, project costs had reached $325 million.

According to Petrosky, incremental fuel storage costs were estimated at $74 million dollars and as of May of this year $51 million had been spent. Waste disposal is approximately 17 percent of the cost of this decommissioning, projected at about $62 million.

"We are right on budget," Petrosky said.

Fuel numbers at the site include "clean building debris," in the amount of 110 million pounds and radioactive waste which accounts for about 17 million pounds.

Low-level waste can be removed from the site, but the spent fuel or high-level waste located on site must stay put until an appropriate disposal area is constructed.

Thirteen million pounds of low-level radioactive waste has been shipped to Utah, South Carolina and Tennessee. Thus far, 29.8 million pounds of clean building debris has been shipped out.

Since 1982, the federal government has been talking about building a site to store high-level nuclear waste, but despite spending billions of dollars over a couple decades there is no place to ship the waste.

According to Petrosky, a site was supposed to open in 1998 but that fell through, now the optimistic outlook is that a site in Nevada called Yucca Mountain might be ready by the year 2010.

Until Yucca Mountain or some other site is built for high-level waste, the spent fuel will sit in the Spent Fuel Storage Installation ISFSI, also known as dry fuel storage at the plant.

The final phase of decommissioning should last a year starting in 2012. It will consist of taking the fuel from the plant to the Department of Energy and dismantling the storage facility.

Schulling crew to the rescue

Bill Schulling came to the aid of a jet-boater who was stranded in the channel between Garden and Beaver islands after her boat broke down on Sunday, July 10. The driver, Andrea Keehn and her dog, Bear, of Beaver Island, were being swept into the main body of Lake Michigan by the wind and current when Schulling's crew spotted her waving for help. Traveling alone and without a phone or radio, she risked not being found if she had drifted much farther.

Hand Delivery?

I can do that!

Northwestern Bank employee Robin Hines was opening the day's mailed-in payments. She discovered that an out-of-town customer had inadvertently sent us a loan payment intended for another bank, and it was due that same day.

Robin knew that mailing the payment back to her customer would guarantee the payment would be late and incur a fee. So she hopped into her car and hand-delivered the payment to the other bank... one of our competitors.

Whenever you hear any Northwestern Bank employee say "I can do that!" you'll quickly realize they really mean it.

Even if it means going above and beyond. We can do that.

Decrease in number of drunk driving incidents

An audit of the state's drunk driving arrests, convictions and crashes, as well as fatalities and injuries involving alcohol and/or drugs, has shown a decrease in these areas for the third year in a row.

The 2004 Drunk Driving Audit, issued by the Michigan State Police, Criminal Justice Information Center, provides detailed information, including arrest activity by law enforcement agencies for each county in the state as well as crash, injury and fatality information by county.

In 2004, 418 people died in alcohol and/or drug-related fatalities, down from 442 in 2003. Drunk and impaired driving arrests totaled 55,070, a decrease from the 55,746 individuals arrested in 2003.

Of the arrests in 2004, 53,292 were for operating under the influence of liquor (OUIL). Convictions for 2004, which may be from prior-year arrests, included 23,869 for OUIL and 28,762 for impaired driving.

Injuries resulting from alcohol and/or drug-related crashes also decreased, from 9,315 in 2003 to 8,667 in 2004.

"It's encouraging that alcohol- and drug-related traffic fatalities in Michigan are down 5 percent and that injuries were further reduced by 7 percent," said Michigan State Police Director, Colonel Tadarial J. Sturdivant. "Despite this, drunk driving is still a crime that happens all-too often."

Traffic fatalities involving alcohol and/or drugs represented 36.1 percent of all traffic deaths in 2004.

Making the public aware of drunk driving laws is critical to continue reducing these fatalities, said Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land.

"By emphasizing education and awareness, the state is encouraging motorists to think twice before making a costly mistake," Land said. "We must continue working with other partners to continue this downward trend."

The report covers the first full-year in which the legal definition of drunk driving was set at .08 blood alcohol content (BAC). The change was effective in September 2003.

Another key piece of legislation is Michigan's repeat offender law, which took effect in October 1999. This law created harsher penalties for repeat offenders in an effort to limit access to vehicles through license plate confiscation, mandatory vehicle immobilization and vehicle forfeiture.

The 2004 Drunk Driving Audit is available online. To view the entire report, visit www.michigan.gov/msp, then click on publications, forms and statistics. Next, click statistics, then traffic crash statistics, then click Michigan Drunk Driving Audit.

Glen's Market 'Food Today' campaign ends July 25

Food Today contributions translate into meals for Michigan's needy families.

Starting July 1 through July 25, consumers at local Glen's Markets will have an easy opportunity to help feed the hungry through the Food Today Campaign. This point-of-sale fundraiser will allow shoppers to make a donation of $1, $3 or $5 while paying for their groceries. Proceeds will be used to acquire emergency food by the Food Bank Council of Michigan for Michigan food banks and local emergency food programs where 44 percent of those served are children.

Each dollar raised through Food Today will provide the equivalent of 16 meals to those in need. Backed by the Michigan Grocer's Association, and sponsored by Kellogg, Food Today has a goal of $65,000.

"It is important for us all to remember that our neighbors are just as hungry in the summer as during the winter and we need to do whatever we can to help them," said Kathy Hart, Executive Director of the Manna Food Project. "The families whose children received free breakfast and lunch during the school year now have additional meals they need to provide for the summer months. Your contribution as you do your family shopping will make life a little easier for someone else."

All Glen's markets throughout The Manna Food Project service area of Antrim, Emmet and Charlevoix counties are participating in this program during July. For more information, contact The Manna Food Project at (231) 347-8852.

Rev. Tom Neis leaves St. Mary parish

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Charlevoix's St. Mary of the Assumption celebrated the legacy of the Rev. Tom Neis on Sunday, July 10, at his farewell reception.

After serving 12-and-a-half years as pastor in the Diocese of Gaylord, Neis has moved east to assume senior priest status at St. Casimir in Posen — a community in Presque Isle County settled by Polish immigrants in the early 1870s.

The parish's incoming pastor, the Rev. Gerard A. Hunko, former pastor of St. Mary in Lake Leelanau, arrived Wednesday, July 13, and was formally welcomed by Charlevoix's St. Mary parish during morning Mass on Sunday, July 17.

Neis, 79, has pursued a lengthy career in the priesthood — one that spans 53 years.

"Normally, the church changes priests every six years, so this was a long time for Father Tom," said Mary Ann Stephan, a cantor and active member of St. Mary for nearly 13 years. "He needed a smaller parish and Posen is a smaller parish. He's not ready to retire."

Patty Furtaw, pastoral and youth minister at St. Mary, was hired by Neis in 1997. She described Neis' presence in Charlevoix to be an enlightening and inspiring one, adding that his contributions extended far beyond the church.

"Most guys his age retired years and years ago," Furtaw said. "I admire his dedication to his vocation. I think it's his desire to serve the Lord."

Neis, who hails from the Detroit area, attended seminary at St. Joseph and Sacred Heart, both in Detroit, and St. John Provincial in Plymouth.

"He's one of the hardest working people I know. He is a priest's priest," said Furtaw, who spoke on her cell phone from inner-city Detroit during a St. Mary's Young Neighbors in Action Team mission at a food pantry. "One of the reasons we're in Detroit now is his personal financial support. He always said his family is the church. He's a truly amazing person and he will be missed."

According to Candice Neff, director of communications for the Diocese of Gaylord, Neis was ordained into the priesthood on June 7, 1952, at St. Andrew Cathedral in Grand Rapids.

In 1971, he was appointed as acting superintendent of education for the Diocese of Gaylord. He then traveled across the Atlantic to attend North American College, an institute for continuing education in Rome, Italy, in 1975.

Neis served at parishes in Grand Rapids, Manistee, Muskegon, Traverse City, Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Charlevoix. Also in the Boyne City area, he served as chaplain to the Knights of Columbus Council.

He was appointed twice to the esteemed Presbyteral Council, which consists of priests who advise the bishop, said Neff.

"He was very involved with the school," said Stephan, adding that St. Mary School's enrollment increased during Neis' time at the parish. "He knew every child's name."

"He's very generous. Any monetary gift he received was always put back into parish," she said, adding that she most admired Neis for his gracious funeral homilies. "He lived very simply — a good cigar, maybe a glass of wine once in a while."

Neis' final column for St. Mary's weekly bulletin was written with what he called "a heavy heart." He extended his gratitude to the parish's staff, volunteers, cantors and choir members, Eucharistic Ministers, monthly donors to the Community Food Pantry, and those who assisted in the construction and revitalization of St. Mary's facilities.

On Sunday, July 10, Charlevoix's St. Mary of the Assumption celebrated the legacy of the Rev. Tom Neis who served at the church for 12-and-a-half years. Neis has moved east to assume senior priest status as pastor at St. Casimir in Posen. Above, he is pictured with Charlevoix resident Rita Orlowski.

taken me in and helped me find a home here in Charlevoix the Beautiful," Neis wrote. "I ask pardon of all whom I have offended during these past years and thank all who have prayed for me that I might become a 'good shepherd' to everyone. I shall continue to pray for you and ask that you continue to pray for me."

St. Mary will hold welcoming receptions for Father Gerard Hunko in the Family Center after each weekend liturgy. The public may take these opportunities to meet and greet the parish's new pastor.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's tips for a safe boating trip

Six tips to stay safe this boating season

- Wear a life jacket: 70 percent of boating fatalities involve drowning, and of those who drowned, 86 percent were not wearing a life jacket.
- Make sure your boat is properly equipped and your equipment is in good working order: Boaters are urged to carry all the legally required equipment, such as life jackets and fire extinguishers, plus some recommended items, such as a first aid kit, charts of the area and an anchor. Also be sure to check your navigation lights.

- Avoid alcohol: As much as 50 percent of all boating accidents involve alcohol. Alcohol affects your judgment, balance and vision - all of which are necessary to operate a boat.
- File a float plan: Similar to a flight plan for a pilot, a float plan gives the "who, what, when and where" of your trip. A float plan should be filed with a friend or family member on shore.

- Maintain a sharp lookout: More boats are on the water this time of year, so everyone needs to be alert for other boaters to avoid a collision.
- Carry a marine radio or cell phone: Be prepared to call for help in the event that you are involved in an accident, or your boat becomes disabled, or you otherwise need assistance.

PUBLIC NOTICE

If it's not in the newspaper, how will the public notice?

Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals. These are just a few topics where government actions can affect your life and community. Imagine if government no longer had the legal obligation to publish this information in your newspaper. How would public notices get noticed? In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. It should not be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, when to look or even to know what you're looking for to be informed. It is government's responsibility to publish and deliver public notice information as it becomes available. So take notice. Your right to know is being served... right here in your newspaper.

East Park changes to be decided by the voters

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Charlevoix's City Council voted against passing an amendment to make changes to East Park, which means city voters will decide its fate at the Nov. 8 general election.

Council addressed the issue at its meeting July 18.

Charlevoix seasonal resident Jill Picha, who attended the meeting, said she and others are confused as to why council was addressing this issue when petitions had been signed with the understanding that if an initiative action effort was successful the issue would be on the November ballot.

"That was deceiving the people," Picha said.

Mayor Norman Carlson assured Picha that council was confused as well but all members supported it moving to the ballot.

Council's recent action was required by law as proper procedure following the June 20 submission of 421 authentic signatures gathered by a group of six Charlevoix city residents in support of East Park changes.

The official name of the petition group's effort is an initiative action.

This means council was forced to reconsider an ordinance amendment, called "Amendment 5" which it denied in March and again on Monday night.

Changes voters will now have to decide include removal of the current band shell, construction of a new performance venue with amphitheater seating and reconfiguration of the park's topography.

In a recent interview, Picha said in November she will have an army of voters lined up ready to fight park changes.

"Amendment 5" includes demolition of the current music pavilion in the fall of 2006 and construction of a new facility on the south end of the park. This part of the project would cost the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority just under $1.5 million.

Local library provides over $1.5 million in services to community

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

According to a recent study, the value of services provided by the Charlevoix Public Library far exceeds its operational expenses.

"It's a community benefit analysis that attaches a value to all the services we provide," Charlevoix Public Library Director, Valerie Meyerson, said.

"Which is $1.525 million dollars in services that we provide to the community."

By calculating the cost of books, magazines, rental prices of movies and the cost of a meeting room, Meyerson was able to come to the number.

She said, "I wanted to show the board what our services are. It's easy to say that our circulation is 60,000 but what does that mean?"

"We just attached a dollar price to that so people can see what they're getting."

According to Meyerson, the library gives about five times what it receives as far as services go.

"In taxes we received (last year) we brought in about $290,000 in revenue," she said. "And the community received about 1.5 million in services."

She added, "So that's a pretty good cost to benefit ratio."

According to Meyerson's research, the library offers $407,674.89 worth of adult fiction, $133,393.50 in Internet access and $40,331.85 in juvenile fiction, to name just a few of the categories covered.

Meyerson said other, larger libraries in the country also do the community benefit analysis to help residents understand the positives of the public library.

"I think we have the best library around with our services," she said.

"We have a very supportive community here and a higher tax base which allows us to provide a high quality service."

Meyerson said, she initially worked up the report to give the library board an idea of just how much they provide.

But, she added, the tax payers and patrons of the library might benefit from the information too.

Meyerson said, at tax time people look at their bill and see money going out, but they may not realize what the library gives back.

"This allows them to see what is going back to the community and the value of those tax dollars," she said.

Historical Society photo display in East Park

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

The theme of the Third Annual Heritage Weekend was born out of a simple association: This year marks Charlevoix's 100th birthday as a city.

During the 75th Annual Venetian Festival — a milestone all its own — the Charlevoix Historical Society will present a tented photo exhibit commemorating the history of the city, which was incorporated June 1, 1905.

"Photo Highlights of 100 Years of Charlevoix History 1905 - 2005" will be displayed from 12 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday in East Park. Admission is free.

Nearly 120 photos, all items in the historical society's Bob Miles Collection, will feature notable people, places and events in Charlevoix during the last 100 years.

"I've been working on it (the exhibit) since January," said Dave Miles, co-director of the historical society's Harsha House Museum at 103 State Street.

Precious photos have been enlarged and mounted to panels, no larger than 11-by-17 inches, alongside informative captions.

Such preserved images include a panorama of 25 pictures taken from the west side of Bridge Street around 1935; a tribute to "Charlevoix's Greatest Athlete" and 1948 Charlevoix High School graduate Bob Carey; eerie scenes of the fires that destroyed buildings on Bridge Street in 1923 and 1924; a progressive layout depicting the Beach Hotel, The Inn and The Belvedere Club first in their heydays and secondly in their phases of destruction during the 1960s; scenic shots of the Loeb Estate in 1920; the construction of the Big Rock Point Power Plant in 1960; and the ribbon-cutting ceremony for Charlevoix's present-day drawbridge in 1949.

If there were a prized object in the exhibit's bunch, Miles said, it would be the encased marriage license and certificate of Ernest Hemmingway and Hadley Richardson, completed in Charlevoix in 1921. Although the two were married in Horton Bay, they were required to travel to the city, the county seat, to obtain the official documents that are now part of the permanent collection in the Harsha House.

Miles, who is the sole coordinator of the exhibit, said eight classic prints from the historical society's collection will be on sale to the public this weekend. Cost is $50, plus tax, per individual item.

In addition to select prints, the historical society will be selling books, maps, plaques, Christmas ornaments and mugs from the museum's store inside the tent.

"We're going to take the shop to the park," said Miles.

Heritage Weekend, initialized by Dan Barron, president of the Charlevoix Venetian Festival, Inc. Board of Directors, will also incorporate local businesses in this year's honorary festivities. About 70 Charlevoix establishments purchased amplified photos depicting the historic facade of their current work sites from the historical society. The Weatherlane Restaurant, once the Argo Milling Company site, and the Villager Pub are two such patrons.

After Saturday, the exhibit's photos will be housed in the Harsha House Museum, but will not be incorporated as a mounted exhibit.

The Harsha House Museum is open from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday through Labor Day. The museum will be closed Friday and Saturday during Venetian weekend. For more information about "Photo Highlights," contact the Charlevoix Historical Society at (231) 547-0373.

Pine River Dixieland Jazz Band to play East Park

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A new local band, The Pine River Dixieland Jazz Band, named in honor of Charlevoix's Pine River Channel, recently performed in East Park.

Last week, as a part of the Thursday Night Concert Series sponsored by the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority and the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce the five member band played traditional Dixieland Jazz.

"It's a group that we formed two years ago. I've always wanted a group with a connection to the Pine River," said the band's tuba player, Gary Stutzman.

Knowledgeable jazz fans may recognize songs by some famous artists including works by greats like Bunny Berigan, Ray Conniff, Louie Armstrong and Buddy Rich.

"Anybody that appreciates outstanding Dixieland music will really enjoy the music," said Stutzman. "They'll have a great musical experience."

The performance featured Doug and Susan Houseworth on valve trombone/vocals and banjo/vocals respectively, Dan Jacobs on lead trumpet, Chris Ames on drums and Gary Stutzman on tuba.

According to Stutzman, the hallmark of Dixieland jazz is weaving an improvisational work around a general melody.

Stutzman isn't the only member of the band who has an affinity for playing Dixieland music, the Houseworths had a group called the River Town Jazz Band, which they operated for several years. In addition to playing lead trumpet, Jacobs is also a successful music producer.

Stutzman said all the members of the group know their way around jazz melodies which means they don't need to rehearse to sound great.

"This is an ad-lib group. Everyone follows the structure of the music and it's an opportunity for every player to, at some point in time, have a share of the spotlight," Stutzman said. "You don't have one player play all the leads."

He added, "Everybody gets a chance to participate, when one instrument isn't soloing, they are accompanying — it's truly a spontaneous form of musical expression."

The Pine River Dixieland Jazz Band will play from 6 to 10 p.m. July 20 in East Park in conjunction with the 75th Annual Charlevoix Venetian Festival's Rhythms of Venetian line-up.

Energy and water funds for Charlevoix to be decided

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

United States senators Debbie Stabenow and Carl Levin recently announced House and Senate approval of an energy and water appropriations bill to be considered by the federal government in 2006.

If passed, the bill would provide several millions of dollars to cities all over Michigan, including a proposed $89,000 for harbor maintenance in Charlevoix.

"The harbor projects in this legislation are extremely important for recreational boating and commercial activity in Michigan and the sea lamprey and Asian carp barriers are essential for our battle against invasive species," Stabenow wrote in a July 1 press release.

According to the release, the legislation also directs the United States Department of Energy to prepare a report with information critical to moving forward with the Rare Isotope Accelerator (RIA), a research facility.

According to information on the government Web site www.phy.anl.gov/ria/, the research facility would be dedicated to exploring and producing new rare isotopes which aren't found on earth.

If built, the Rare Isotope Accelerator would be the most powerful research facility of its kind, in the world.

"In addition, the report of the Department of Energy on RIA could be of vital importance to Michigan," Stabenow said. "Locating this project in Michigan would mean almost $2 billion for Michigan's economy over 20 years and 400 new jobs in the state."

Stabenow added, "This project is of great importance for new nuclear physics research and for the State of Michigan, and I will continue to work with state and national officials to move this project forward."

According to Levin, the money released by the federal government in this bill is integral to Michigan's economical and environmental well-being.

"Michigan's waters will benefit greatly with the passage of this legislation," Levin said. "The funding for these water-related projects is vital to the Great Lakes environment and economy."

The funds are used by the United States Army Corps of Engineers for maintenance and operation of the harbor, but cannot be used for construction projects such as deepening ports or channels or expanding them in any way.

Levin said, "Michigan's alternative energy initiatives recommended by the appropriations committee may lead to technologies that will reduce the nation's dependence on imported energy supplies and protect the environment."

According to the press release by Levin and Stabenow, the bill, one of 13 such annual appropriations, is heading to a conference committee to resolve differences between the House's version and the Senate's version.

C² Gallery brings new artists to town

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Charlevoix residents and roommates, Cheryl and Mike Carey and Amy Cook have partnered in an artistic business venture.

"I think this is the first time for all of us that we can wake up in the morning and can't wait to go to work," Mike, Cheryl's husband, said.

The three purchased the former Koucky Gallery and opened a new art gallery in town called C² Gallery, located at 327 Bridge Street.

Cheryl, 35, worked for Koucky Gallery owners Chuck and Nancy Koucky last summer. Then, when she found out they were interested in selling the business, she jumped at the chance to live her dream — owning and operating an art gallery.

"Our families have known the Koucky family for years. We hated to see the gallery leave. We wanted to keep a little bit of Koucky in Charlevoix," Cheryl said.

As the deal panned out, the gallery moved next-door to Koucky's former location and the Rocking Horse Toy Company moved to the old Koucky Gallery location.

The three new business owners had a lot of work to do to get their new digs operational, including transforming lighting, installing carpeting and rebuilding walls.

While the gallery looks similar to its predecessor, about 30 percent of the current inventory is from new artists. Koucky's staple artists that are part of the new C² Gallery include Deborah Hoover, Luke Buck, Matthew Keiser and, of course, potter Chuck Koucky and jeweler Nancy Koucky.

The C² owners are members of the Jordan River Arts Council and the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

At this time the three owners are the only ones working at the gallery. They plan to expand services to offer custom framing this fall.

For more information about C² Gallery, call (231) 547-2228 or e-mail c2gallery@yahoo.com. The gallery's summer hours are from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. Winter hours are from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Lake Michigan Mariners take third in tournament

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Lake Michigan Mariners, a 16 and under travel baseball team from Charlevoix, finished third in the Grand Blanc Parks and Recreation Tournament on July 8-10. The Mariners' medal winning performance was their best of the travel season.

In pool play, Lake Michigan defeated Flint Kearsley, 7-0; beat Richfield, 11-8 and lost to Jackson Northwest, 8-1. In the playoff portion of the tournament, the Mariners lost to the Fort Wayne (Indiana) All-Stars, 4-3 and defeated host Grand Blanc, 7-6 in the third-place game.

Against Kearsley, Chris Waha threw a perfect game, throwing six innings and allowing no hits, no walks and striking out 12. Waha struck out 11 of the first 12 batters he faced in the contest.

At the plate Waha had the Mariners' only two hits. Lake Michigan stole eight bases as a team and took advantage of 13 Kearsley walks. Matt Heimbuch walked in all three of his plate appearances. Ty Telgenhof walked twice and scored two runs.

Waha stayed hot against Richfield, going three for three with a double and two runs scored. Danny Waldron singled and tripled. Heimbuch had two hits.

Joey Anthony had two hits, stole three bases and scored two runs. Drew Klooster doubled while Michael Heckendorn, Woody Nitchman and Nate Golovich all singled. Trevor Cole reached base three times — on a single, walk and hit by pitch, scoring twice.

Heimbuch was the winning pitcher, throwing five and a third innings, giving up only six hits and two earned runs. Waha struck out the last two batters of the game with two men on to earn the save.

The Mariners managed only three hits against Northwest. Klooster, Heckendorn and Golovich each singled. Waldron took the pitching loss despite striking out six in four innings of work. Waha threw two more perfect innings in relief, striking out three.

In the single elimination playoffs against Fort Wayne, the Mariners struggled early with Anthony's second inning single being the only hit until the sixth and final inning.

Trailing 4-0 with one out in the sixth, Klooster was hit by a pitch. Waldron doubled him home to put Lake Michigan on the board. Waha singled in Waldron to cut the lead to 4-2. After a visit to the mound by the Fort Wayne coach, Heimbuch doubled to right field to drive in a run and bring the Mariners to within a run.

Lake Michigan couldn't get the key hit, however, and the game ended with the tying run on second base for the Mariners. Heimbuch threw four innings, allowing only three hits, three runs, two earned and walking none in a losing effort.

Waha finally allowed a base runner, ending his perfect string at 8 2/3 innings for the tourney. He allowed two hits but no runs. Telgenhof threw one inning, giving up an unearned-run on a hit, walk and an error.

Playing for a third place medal in the consolation game, the Mariners jumped out to a first-inning lead on a single by Klooster, walk to Heimbuch and a three-run homer by Anthony. Heckendorn scored later on an error in the inning to stake Lake Michigan to a 4-0 lead.

The host Bobcats, tied the game, however, with two runs in the second, one in the third and one in the top of the fourth, off Heckendorn.

Ragamuffin Theatre Group presents Willie Wonka

Ragamuffin Theatre & Company of Charlevoix will be presenting an encore presentation of their "interactive" musical theater version of Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory, at 4 p.m. July 23 and at 2 and 7 p.m. July 25 and 26 at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Charlevoix.

Aside from being entertained by a large cast of Oompa Loompas, audience members will also have the opportunity to participate in a variety of different "chocolate factory" games, which includes eating lots of chocolate.

Ragamuffin Theatre members will select volunteers for activities throughout the evening's program. Willing participants will then search for hidden golden tickets, build their own everlasting gobstoppers, compete for prizes during the fizzy lifting liquid "burp" contest and more.

"Everyone will leave with a prize of some sort," said theater group director, Kathleen Whittaker. "This event is about discovering the beauty of pure imagination while celebrating the child within."

The classic story will be told in a creative new way and is not limited to children. Adults will be invited to join in the fun of creating memories with their children or grandchildren, by experiencing interaction similar to the production's main characters, Charlie and Grampa Joe.

Tickets for July 25 and 26 matinees are $10, tickets for all other shows are $15. Tickets may be purchased on-line by visiting www.RagamuffinTheatre.com, or by calling (231) 237-9686. You may also purchase tickets at the door. Seating is limited to 100 participants each performance.

State finalist girls basketball team to be Grand Marshals

When it came time to determine who is going to serve as Grand Marshal of the Venetian Festival street parade, there were several board suggestions, but it was a clear decision that the most successful girls basketball team in the history of Charlevoix High School had earned the spotlight.

The 2004 Charlevoix High School girls varsity basketball team will be honored for their Class C state finalist accomplishment and will be "center stage" at the parade.

No other Charlevoix High School girl's basketball team had ever advanced past regionals and the narrow and white nearly captured the state title this past year, losing in the last minute to St. Martin de Porres of Detroit.

Head coach Keith Haske was pleased by the festival board's decision and was especially proud of the individual and collective manner in which the team conducted themselves.

"We were a team and our success reflected that fact. Everyone on our squad contributed," he said.

The team will be honored as the Grand Marshals of the popular street parade on Saturday and were introduced at half-time of the Monday night Rayder Rumble II basketball game.

Team members include Caitlin Cole, Sarah Cross, Betsy Dennis, Shannon Dibble, Grace Farrell, Sally Haselschwardt, Liz Jadin, Genevieve Koehanny, Madison McKenzie, Stevie Murray, Laura Nitchman, Bethany Pearson, Jaime Pettis, Madison Ramsey and Kari Way. Rayder coaches include Haske and assistant coaches Jim Gels and Bret Erskine.

Also being honored with the 2004 girls team is the organizer and first coach of the Charlevoix High School girls basketball program, Toni Felter. Toni followed the 2004 team this year and shared in the pride and delight of their accomplishments.

"When we first started we were a club team and the girls wore their father's sleeveless undershirts and wrote numbers on the back. We have certainly come along way from those early days," Felter said.

Venetian Board President Dan Barron was equally pleased to have the 2004 team serve as Grand Marshals and to provide well deserved recognition to Felter.

"Charlevoix has been very fortunate to have a strong girls basketball program, as well as a strong boys program. This is another great opportunity to share our basketball pride with the community and with all Venetian visitors," Barron said.

County smoking ban draws lawsuit

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

The recently enacted Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation which limits smoking in businesses located in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim and Otsego counties faces a lawsuit.

A lawsuit has been filed against Charlevoix County and the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency by three residents served by the agency. Kent McNeil of Bellaire, and Franklin Fisher and Roger Griffin of East Jordan are calling for Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas to overturn the Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation.

"Counties and other local units of government only have such powers as are granted to them by law and may only adopt ordinances related to county affairs. Charlevoix County has exceeded its authority by passing the act," state East Lansing attorneys Vincent Spagnuolo and Samuel Frederick in a brief they filed on behalf of their clients in Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

The three plaintiffs are smokers who claim they are being adversely effected by the Public Health Clean Indoor Air Regulation which took effect July 14 and prohibits smoking in all enclosed areas of workplaces in Charlevoix, Antrim, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Due to this "adverse effect," the three have asked Judge Pajtas to declare the act invalid

Congratulations on another successful Venetian Festival

Did anyone get the number of that truck?

That is to say, the 75th annual Venetian Festival came in much as it ended, like a juggernaut of fun, excitement and community pride.

The good news is, from the Country Kick-off at spectacular Castle Farms to the dazzling boat parade in Round Lake to 1964s rocking tribute to the Beatles, few towns this size or otherwise can boast a week so jam-packed with events as Charlevoix.

Even the weather cooperated with mostly sunny skies and warm temperatures. It didn't even really start to storm until early Sunday morning — And if you can get Mother Nature to cooperate you're really doing something.

The bad news is some of us have a dubious headache accompanied by an unexplained sensitivity to light and if we even so much as smell another elephant ear we'll likely turn green and pass out.

Another part of the festival we loved was the queen's coronation and we would like to offer our congratulations to Kari Way who we predict will make a wonderful queen.

While we're at it, we would like to say good-bye to last year's queen Danielle Kimble who will be missed.

Who to thank for the great celebration? Well, so many people worked so hard to get things to gether it wouldn't be fair for us to name only a few, but you know who you are, you unsung heroes of Venetian year after year.

The Alma Highland Dancers, Petoskey Steel Drum Band and the Charlevoix alumni playing with the High School Marching Band made the hour-long street parade a cinch for one of the events we found most entertaining this week.

But, we can't forget Chris Dominic, the Kids from Wisconsin and the Detroit Pistons and Shock year-round hoops truck tour which were all grand as well. In fact, the only complaint we have is that the Coney dogs didn't come in low fat.

Oh, and we have a few suggestions for events in next year's festival.

First, maybe we could think about an all-star dunk tank consisting of, for example, some of Charlevoix's community leaders or maybe a bumper car battle between the fire and police department as a Venetian fund-raiser.

The fireworks were spectacular both Friday and Saturday nights. Rayder Rumble II was a nail biter and...oh who are we kidding? We just can't get enough of those elephant ears.

What else can we say other than, we can't wait until the 76th Annual Venetian Festival.

Plant structure dependant on water resources and climate

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

Considering how long we have been without more than a few drops of rain, maybe it would be a good idea to consider how our local plants are surviving.

Plants cannot walk or fly to water and must somehow make out where they are. The real champions at getting along with very little water are plants found in deserts. How do they manage?

There are two approaches that work. If you are a plant and plan to live in a desert you need either very deep roots, reaching down to where there is always water, or you need to store up enough water to get you through the dry times.

In the deep root category the world record so far as I can determine belongs to a Mesquite bush with roots that were followed down during a construction project. The plant had roots that reached more than 170 feet to where there was always water, even in the harshest desert. And large cactuses can store enough water from good times to get along for years without any outside source. I once cut off a 6 inch high cactus plant from my greenhouse and put it on a library shelf to see just how long it might be before it showed any signs of wilting. Six months later it bloomed.

Even an ordinary corn plant will often reach 5 feet below the surface to search out water, and some of our local weeds do better than that. My lawn (some might call it that) is pretty much dry and crisp, except for the weeds. It has not been mowed in more than a month and the grass is certainly not growing. But here and there in that expanse of pale brown, there are vigorous green plants in full bloom. Some of the local beneficiaries are Queen Anne's Lace or Wild Carrot, which has a deep root and is doing well. Yellow Hawkweed is thriving and pushing above the dead-looking grass. And there is even a blooming Chicory plant near the sidewalk. All of them are drawing water from a many feet below the surface. My lawn grass is on its own, because if it doesn't grow, I don't have to mow it.

While my lawn is in deep dormancy, the vegetable garden, consisting almost entirely of plants not native to Michigan, needs a couple of inches of watering twice a week to maintain itself. Tomatoes and squash and Swiss chard need to be watered almost continuously if they are to survive and thrive without rain. A single tomato plant will evaporate at least 30 gallons of water into the air during its growth period. And a Ragweed plant, if you should have one growing well, can pump almost two gallons of water a day from the ground into the air.

Plants clearly need large amounts of water, and get it any way they can. Without a constant supply of water, most plants will completely stop growth, even before they show signs of wilting. And most garden plants deprived of water for a short time will not resume normal growth for nearly a week. If you want your plant to grow, provide abundant water, and if you want it to stop growing, deprive it.

One more astonishing statistic about plant growth and water. The only way most plants can get the water they need without our help is to grow new roots continuously. The amount of root growth is nearly unbelievable. In 1937, a Russian botanist with entirely too much time on his hands, measured and estimated the total length of all roots that had been grown by a two-year-old wheat grass plant. Averaged over the two years that one plant grew 1.5 feet of new roots each minute. No one root grew that fast, of course, but the total root growth averaged to 6 feet per minute. Next time it seems to you that plants are just sitting there not doing much, consider what is going on below ground.

Keep butts in boat

Editor:

It is mid-July now, and we have picked up approximately 830 cigarette butts from our beach front on Lake Charlevoix.

The folks who enjoy the lake seem to have forgotten that tossing their used butts in the water is littering, and they are not biodegradable.

This is a really terrible desecration of our treasured lake. Just a reminder, please keep your butts in your boat.

Congrats on festival success

Editor:

Thanks to the Venetian Festival committee for their hours of planning and work, culminating in another great festival.

Our down state grandchildren especially enjoyed the fireworks, carnival and street parade.

Maybe it's just the name, but we thought Horton Creek was fantastic. Of course, they play and sing wonderful music, too. We hope the committee will have them back and we hope we get to hear them soon in another setting.

Area law enforcement report a busy Venetian Festival week the vicinity of 100,000 people over the course of the week. This population surge multiplied the typical work week of about 50 calls to the city police department.

Out of the 171 calls that city police department received, Halverson said a couple of major incidents stand out. A dangerous situation happened along Bridge Street during the festival when a beer bottle was hurled from the top dining deck at Whitneys of Charlevoix just missing a police officer and smashing the windshield of a nearby car.

A nine-month-old baby was also reported missing during the weekend and was retrieved in the custody of Peter James Shomin, 41, of Suttons Bay. Shomin was arraigned Monday, July 25 and charged with second offense child endangerment for driving drunk with the child in the vehicle. If convicted, Shomin could face a penalty of one to five years in prison, probation, 30 days up to one year in jail, community service work and between $500 and $5,000 in fines.

information is asked to call the city police department at (231) 547-3258. In spite of these major incidents Halverson described the overall festival crime presence as average.

"It was relatively average. The break-in threw us off balance on Saturday — thousands of people were in town and right in the middle of it you've got a crime scene," he said.

To help maintain the crowds, officers with the city department, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Michigan State Police officers, Boyne City Police Department, the tribal police and the coast guard were patrolling in excess each night.

After dealing with the increase in police activity, Halverson said his department is taking a deep breath, finishing up paperwork, stocking supplies and preparing for court appearances.

Local businesses are also letting the dust settle after a hectic week. Barron said restaurants, bars and hotels usually are the biggest beneficiaries of Venetian week.

Jeff Sprecksell, manager of the Weatherlane Restaurant said sales were up a record breaking 30 percent from last year.

New business owner Jeff Klosky, who is vice president of operations for Natelsons, Inc., owners of Bridge Street Clothiers, said the increased crowds, did not result in skyrocketing sales throughout the week for his retail store. He said they had a good sale day on Saturday, but it wasn't unlike any other summer Saturday.

"It's not what we projected but we are new to the area as well. We weren't disappointed," Klosky said.

With another festival under his belt, Barron, rested Sunday and was back to planning Monday morning when he met with local officials to talk highs and lows of this year's festival.

The start of Barron's summer means the beginning of next year's festival planning.

"Some things (for next year) are already planned," he said.

He and his board members will soon evaluate this year's festival to determine what changes they need to make.

Performing arts fund-raisers

Editor:

On behalf of the Charlevoix High School performing arts students and parent support group, we would like to thank the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce for allowing us to sell water at the craft show and assist the crafters with their setup and tear down. Thanks to all students, parents, families and the community volunteers. Your time and energy are much appreciated. Thanks to our other sponsors for helping patrons and vendors keep cool at the park. We look forward to participating in this event next year. Thank you Lyddy for our beautiful banner.

We would also like to extend thanks to people who donated items and volunteered at our Ferry Beach Garage Sale. The back to back fund-raising events, while hectic, offered opportunity to show the Charlevoix community our commitment to the performing arts at Charlevoix High School. Thank you to Connie Ford and Beth for your commitment. Best wishes to Beth and her family on their new adventures.

A parent meeting is scheduled for Monday, Aug. 1 in the cafeteria at Charlevoix Area Hospital. The upcoming school events calendar will be reviewed and discussed. An ice cream social is scheduled for current and new performing arts students Aug. 28, at Ferry Beach. Invitations will be in the mail. We welcome community support and would like to remind you that we have an on-going can and bottle drive in place. Please call Cody Morrison at (231) 547-4595 for pickup.

We look forward to seeing you at the theater.

Water testing grant awarded to four county health agency

Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) have awarded competitive grants to the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency to monitor beaches and lake water on Lake Michigan and other inland lakes in Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Sampling of area beaches started in late June and will continue through early September. Cayla Tinney, a college student from Charlevoix, samples lake water at 39 beaches three days a week in the Health Department's four-county health district. Collected samples are analyzed at the Northern Michigan Regional Laboratory — the health department's new water quality laboratory in Gaylord. Results are usually reported within 24 hours, which allows for rapid response to water quality problems.

The "2005 Public Bathing Beach Program" includes water testing at 18 Lake Michigan beaches and 21 inland beaches and is sampled for e-coli bacteria, which is an indicator of sewage or fecal contamination from warm-blooded mammals. Fecal contamination in surface waters can carry a number of pathogenic bacteria and viruses and can cause severe illness. "By conducting water quality testing on an ongoing basis, we can monitor the safety of local waters for recreational use by the public," said Scott Kendzierski, director of environmental health. "We're committed to the protection of these waters — they are some of the most valuable natural resources in northern Michigan."

In addition to water testing, Tinney also evaluates health and safety factors for each public beach, such as drinking water supplies, waste and sanitary facilities, and rescue and safety equipment.

"Our beach program is more than just water quality," Kendzierski said. "We are looking at other risk factors that could result in illness or injury to area beach goers."

Beach assessment information is part of the evaluation process for beach closures. It is also included in the health department's geographic information system database.

"As growth and development continues throughout the region, many beaches, which were previously isolated, may now be impacted by expansion of recreational boating, marinas, storm water discharges, and on-site wastewater systems. It is only through continued monitoring that we may measure the impact of these activities as well as protect the public health," Kendzierski said.

Closure information and testing results for public beaches in Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties are available on the health department Web site at www.nwhealth.org.

Geocaching catches on in Charlevoix

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Geocaching is a pastime for rates at heart.

Over the past two years, Charlevoix seasonal resident Tom Hassett has gone Geocaching 82 times, in locations around the world.

"My daughter-in-law got us started Geocaching," Hassett said. "I've cached on Vancouver Island. And, we just got back from Scotland, so they are literally all over the world."

Geocaching, which comes from Geo. for earth and caching for hiding things in a cache, is more or less a high-tech treasure hunt wherein coordinates of the treasure or cache are listed on a Web site or other location and treasure hunters look for them using a Global Positioning System (GPS).

Hassett said his daughter-in-law lives in Seattle, Wash. where Geocaching set its roots.

"Out in the Seattle area there are thousands of sites," he said. "We did some caches with them and I got hooked so I bought a GPS and started caching around here."

Geocaching began in 2003 when select availability was lifted by the federal government allowing all people to use GPS technology.

The main tool to use in Geocaching is the handheld GPS system, a small computer, accurate generally within 6 to 20 feet, which talks to satellites to figure out where you are on earth within given latitude and longitude coordinates called a way point.

GPS can range in price from around $100 to $1,000. Among the many features of these systems are maps of North America, touch screen capability, voice prompts to tell you directions, a remote control and full color display, providing routes to locations with a high degree of accuracy.

Hassett's first Geocaching experience in the Charlevoix area was near Susan Lake.

"What I enjoy most, besides the challenge of finding the cache, is it takes us into areas we probably wouldn't have found or wouldn't have known were there," he said.

According to Hassett, there are over 100 caches within 30 miles of Charlevoix right now.

A cache may contain photos, jewelry, books, crafts or anything one can think of.

"The idea of the cache is that you take something from the cache and leave something of similar value — Hotwheels cars and similar trinkets," he said. "Sometimes if you are a first time finder you get a first-finder prize, that could be a $5 bill or some other first-finder prize."

According to Hassett, cache hunters usually love the outdoors, so they hide the caches in scenic areas.

"In the northwest where they are really serious about these they have overnight ones," Hassett said. "You may go to one cache and get one digit to the final cache and then you go to another cache and get another coordinate to the final cache."

He added, "Those can take weeks. Some of them are quite involved."

Hassett said while he was in Puget Sound in Washington, he had to scramble down a cliff and go through a low tide area to find a small island where a cache was hidden.

According to Hassett, Geocaching is for all age groups.

"It's a real good family activity," he said. "And, all the caches are rated with stars on how difficult the owner thinks it is to find, so you can decide whether you want to go somewhere with difficult or easy terrain."

And, Hassett said, some caches are even handicap accessible.

Hassett said he went Geocaching with a friend in Hale who had lived there for 30 years and never knew it was there until he went Geocaching.

"The bottom line for us is that it's challenging to find them and we visit places we would have never visited," Hassett said.

A cache can be placed in Brazil, Russia or China, either on the top of a mountain or in the bottom of the sea and anyone from around the world may attempt to find the cache.

While Geocaching sounds easy, the location of the cache is usually within a few meters of the coordinates depending on what style of Geocaching you are playing.

Some of the many ways to play the game are virtual caches which are landmarks instead of containers full of goodies. The landmarks can Hassett said.

Offset caches, which are not located right under the coordinates, generally have coordinates near a landmark that you want your cache hunter to visit.

Hassett said, some caches are like puzzles, wherein you must solve a riddle to receive the coordinates to a cache.

Though Geocaching styles differ, the basic rules are take an item from the cache, leave something in the cache and record your experience or at least time, date and name in the logbook in the cache.

Generally, unless there are specific instructions to alter or move the cache they are to be left where you find them and some people have signature items such as wooden nickels or a laminated card with their name on it.

"I found one, it was a little figure of a baseball player. His goal was to have it visit every major league baseball park and have pictures taken of it at the park," Hassett said.

There are also trinkets called travel bugs which have a serialized tag on them.

"When you find a travel bug, you log where you find it and then you move it to another cache," he said.

Many states even have groups who produce serialized coins called geocoins. People can stash the geocoins in their cache and with the help of the Internet, track the different cities, states and countries the coin is taken to.

Gourmet picnic to benefit performing arts

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, July 27, 2005 - PAGE 11

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Funding for visual arts programs at Charlevoix Public Schools has been cut to next to nothing, said Sue Acharya, co-owner of Esperance Wine and Gourmet food store in Charlevoix.

Sue Acharya and her husband, Pram, are taking an active approach to curb the financial dilemma, which effects more than 1,500 students enrolled in the district's kindergarten through twelfth grade classes. Partnering with the Charlevoix Council for the Arts, the Acharyas will host a wine tasting and gourmet picnic Aug. 16 at Esperance, located on US-31 North.

Food for the event has been donated by Oleson's and Esperance, while wineries from the Leelanau Peninsula to New Zealand have bestowed their bottles as auction items. All proceeds will benefit Charlevoix Public Schools visual arts programs, whose budget has been steadily reduced over the past three years.

"We have very talented kids up here, in all aspects, and a lot of people don't really see that," said Sue Acharya, a former employee of Charlevoix High School. "There are shop teachers that do woodworking and go to state (competition) every year. The performing arts have placed at state finals every year and our bands always do well at solo ensemble. We have to support the fact that, for some kids out there, this (art) is their passion."

Esperance co-owner Pram Acharya, sensed the severity of budget cuts to area schools when an art teacher gleefully accepted his donation of empty bottles, coffee canisters and large dress shirts for student use.

"This is tugging at our heartstrings," he said, adding that three of his family's four children have graduated from the Charlevoix Public Schools. "Spending a day at the elementary school and watching these little sponges, how they change, it's amazing. It brightens my day."

The Acharyas, residents of Charlevoix since 1995, have already raised nearly $500 for Charlevoix schools' visual art programs this year. In April, they partnered with the Charlevoix Council for the Arts to host a gourmet picnic fair at Esperance. Aside from their own efforts to raise funds and awareness for the apparent crisis in public schools, the Acharyas have donated Esperance goods to the recent D'Art for Art in Bay Harbor, the American Eye Association in Detroit, the Bergmann Center in Charlevoix and the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

Sue Acharya says these contributions are all part of operating a business in a small town.

"When we live in such an isolated area where access to theater, social-political platforms are limited, the only other expression left to help these kids is art, whether it's performing arts, fine arts, visual arts, music," said Pram Acharya.

John Guirey, director of the art program at Charlevoix High School, is grateful for local businesses like Esperance who have devoted their time, energy and resources to helping keep arts education programs afloat. With four classes at capacity and general electives being axed, Guirey is feeling the pinch of depleting, and essential, supplies for his students.

"The arts are not a frill. They are part of students' education," said Mary Beth McGraw, director of the art program at Charlevoix Elementary School and president of the Charlevoix Council for the Arts. "Unfortunately, supplies are expensive and because of the cuts we're working with the bare essentials."

McGraw reasoned that cuts to the visual arts programs' supply budget, although maddening, are keeping art classes in existence.

"Money for prints to study artists of the past is something I've always had to cut," said McGraw, who oversees the art education of about 400 students in kindergarten through fourth grade. "Because it's a sequential program (art classes are required at the elementary and middle school levels, but are considered electives in high school), we need to prioritize to service so many kids."

PUBLIC NOTICE

APPEARS IN YOUR NEWSPAPER.

Currently, and historically, it is the responsibility of state and local government to publish public and legal notices here in Michigan's newspapers. This paper you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. And its pages hold your right to know what the government is doing in your community. In fact, it's law.

In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. That is why you have, and read, your newspaper, where public notices are published with accountable circulation and presented to you on these pages in clear black and white.

Upcoming wine tasting to benefit arts some students' days. For some academically-at-risk students, she said, budding artistic ability keeps them wanting to come to school every day.

Echoing the words of Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent Dr. John Sturock, Smith said if visual arts funding continues to stagnate for the next two years, some serious changes will have to be made to the district's art curriculum. Dissolving entire courses may not be out of the question.

"It's a scary time," said McGraw.

Smith, McGraw and Guirey agreed that an education in the arts is professionally advantageous and a key component to critical thinking.

"Businesses are looking for students who can think creatively," said Guirey.

Stressing the necessity of the visual arts programs, McGraw said the inventive and analytical nature of art challenges students to "think outside the box and problem solve."

Sturock noted the strength of art electives at Charlevoix High School, but lamented cuts have been made to programs "across the board" and an increase in state funding has yet to be seen.

"With the funding issue we're facing in Michigan, people will have to continue to look for alternative ways to fund programs," he said.

Although the Acharyas share a personal association with the Charlevoix Public Schools and a genuine appreciation for the arts, the upcoming fund-raiser is also a vessel for them to share their good fortune. Their oldest daughter, now studying in Copenhagen, Denmark, was awarded the Waterfront Art Fair and Historical Society scholarships.

"Our children have been recipients of a lot of nice things from the community so we feel we can be responsible in giving something back to the community," said Pram Archerya. "Even the people that just pass through, everyone does something to help us succeed. We just want to do something that says 'thank you.'"

The fund-raiser at Esperance will feature a silent auction during which guests may bid on wine donated from California's McKenzie-Mueller Vineyards and Winery - Sharon McKenzie, the wife of this vineyard's winemaker, teaches art at Napa High School.

Also available to guests is a wine tasting package for three couples from Larry Mawby's vineyards in Suttons Bay on the Leelanau Peninsula. Complementing a day at the winery, Esperance will pack a picnic lunch for the six recipients.

The Acharyas have selected New Zealand winemaker Stu Devine, of Villa Maria Winery, to be an exclusive guest.

"Stu is gregarious. He has a lot of personality," said Pram Archerya. "I want people to be engaged in this. Also, Villa Maria is a winery that has been around for a long time and they have wines at multi-level pricing. So it's a wine for everybody. New Zealand white wines are amazing, but no one really knows the red wines. We want to show people new things."

Exemplary student artwork from area schools will also be on display, said Smith. Also scheduled to attend the event is Trish Morgan, a graduate from Charlevoix High School whose watercolors are a mainstay exhibit at Esperance along with several North Seas Gallery pieces.

"The artists that have either graduated from the public schools or who move up here are very much willing to donate to this cause," said Sue Archerya, adding that the Aug. 16 event is intended to kick off what she hopes will become an annual fund-raiser.

Tickets for the wine tasting and gourmet picnic are available in advance at Esperance. Cost is $20 per person and attendance is limited to 100 guests. Call Sue or Pram at Esperance for further information at (231) 237-9300.

THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX ORDAINS:
SECTION 1. The current provision of Section 1.57 of the City Code shall be deleted and shall now read as follows:

1.57. Contracts with city officials and city employees

A city official or city employee, a member of that individual's immediate family, a firm in which a city official or city employee is an owner or partner, a corporation in which a city official or city employee is a stockholder owning more than 1% of the corporation's stock, or a firm in which a city official or city employee is an employee shall not enter into a contract with the City without prior approval of the City Council. When a proposed contract is for services that are imposed on the city as a regular duty by state law or local ordinance, the requirement of prior city council approval, described in the first sentence, shall not apply to a corporation in which a city official or city employee is a stockholder owning more than 1% of the corporation's stock or to a firm or corporation in which a city official or city employee is an employee. The requirement of prior city council approval shall also apply to sub-contracts between a city official or city employee and a third-party who has a contract with the City. The approval must be made by motion at a public meeting by a vote of a majority of those City Council members who are present and entitled to vote on the proposed contract. If the city official is a member of the City Council, then the consideration of whether to approve the contract shall be made without the vote of that City Council member. When considering whether to approve the contract, the following information shall be disclosed and made a part of the official record of the City Council: the name of each party involved in the contract; the terms of the contract, including duration, financial consideration between the parties; the facilities or services of the City that will be affected by the contract; the nature and degree of assignment of City employees needed for fulfillment of the contract; and the nature of any monetary interest of the city official or city employee in the contract. As used in this section, a "firm" shall mean a sole proprietorship, a partnership, a limited liability company or any other type of business entity except for a corporation. The requirement of prior approval of the City Council to a contract with a city official or city employee shall not apply to:

- (a) routine expenditures for goods or services under $ 500.00; or
- (b) emergency expenditures for goods or services under $ 1,500.00;

Charlevoix City council adopts conflict policy

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Charlevoix city council's conflict of interest concerns were laid to rest — at least for now.

Third ward council member Shirley Gibson said, "If I see any checks written to council members I will make a motion to limit Mr. Wiesner's spending. I'm going to be watching them like a hawk."

At council's July 18 meeting they voted unanimously to accept a policy that will allow city manager Mike Wiesner to pay city officials, city employees or family members of the two groups up to $500 for goods or services and up to $1,500 for emergency expenditures for goods and services without prior approval from Charlevoix City Council.

This policy was adopted following almost a year of debate and two public hearings on the issue.

Debate started in September of 2004 after city financial auditors with the firm Rehmann Robson operating out of a Cheboygan office recommended to city management a change in the city's conflict of interest policy.

At that time, Wiesner had the power to hire anyone for any job under $10,000, even if they are council members, without informing council first.

However, according to city attorney Jim Young, this was against state law.

According to Young, there is a state law that says the city may not make any purchases or give contracts to firms or individuals that are on council or are city employees without prior council approval. However, there are some exceptions to the rule for a community the size of Charlevoix.

He said council can allow the city to purchase equipment or contract with a council member or city employee for any job under a certain amount of money. Plus, council can make a similar ruling that deals with emergency situations at a slightly higher amount. This was ultimately the direction council took.

Both rules carry the stipulation that council must be informed of the purchase or work at the next council meeting.

Gibson, who pushed on several occasions for the city to adopt the state law which would allow no contracts to go to the two groups, said, "It's giving them jobs with the appearance of the city manager influencing votes. I don't feel it's restrictive enough but it is as good as we are going to get with the city council and city manager that we have."

Several city department heads had expressed concern about adopting the state law without exceptions, saying, in many cases, businesses owned by council members are the ones that know the most about how the city works.

For example, if the city has a boiler emergency it usually calls Haggard Plumbing and Heating, which is owned by council member Bill Haggard, because that company installed the boiler.

In a previous interview Mayor Norman Carlson said under the newly adopted rule the city can continue to use businesses owned by council members and allow full public disclosure.

Application for ownership of lighthouse to be submitted

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

This week, the City of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix Historical Society plan to submit an application to acquire ownership of Charlevoix's signature lighthouse that sits along the South Pier.

Charlevoix mayor Norman Carlson said, "The federal government is giving up the lighthouse and the city has the first chance at it. If we decided not to pursue ownership, a private individual could have bought it. We want to maintain it as a public landmark."

On March 7, 2005, the property became available at no cost to federal, state, local and educational agencies, non-profit corporations or community development organizations. The government relinquished ownership as the United States Coast Guard no longer needs the property.

At the city council meeting Monday, July 18, council unanimously supported submission of the application to acquire the lighthouse.

Mike Bergeon, a member of the Charlevoix Historical Society Board of Directors, polished the application and will mail it to the National Parks Service this week.

The parks service has final approval of the transfer of ownership.

The application included council's approval along with letters of support from community organizations including the historical society, the Charlevoix Lions Club, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority and Charlevoix Public Schools.

Bergeon said he is expecting the five-person parks service panel in charge of reviewing the application to return it with requests for additions and amendments.

The plan is for the city to maintain ownership of the lighthouse while the local historical society leases it and steers grant writing and fund-raising ventures to maintain and repair it.

"Between the two of us we qualify for more grants to maintain it," Carlson said.

According to Mary Adams, the historical society board member heading up the lighthouse initiative, most federal and state grant opportunities are matches.

This means that whatever funds both governmental entities may provide have to be matched at the local level by private grants and donations.

Grant applications through the Michigan Lighthouse Assistance Program are due at the end of August. The South Pier Lighthouse will not be eligible this year as it will take about eight months for the ownership transfer to be complete.

Other state grants are available through the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality's Coastal Management Program and through the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Once city ownership of the light-house is official, historical society members plan to partner with community residents to plan fund-raisers.

Immediate restoration of the lighthouse will cost around $180,000. Adams said projects will be tackled in phases over a three-year period as funds are available.

Last year, officers with the local United States Coast Guard handled vital stabilization repairs and repainted its exterior.

"That helped us out tremendously," Adams said.

Pump Gas?

I can do that!

Northwestern Bank employee Marci Sullivan received a call from a customer who was traveling to Muskegon. He had applied for a debit card but it wasn't yet activated. There he was, miles from home, at a gas station with no way to pay for fuel he'd already pumped.

So Marci spoke with the store manager and provided her own credit card number to pay for her customer's gas. Then she personally activated his debit card. Whenever you hear any Northwestern Bank employee say "I can do that!" you'll quickly realize they really mean it.

Sunnybank facility to open in fall 2006

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The grand opening of the Sunnybank-Charlevoix assisted living community scheduled for late winter/early spring of 2006 is right on schedule.

According to Sunnybank owner-operator Ruth Bellissimo, who has been in the business since 1984, there will be 49 apartments available at the Charlevoix facility which is currently under construction.

"It's moving along pretty well," she said. "Right now we're putting it together in wings."

The site is located off Petoskey Avenue, across the street from Don's IGA.

Sunnybank-Charlevoix will be an assisted living community instead of a nursing home which means it is more like an apartment complex with amenities including an on-site beauty salon, a library and scheduled transportation.

"It's not as intense as a nursing home. Instead of the medical mode it's a more social mode," Bellissimo said. "Although our residents can have assistance with showers, getting dressed and those sorts of things."

There are also housekeeping, laundry and scheduled activities included in the package.

"You're not alone and there is a security aspect to it as well because we are staffed 24 hours a day," she said. "And, they get three good meals a day."

Despite the fact that Sunnybank-Charlevoix isn't a nursing home, there will be a private personal care business operating on site in case residents need the service.

"Residents can contract with them to get care or they can bring in an outside caregiver to take care of them here. And we are active in hospice participation," she said. "We're very flexible as far as tending to the needs of our residents. We can fit whatever care they need to their person."

Bellissimo added there is no age restriction at Sunnybank and as a result she had a young man who had been in a motorcycle accident who stayed at Sunnybank-Petoskey for nearly a month.

Bellissimo said that while the slots will go fast, there are still spaces available at the new Charlevoix location.

She added, "There is considerable interest and we do get calls here every day."

City hires attorney to pursue lawsuit

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

The City of Charlevoix has hired an attorney that will likely pursue charges against its insurance provider for not covering a check for over $220,000 that was misdirected and cashed.

At city council's July 18 meeting, council members voted unanimously to hire Bob DeJong, an attorney with Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, P.L.C. DeJong will take the lead in the case the city plans to pursue against Michigan Municipal League Insurance, its insurance carrier.

DeJong's fees include a $290 hourly rate as well as 28 percent of the total amount the city may or may not recover as a result of the judge's ruling.

While council voted unanimously in favor of hiring DeJong they discussed that there is no certain favorable outcome for the city.

First ward councilman Bob Timms, said, "Are we going to spend money to hopefully gain something."

Mayor Norman Carlson responded that he feels DeJong's agreement to honor a contingency fee reflects his confidence in the strength of the city's pending claim.

Council members ultimately agreed that while the fees seem steep, the city stands to lose over $220,000 if some relief is not found.

According to third ward council member Shirley Gibson, the city's position in this possible litigation is that its insurance carrier should cover a check for over $220,000 that was misdirected and cashed.

The city has sought coverage from its insurer. But representatives of Michigan Municipal League Insurance did not agree to pay the bill. The city has not yet opted to pursue treasurer's bonds that also cover incidents like the check debacle.

The check at the heart of this pending litigation was written to CCMS, a contractor hired by the city to work on roads and sidewalks. However, the check was supposed to be written to CCMS insurer, United Fire and Casualty. United was then supposed to pay subcontractors hired by CCMS for those projects.

A report given to council in February outlining why the mistake was made pointed to miscommunication.

Charlevoix City Treasurer Rick Brandi, who was on vacation when the check was issued, claims he was not aware United Fire was supposed to be paid instead of CCMS. United Fire claims they sent a letter to Brandi with check writing instructions, prior to his vacation, but Brandi says he never received it.

Brandi's stamped signature as well as that of deputy city clerk Stephanie Brown, appeared on the check.

When Brandi realized the check was issued in error, he called the city's bank and tried to stop payment but it was too late, CCMS had cashed the check.

This mistake resulted in United Fire and Casualty suing the City of Charlevoix. In December of 2004 the city agreed to end the suit by paying United Fire the over $220,000 it already paid CCMS.

City police chief Dennis Halverson has been investigating possible charges against CCMS.

Because the check was cashed in St. Ignace he has been working with a detective from Michigan State Police post there. Halverson said that at this time they haven't concluded whether there was a criminal violation associated with the check cashing by CCMS or not.

At Monday's meeting council also signed a contract with Michael Neihardt, a detective with Michael Neihardt Investigations in Kalkaska to look into what went wrong at city hall to have landed the city in this predicament. Neihardt's fees were approved at $850 or less. This investigation started this week.

LEGAL NOTICE 210

PUBLIC NOTICE-Date: July 27, 2005-Permit No. M10003158-St. Marys Cement-Charlevoix-The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality proposes to reissue a discharge permit to: the St. Barbara Cement, Inc. (formerly known as CEMEX, Inc.) for the St. Marys Cement - Charlevoix Plant (formerly known as CEMEX - Charlevoix Plant) located at 16000 Bells Bay Road, Charlevoix, Michigan 49720. The facility manufactures Portland cement and Masonry cement. The applicant discharges contact cooling water, groundwater seepage, quarry dewatering water, noncontact cooling water, storm water runoff, treated groundwater, cement kiln dust (CKD) pile seepage, coal pile runoff, sump water, and CKD landfill leachate to Lake Michigan, in the SW1/4, NW1/4, Section 28, Town 34 N, Range 8 W, and to Lake Michigan via a drainage ditch, in the SE1/4, NE1/4, Section 29, Town 34 N, Range 8 W, and to Lake Michigan via a drainage ditch, in the NE1/4, SW1/4, Section 28, Town 34 N, Range 8 W, and to an unnamed intermittent creek via a settling pond, in the NW1/4, SE1/4, Section 32, Town 34 N, Range 8 W, Charlevoix County. The draft permit includes the following modifications to the previously-issued permit: A final effluent limitation for Total Mercury of 10 ng/l has been included at Outfall 001, which is the Level Currently Achievable based on a multiple discharger variance from the water quality-based effluent limit of 1.3 ng/l, pursuant to Rule 323.1103(9) of the Michigan Water Quality Standards. The permittee, facility name, and designated name have been changed to reflect a change in ownership. Monitoring requirements for total antimony, total copper, total manganese, total selenium, total silver, total thallium, total vanadium, and total zinc from Outfalls 001, 002, 003, and 004 have been removed because these parameters are not being discharged at levels of concern. Authorization to discharge treated groundwater from monitoring point 002B has been increased from a maximum of 0.03 MGD to a maximum of 0.07 MGD. Effluent limitations for Total Suspended Solids (TSS) through monitoring point 001B and Outfall 004 have been adjusted to comply with federal requirements which are based on annual production. Effluent limitations for TSS have been included for Outfalls 002, 003, and 004. Effluent limitations for temperature have been applied to Outfalls 001 and 002. CKD landfill leachate was identified as a new discharge source. The CKD landfill leachate has been authorized through Outfalls 002 and 003. The CKD landfill leachate is similar to the previously-approved CKD pile seepage. This draft permit authorizes an increased loading of pollutants to Lake Michigan which will lower the water quality with respect to certain parameters. In accordance with Rule 323.1098 of the Michigan Water Quality Standards, the applicant has provided a statement of exemption from antidegradation requirements. As part of the decision process, the Department is proposing that the requirements of Rule 323.1098, and that an antidegradation demonstration is not required. Comments or objections to the draft permit received by August 29, 2005, will be considered in the final decision to issue the permit. Persons desiring information regarding the draft permit, procedures for commenting, or requesting a hearing should contact: Sean Syts, Permits Section, Water Bureau, Department of Environmental Quality, P.O. Box 30273, Lansing, Michigan 48909, telephone: 517-335-4123, e-mail: syts@mi.dem.state.mi.us. Copies of the public notice, fact sheet, exemption from antidegradation statement, and draft permit may be obtained via the Internet (<http://www.michigan.gov/deq>) and on the left side of the screen click on Water, Surface Water, and NPDES Permits; then click on "Permits on Public Notice" which is under the Permits banner) or at the Water Bureau Cadillac District Office located at 120 West Chapin Street, Cadillac, Michigan 49601, telephone: 231-775-3960.

Joe Skerbeck: Life as a fifth generation carnie

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Thousands of people patronized the carnival during Venetian Festival, but few realize the hard work and dedication which goes into providing such a fantastical flurry of flashing lights and thrilling rides.

It was only the tenth year the Skerbeck Carnival has come to Charlevoix during Venetian, but owner Joe Skerbeck's entertainment heritage goes back nearly 150 years.

"I'm fifth generation," Skerbeck said. "My great, great grandfather started back in Europe in 1857 when he opened a circus in Bohemia."

Skerbeck's ancestors eventually came to America in 1881 where they carried on the tradition.

According to Skerbeck, after World War II, people no longer had a strong interest in sideshows and Wild West shows, they wanted rides instead.

"So the carnival became king," he said.

Skerbeck offers over 50 rides, with 14 featured at this year's Venetian Festival.

"It takes about a day and a half to set up," Skerbeck said. "10 hours to set up and about six hours to clean up and get the light bulbs in."

According to Skerbeck, tear down takes about four to five hours depending on the amount of equipment and space available.

The carnival travels a little over six months of the year all over the state of Michigan sometimes doing a couple of days in Ohio or Indiana.

"Generally we open up in Kalkaska in late April and close up generally in late October," Skerbeck said. "I like the traveling, it's a challenge to move this much equipment every week — sometimes more than once a week — so people can enjoy it."

He added, "The best thing is I have my family with me. This is one thing, outside of farming, where you get to see your kids and grandkids everyday."

Because it is such hard work and so much travel is involved, Skerbeck said, his business turns over about 20 percent a month.

"There are always people coming and going," he said. "They either love it or they hate it."

The Skerbeck Carnival has two units so they can service two different cities at one time.

The unit in Charlevoix last week has someone who has worked with Skerbeck since 1988 and the other carnival unit that his brother runs, which is currently in Ohio, has a worker who has been with them since 1955.

He said, "He loves the business, it keeps him feeling good."

Skerbeck has children and even grandchildren working and traveling in the carnival with him.

"It really is a family organization," he said.

The carnival employs some people year-round who work on the equipment

"Every ride gets inspected every day by a state certified inspector," he said. "Anything that needs attention they fix immediately."

Skerbeck said his favorite ride is probably the merry-go-round because he can take his young grandchildren on it.

While Skerbeck has been with the carnival his entire life, his son, Jamie has a business degree and went on to work for a couple corporations before deciding to come back to the family business.

"He likes the family aspect of it," he said. "It gets in your blood — it's just something you feel drawn to."

Skerbeck also said he never gets sick of cotton candy because he never eats it.

Skerbeck said his employees get to be like family because they are around each other all the time for nearly half the year.

"When you break this show up in the fall, most of these people are sad that they won't see their friends the next week," he said. "We're the complete support system."

While traveling, the carnival workers or carnies, live out of RV's and dormitory trucks.

Generally they get their experience on the job, but as long as they have a little bit of initiative and a good work ethic Skerbeck said they can be taught.

Under the supervision of an experienced operator, it takes approximately two weeks to learn how to operate one of the more complex rides such as the ferris wheel.

Skerbeck said all those prizes which people vie for in the midway go fast.

Five-year-old Kelsy Winters takes a gleeful spin on the motorcycle ride Friday afternoon during the Venetian Festival. This is one of many rides offered by Skerbeck Carnival.

"All together this week we'll go through close to a semi truck full of prizes," he said.

He added, prizes offered at his carnival range from $1.50 to as much as $80-$100 retail.

Skerbeck thanked City Manager Mike Wiesner, Street Department Superintendent John Martin and Charlevoix Venetian Festival, Inc. president Dan Barron among others for being so hospitable.

"It's always been a pleasure to come to Charlevoix. I've made a lot of friends of city employees and they've worked hard to make it a successful cooperative venture," he said. "I can't think of a prettier place I'd rather be this week."

Timms to face Swayze-Doan and Bennett at Aug. 2 primary

Timms' time in office has been centered around his close eye focused on city spending.

"I'm trying to protect taxpayers funds," he said.

His most recent mission is to earmark infrastructure millage money for intra-structure projects only.

Timms' competition, Swayze-Doan, is a 44-year-old mother of two, married to Charlevoix City Police officer Gerard Doan, who has lived in Charlevoix for almost 20 years.

This is Doan's second time running for council, in November of 2004 she was defeated by incumbent and current first ward councilman, Bill Haggard. Her interest in politics peaked in March of 2003 when the city planning commission started exploring a zoning ordinance amendment to include assisted living in the single family residential district as a special use.

Since then Doan has attended most council meetings and said she belongs at the big table.

"I've always been involved — I've attended meetings and I know what the current issues are. I think I represent the average citizen well," she said.

The third candidate, Bennett, a 53-year-old father of two and husband of Sandra Bennett is a former long-time City of Charlevoix planning commissioner and a past president of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Bennett said he decided to run for council this year, for the first time, after attending council meetings and feeling as though constituents are not being well represented.

"The people need to have their voice spoken — and I'm not hearing that much," he said. "I feel I'm capable of being a voice of the people."

Ochs said write-in candidates for the primary will be accepted up to Friday, July 29 at her office located in city hall.

For more information, about filing as a write-in or to vote using an absentee ballot, contact Ochs at (231) 547-3250.

Registered voters who want an absentee ballot mailed to them must submit their application in writing to Ochs by 2 p.m. Saturday, July 30. Her office will be open from noon to 2 p.m. that day to handle absentee requests.

Residents who want to vote an absentee ballot in person must do so by 4 p.m. Monday, Aug. 1.

Voters who are prevented from attending the polls due to circumstances such as a sudden illness or a family death may request an emergency absentee ballot until 4 p.m. on election day.

According to Secretary of State Tom Lynn Land this election marks the third election under Michigan's new consolidated election law.

"Every election is important whether it's local, state or national," Land said. "Don't pass up a chance to have a say in matters that affect you. This is democracy in action but its success depends on you. I encourage voters to make their voices heard by going to the polls on Aug. 2."

The consolidated election law was signed in January 2004. According to Land, it makes elections more efficient and cost-effective by limiting them to four dates a year. Those dates are the fourth Tuesday in February and the first Tuesday after the first Monday in May, August and November. The first two elections under the law were Feb. 22 and May 3.

Second and third ward Charlevoix City Council seats will be up for grabs at the November general election. At the general election, second ward councilman Bill Bellows will face Eugene Beer. Third ward council member Shirley Gibson is running uncontested at this time.

Color after the storm

On July 21, this colorful double rainbow appeared after a short rainfall that brought .05 inches to the Charlevoix area. Prior to that it had not rained since July 5. Charlevoix has received about 3 inches less rainfall this year than at this time last year.

Testimony to be used in murder trial

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Alleged gunman, David Goldstick charged with the late April slaying of Hubert William (Bill) Brady, sought to fight the validity of the confessions he made the day of and following the murder.

On Tuesday, July 26, Goldstick appeared in Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court.

At the Walker hearing Goldstick's lawyer, Robert Banner, attempted to have his client's confessions suppressed. But after nearly seven hours of testimony, Judge Richard Pajtas denied the motion.

According to Charlevoix County Prosecutor, John Jarema, the standard for a valid confession is whether the defendant knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily made statements when the right to both counsel and silence are waived.

"That's why the actual substance of the confession isn't an issue, it's the background leading up to the confession," Jarema said.

Banner also requested the hearing be closed to the public as well as the news media in order to maintain an untainted jury pool, but the judge denied that request as well, citing that the Walker hearing would not prohibit Goldstick from getting a fair trial.

"In weighing and balancing these issues before the court, it is the court's decision not to bar the media or the public," Judge Pajtas said.

Pajtas said the actual statements made by the defendant were not the subject of the Walker hearing and therefore the media wouldn't be reporting anything the public shouldn't hear.

Throughout the day, Jarema questioned Det. Mike Wheat, Lt. Charles Vondra and Sheriff George T. Lasater, all of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, as to whether they gave the defendant significant warning of his right not to answer questions before his arrest, as well as his Miranda rights once placed in custody.

"Did you ever threaten Mr. Goldstick? Did you ever coerce him," Jarema said.

Wheat said, "No. Goldstick was very cooperative."

Jarema questioned Wheat concerning Goldstick's first confession.

"I read him his Miranda rights then asked him, 'What made you do this to Brady,'" Wheat said.

Jarema also asked Wheat if Goldstick seemed like he was hearing voices or acting delusional during questioning to which Wheat said, "No."

When Goldstick took the stand Tuesday he testified that he had been under a high level of stress when he made his original statements.

According to Goldstick, he didn't realize the implications of his decision to waive his right to silence and counsel at the time.

He added that police officials he spoke to on the day of the murder and in the days following did not threaten or coerce him into his confessions.

Timms and Bennett take the first ward city primary

Robert Timms and Steven Bennett came out on top in the first ward Charlevoix City Council primary race.

Nearly 200 voters turned out in all between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. at the Aug. 2 primary election. Timms, the incumbent received the most support with 82 votes while Bennett wasn't far behind with 76 votes. Rebecca Lynne Swayze-Doan came in last with 36 votes and one person voted for a write-in candidate which didn't count because no write-in candidate was announced.

Charlevoix City Clerk, Carol Ochs, said there hasn't been a primary for city council members in about 20 years.

"For council members with an election for just one precinct, we had a pretty good turnout with 20 percent," she said. "That's nothing to sneeze at."

According to Bennett, he is pleased with the way things are going.

"Well I'm thrilled, I'm happy and I'm ready to take it to the next step," he said. Bennett said he hopes he gets the win in the general election so he can begin serving the city and the people.

"I'm thankful that I had support and that people believe in me," he said. "It's just nice that people heard what I had to say and believed in what my goals are for the position."

It seems Bennett wouldn't want to go up against any other candidate.

He added, "I respect Mr. Timms in-Public art debuts at local library

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Charlevoix Public Library welcomed a bold new piece of art to its front lawn early this week.

"American Pie," a colorful kinetic sculpture crafted by Cadillac artist David Petrakovich, will be a fixture on the front lawn at the library for the next six months.

"We are really striving to incorporate art in the library. There are few public places in the city (of Charlevoix) where art can be shown and viewed that aren't retail galleries," Charlevoix Public Library Director Valerie Meyerson said.

The sculpture is one of seven pieces of public art valued in total at $140,000 touring northern Michigan communities in conjunction with the rotating art collection "Art in Public Places," coordinated through the Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey.

"American Pie" was the last of the seven pieces to be placed. Every six months for the next three-and-a-half years the library will showcase one of the pieces included in the collection. The next rotation will take place in November.

wrote, "I have been advised that I have an attorney. I wish to have a conversation with officer Vondra on/off record — don't care, I do understand my rights."

Lasater testified that he and the other officers repeatedly reminded Goldstick of his rights on the day of the murder.

"I asked Mr. Goldstick if I or Detective Wheat had threatened him into making these statements," Sheriff Lasater said.

Jarema asked, "Was he (Goldstick) deprived of food, sleep or water?"

"That wouldn't happen," Sheriff Lasater said.

During Banner's questioning of Sheriff

Lasater he asked if it is a possibility a person could lose sleep due to the way the holding cell is laid out.

"It's a possibility," Sheriff Lasater said.

Due to the seriousness of the crime he allegedly committed, Goldstick was placed in a segregation cell so he could be monitored 24 hours a day.

The officers testified that not only was Goldstick not deprived of anything in the days following the murder, he was allowed some extras by the sheriff's department including use of a phone at any time and being able to see his mother in the same room.

Wheat said, "The sheriff is a very lenient man and in stressful situations he often allows some special considerations."

Goldstick's jury trial begins at 8:30 a.m. Dec. 5 in Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

Crooked Tree's Art in Public Places featured at library

Meyerson said the library's sculpture was supposed to be placed on property owned by the City of Charlevoix. A communication failure between Crooked Tree Arts Center and the city ended in the library's favor.

The library, which is currently located at 109 Clinton Street is in the process of building a new facility down the block at the former site of the Charlevoix Middle School at 220 Clinton Street.

The massive 28,300 pound concrete base the art sits on was made, donated and moved by Tom Moran, an artist who owns Moran Iron Works in Onaway. The base will be moved down the street once the new facility is open in the fall of 2006.

The location of the outdoor display at the library's new site has not been decided. But according to Meyerson, it will likely be near the parking lot between Clinton and Mason streets.

Moran's 4 ton butterfly is part of the traveling display and is currently being shown outside of Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Other display sites include the East Jordan Arts Council in East Jordan, Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey, downtown Boyne City near the Dairy Queen, the Harbor Springs Municipal Marina and Pellston Regional Airport.

Each of the pieces included in this collection are for sale. Crooked Tree Arts Center director Dale Hull said several potential buyers have already voiced interest but will have to wait to take ownership until the exhibit is complete.

"This is an incredible investment for the artists," Hull said.

He said the foundry bill alone for artist Glen McCune's, "The Stag," currently on display at Pellston Regional Airport, is $20,000.

This summer project started as an idea in the head of Hull when he took his position with the arts group over five years ago.

The project began to take shape in October of 2004 when the center hosted a 3-D Art Show at which a number of outdoor sculptures were shown.

From this show, Hull established a pool of artists he wanted to include in the public display.

In the spring of 2005 he entered a request with the Frey Foundation to fund movement and creation of the bases for the project. After Moran made his generous donation this request changed its form, fit and function.

"With his (Moran's) help this got done a lot sooner than I had originally hoped," Hull said.

The Frey Foundation has agreed to entertain a formal proposal from the center to fund supporting literature for the project.

"We want to invite people to northern Michigan to see Art in Public Places," Hull said.

Hull imagines bike and boat tours organized around viewing these pieces. Aside from this exhibit other notable outdoor art locations include Rogers City, Cheboygan, Mackinaw City and St. Ignace.

Eminent domain imminent disaster

Benjamin Gohs

'Staff writer'

I've decided I rather enjoy the beauty of East Park in downtown Charlevoix and, as such, have decided to take it for my own under Ben's Rules of Whimsy. Furthermore, it shall be known as Gohs Park, so don't let me catch any of you wandering around in it.

Of course, I merely jest about taking the park, but I don't find it funny when the government takes something from one person, gives it to another and then tells us it's for our own good.

Just over a month ago the United States Supreme Court made a 5-4 decision in the case of Kelo vs. City of New London which, under eminent domain, allows Pfizer Inc. to forcibly purchase several privately owned properties in New London, Conn., where the drug giant will build a large research center.

Eminent domain is commonly known as a government's right to forcibly purchase privately owned land and use it for public works such as roads, schools and bridges. Property owners unwilling to sell are generally given the "market value" of their home.

As if taking private land for public use wasn't bad enough it is becoming commonplace for both state and federal governments to allow the seizure of private property by large private corporations such as Pfizer is doing in Connecticut.

Though many of us have never been directly affected by it, eminent domain is nothing new to many Americans and other peoples of the world.

Throughout history governing bodies have snatched land, livestock and even people from its citizenry.

Several weeks after the Supreme Court's decision on the Kelo case some northern Michigan residents got a civics lesson in their own backyard.

The "condemnation proceedings" began about 40 miles from here near the Pellston Regional Airport.

Emmet County officials cite substantial growth in the amount of customers the airport serves. As a result they feel a right and duty to exercise the practice of eminent domain.

But, when the government conjures convoluted notions such as economic development and the good of the people as valid excuses for stripping its citizens of their liberties, an apocalypse of tyrannical transgression isn't far off.

For private property owners, the Kelo decision strengthens an already dangerous precedent. The phrase "economic development," when cited as a reason for exercising eminent domain, is subjective because these developers are in no way forced to guarantee any type of economic growth once they possess the property.

And the people who receive land seized by the government often do so at bargain basement prices because the current market value may be much different than future market value.

The U.S. government oppresses its people in many ways under the guise of our own good, but that doesn't make it right. If I wanted to be treated like a child I would move back into my parents basement and exercise my right to permanent migraine.

Those performing the Pellston land-grab matter-of-factly claim they need the land to better serve the public.

Some say that, since the property they're taking was littered with unsightly billboards, they did the community a great service by swiping the land and making it more presentable.

Will the government also steal my car when it is dirty or hold me down and shave my chin whiskers when I have stubble?

I find it tragic to see so many law-abiding taxpayers pigeonholed under the iron fist of this government. The more tragedy I see, the more I wonder how close to home these travesties must occur before something is done.

I own no land, but I hope to some day, and the idea of losing something I may work a lifetime for scares me. On the other hand, what is the incentive to buy a home when eminent domain potentially reduces us all to renters and lease holders?

How many of you with an ancestrial home, vacation house or family farm will be content with "market value" when Uncle Sam looks at you with dollar signs in his eyes?

Somehow I don't think a drug-store, restaurant or research facility has more right to your land than you do.

You may be saying, "Gohs, Gohs, don't get excited, history is just one convoluted land-grab after another."

No free country tolerates forced labor. Neither does a governing body serve its people by taking their land. But, to our everlasting shame, this country is guilty of both.

Supreme Court Justice, Sandra Day O'Connor wrote in her dissent on the Kelo case a warning for us all.

She said, "The specter of condemnation hangs over all property. Nothing is to prevent the state from replacing any Motel 6 with a Ritz-Carlton, any home with a shopping mall, or any farm with a factory."

Listen closely, good parenting is good karma

Gayle Gennett

'A look at life'

As parents of toddlers and young children we focus our attention on their wants and needs so we will have responsible adults in the future.

All too often, by the time our children reach the high school years we back off on our involvement. This may be due to conflicting schedules, feeling that we are done raising our children or maybe our teens are telling us to just "back off." The high school years may be our last chance to help form their character before they leave home for a job, college or marriage. During this chapter of their lives you can stay involved, which is really what they want you to do.

Believe me, they really do. You have captured their attention before they go out on their own. They look to you for sound advice and even though they say they can't wait to get out on their own, inside may be that little child asking, "Will everything be OK, will you be there for me when I need you?"

Yes, they are a bit nervous about leaving though you'd never know it by their actions. You can still teach them to be great people in a mediocre world. With your guidance and role modeling they can become leaders, not followers. This is your investment in the future. Don't disappear. Don't think you're finished with your parenting when ninth grade comes around.

When your child does leave home, your influence diminishes, so the high school years are a perfect time to help them through the rites of passage into the "real world." You don't need to get a tattoo or know the lyrics to the latest song to show your teen you care. You are their parent not their buddy.

Remember that things we consider minor issues are major to them, so treat them that way. Never miss the opportunity to listen and avoid making them feel immature because you feel it's not a big deal what they are upset about. Their feelings are real. You may get rejected, but get over it, you're the parent.

In a world that's running at such a fast pace and with such a high divorce rate, your children need you even more so at every age. They need you to attend their plays, games and science fairs. They need to have your attention and interest for one meal during the day. They need the security that mom and dad love them. It's not over 'til it's over.

Your children are a gift to be enjoyed. Mistakes are a natural part of growing up — they are expected. As grownups we like to be noticed and appreciated — our children do too. Parenting is a tough job but its benefits are priceless. We need to remind ourselves that the effort is worth it. Good parenting is good karma. Our children become the adults we admire, respect, and who care for us in the later years of our lives if we do the same for them in their formative years. Parenting is the best job you'll ever have.

Donate harvest excess

Editor:
Driving around the area we can see the beautiful gardens edging closer and closer to the time of harvesting. Have you ever left produce in the garden because you just couldn't eat any more tomatoes? Think about your local food pantry. Many of them would love to have the produce to distribute to their clients. Let's try to get these wonderful fresh vegetables to someone that would enjoy them. If you are not sure where the closest pantry is located call the Manna Food Project at (231) 347-8852 and we will direct you.

Practice safe skating

Editor:
Having just enjoyed the wonderful Venetian Festival in Charlevoix with my family, I wanted to extend my gratitude to not only my in-laws for hosting us but also to the committee for providing the venue for good clean family fun. We thoroughly enjoyed the bands, carnival, fireworks and parade. A job well done.

I must however take great exception with the skate board park float. I understand the joy of sport and hope my children continue to participate in activities that create physical and mental fitness for life. While promoting a worthwhile endeavor such as the skate park, I could not believe that these skilled athlete's were actually skating without helmets and other appropriate safety precautions. Shame on them that during a family event during which they were trying to raise funds, that they would be so smug to not promote that safety is being practiced at a public supported facility.

As a parent who insists on his children wearing protective equipment, I was at a loss for words to explain to my children why they did not wear helmets while going down a very steep hill. I have never seen the skateboard idol Tony Hawk without a helmet and the representatives of the skate park should not have been allowed to participate in the parade without helmets either. To all who participated in the skate park float without a helmet, be a role model for your sport, show the younger kids the safe way of enjoying a great activity and then "live to ride and ride to live."

Lose the meters

Editor:
My husband and I visit Charlevoix at least twice a year, usually in the summer. It is one of our favorite destinations. We usually stay at one of the condominium resorts, and eat, drink, shop and enjoy all Charlevoix has to offer. We were there July 22 for an afternoon on our way to a convention in Traverse City. We ate lunch, shopped and walked along the lakefront. It infuriated us to see a parking ticket on the windshield, which we didn't even notice until we were already on the road, headed for Traverse City. We didn't have the correct amount on us, didn't want to turn around, get change, etc. What a hassle.

On our way back from the convention on July 25, I shopped again. In total, we spent over $500 in your shops and restaurants in two afternoons. And I forgot to pay the parking ticket. My own fault, but now my $2 oversight has increased to $20.

Please do not penalize your visitors, not to mention your local residents, by having metered parking. Most communities have done away with metered parking because of the ill will it causes, not to mention the expense to the city to maintain and monitor the meters. With the affluent visitors who visit and live in and around Charlevoix, your city must certainly be able to find other, friendlier ways to make up for the revenue that you make by charging your downtown visitors to park. For such a beautiful community, metered parking seems beneath you.

We'll be back in August, but we'll try to leave our car in our hotel parking lot and walk the main street without worrying about another ticket.

Protect Second Amendment

Editor:
While I listen to the media, as they report on the pros and cons of the Second Amendment, I can't help but be amazed that those against guns continue with their positions even when they're proven flawed.

In Washington, D.C., for 15 years, it has been illegal to possess any gun, even for the defense of your home, and Washington, D.C., is the murder capital of our nation. These same people, and their organizations, are taking gun manufacturers and gun dealers to court, holding them liable for crimes committed with guns they make and sell legally. This reasoning is about as logical as holding automobile manufacturers and car dealers liable for every accident and death caused while using their lawfully built and sold products. Cars don't kill people any more than guns kill people. People kill people. Cars and guns are inanimate objects that do nothing without people to operate them. If all the guns in the United States were confiscated and destroyed by our government, guess who would still have guns besides the military and law-enforcement? It would be those among us that already illegally possess guns — the criminals.

Having said the above, I have searched for an alternative motive that would explain the anti-gun movement in our nation and their desire to disarm law-abiding citizens. What I have found is both chilling and frightening and I fear for my children and grandchildren should our course as a sovereign nation not be altered. I allude to the "one world government" and everything it stands for. It has been stated that no army is large enough or powerful enough to invade and take over any country where the citizens are armed. Just ask the British about their failed attempt in the 1700s in America or we need only to look to Iraq at the present time. The only way to make a country submit is to disarm its citizens, eliminate God and moral standards and confound the language by introducing multiple languages. Is this why our Second Amendment is under attack by our own government and international special interest groups? Are we giving away our sovereignty to the anti-American United Nations?

Thomas Jefferson said "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" and those words were never more true than today. Become knowledgeable and involved in our country's affairs because "we the people" are responsible for the future of our nation and preserving the liberties we all share.

Defining merchant marine

Editor:
In a recent Courier you had a picture of Capt. Gene Bridge and described him as a member of the "Merchant Marines." This is a common mistake but for a town on the Great Lakes is a no-no. "Merchant marine" is a collective noun applied to any vessels engaged in commercial shipping; also a singular noun describing a person working in that industry as an officer or crew member on a commercial ship, both men and women. Check your unabridged dictionary.

We have a son who is a deck officer in the merchant marine, so I know how murky this is to the general public. We have often been asked "How is your son in the Marines?" And, "Is your son still in the Navy?" It seems as though only people who are or have been in the merchant marine, or know someone who is employed on a commercial ship, knows the difference.

Do the Calcite or the Myron B. Taylor, of Inland Steel, still come into Charlevoix with cargo for destinations in Lake Charlevoix? The people who crew those ships are merchant marines serving in the merchant marine. Got that? The term also applies to the ships and crews working for the cement plant in Charlevoix.

To complicate things still further for you, the merchant marine crews are licensed by the Coast Guard, but Coast Guardsmen are not in the merchant marine though they are often called out to aid commercial ships in trouble.

This is about as clear as I can make it and perhaps I have only confused things still more. Maybe Gene Bridge can explain it better. We knew him when he was growing up in Charlevoix, as the son of long-time Mayor Robert Bridge and were interested to read about him in the Courier. Even after our long absence from Charlevoix, we still enjoy reading about whatever is going on there.

Charlevoix Township man was arrested on multiple felony charges

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has arrested a 70-year-old Charlevoix Township man on multiple counts of felony weapons charges.

Arthur Kirk has been charged by the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office with purchase and possession of firearms by a felon and false statements on a concealed weapons permit application. The above are charged as habitual felon, which increases the maximum penalty to life in prison. The above are also state charges; however, there is also the possibility of a "federal" indictment on similar charges. Kirk is under contract with the Charlevoix/Emmet Intermediate School District as director of the federally funded American Corp. Program, the Domestic Peace Corp.

The investigation began after Kirk applied for a concealed weapons permit in late May, and his fingerprints were submitted to the FBI and Michigan State Police for analysis.

This check revealed numerous prior arrests, including felonies recent and old.

offenses beginning in 1964 through 1980 in Oakland and Macomb counties, and at least three prior sex offense convictions all under an alias name, Arthur Kirkeby.

The last conviction was for a second offense of first degree criminal sexual conduct with an 8-year-old boy when Kirkeby was sentenced to serve five to 25 years in prison.

A lieutenant with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and a police officer with the City of Charlevoix Police Department executed a Charlevoix County 90th District Court search warrant at Kirk's condo in Charlevoix Township on July 30. During the search, three handguns were seized including two .357 caliber revolvers and one .40 caliber semi-automatic pistol.

Kirk was arrested on the above felony charges. A district court bond hearing took place July 31, and Kirk's bond has been set at $10,000 cash or surety by a magistrate. He has been ordered not to have contact with children under the age 17.

Charlevoix marina permit two weeks away

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

In mid August the City of Charlevoix will know whether fall construction of the Round Lake municipal marina is a go or if city officials will head back to the drawing board.

According to Patricia Borden, project manager with the regulatory division of the United States Army Corps of Engineers, the corps' decision whether or not to issue a permit for the project should be ready in two weeks.

According to city mayor Norman Carlson, this permit which the city expected to be approved last summer is the last piece in the puzzle before the project can be let out for construction bids.

"I know the city was expecting them earlier. But you can't control the permit process. We deal with this quite a bit with projects and it varies from job to job," said John Schlak, the city's sea wall and dock engineer with the firm United Design Associates of Cheboygan.

The focus of the permit from the corps is environmental. Borden

"I know the city was expecting them earlier. But you can't control the permit process."

John Schlak,
Charlevoix Municipal Marina project engineer said in assessing the project and preparing the decision packet they will look at both existing environmental conditions as well as the project's possible environmental impact.

The other permit required prior to construction was issued by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) on Feb. 24, 2005 and expires on Dec. 31, 2006.

According to Roxanne Ramirez, an environmental quality analyst with the MDEQ, Charlevoix's initial proposal did not meet the state's permit guidelines. The city issued a modified project plan that was reviewed and accepted.

The marina planning process, which was finalized in September of 2002, proposed replacement of the sea wall, removal of the existing 17 docks which at the furthest point extend 75 feet into Round Lake and feet into the lake with a 30 foot wide viewing pier running perpendicular to it.

Plans for the viewing pier were scaled back to 16 feet wide. This 12 foot docking pier was the only one whose width was not reduced. The other three piers, which extend 195 feet, 220 feet and 175 feet were all reduced from 12 feet to 8 feet wide.

The plan to run a new sea wall in front of the existing wall to minimize disruption of contaminated soil was nixed as it would require a substantial amount of back filling, disrupting habitat.

Ramirez said this new plan will likely cost the city more as construction crews will have to properly dispose of the contaminated soil but will result in less lake fill.

In December of 2003, 75 percent of this $4.8 million project was secured from the Michigan Waterways Commission and it was announced that Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority would pay for the rest.

Mayor Carlson said pending corps approval, construction will begin this fall and will likely wrap up in the spring of 2006 before the summer boating season begins.

Beach reopened after E. coli shutdown

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

A beach in the Village of Norwood recently closed after a test found it to contain higher than allowable levels of E. coli.

According to Scott Kendzierski, director of environmental health for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, on July 19 a water sample was taken at Norwood Park. Sample testing revealed late the next day that the allowable levels of E. coli were too high and township officials were forced to close the beach.

"We look at test results and we're required to react to all body contact exceedances," he said.

Kendzierski said, with new technology, his department can respond to incidents in a more timely manner than in the past.

"We have our own water quality lab in Gaylord now, so our response times are quicker," he said.

The beach was closed for less than 24 hours.

"There are lots of different sources the E. coli could have come from," he said. "We don't know what the cause was on this particular event."

Kendzierski said waterfowl, a sewage spill or even a loose fitting baby diaper could cause E. coli levels to rise enough to cause a beach closing.

"There was E. coli in the water and we are required to take action on that," he said. "Our response is to close the beach and do an assessment."

Kendzierski said his staff again tested the water on the morning of Friday July 22 and the beach was reopened when the water was found to be safe.

Safety award given to Charlevoix Public Schools

The Charlevoix Public School District has distinguished itself as one of the safest school districts in the state.

To recognize this achievement, the district was honored with a 2005 Michigan Association of School Board's Property/Casualty Pool Safe School Award. The district has been a member of the pool for nearly 11 years, and has a very low incidence of property and liability claims.

Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent, Dr. John Sturock credits good employees and effective training with the district's low occurrence of claims.

When a claim does arise, school employees review the cause and brainstorm ideas to prevent the same type of incident from happening again. The district also enacts preventative measures that keep claim occurrences low. For example, all bus drivers receive random drug testing; any parent, staff or community member who transports students must undergo a driver's license check, and all employees undergo a criminal background check prior to their hire. Sturock said such actions contribute to the school's low loss ratio, which indicates that claim experience is well below average.

In addition to proactive loss control among all district employees, Charlevoix Public custodians are specially trained to provide a safe environment within the schools. Building and Grounds Supervisor Mike Pearsall is responsible for the training of custodians, and maintains daily contact with employees. Because Pearsall is accessible for questions or concerns, the district maintains open communication about safety and loss control issues.

Sturock credited the success of the Charlevoix Public School District to the contributions and teamwork of all its employees.

When asked to advise other districts on how to improve their loss control efforts, Sturock said, "Hire good people who care about the place they work."

Pier jumping, a risky summer pastime

Perhaps it's the balmy hours of heat. Perhaps it's the rush of a renegade moment. Or perhaps it's the pressure of following your peers in queue.

Whatever the reason, Charlevoix residents and out-of-towners continue to plunge into the Pine River Channel from the South Pier.

According to City Police Chief Dennis Halverson, pier jumping appears to be a younger person's activity, popular among both males and females. Although he hasn't issued any citations to thrill-seekers this year, Halverson said there are more swimmers in the narrow waterway now than in the past.

"The hot weather has encouraged more of this activity," he said, adding that only one minor injury has been reported this year as a result of pier jumping — a cut to the hand.

Ike Boss, recreation director for the City of Charlevoix, said jumpers aren't solely teens and young adults — he's witnessed 10-year-old children hurling themselves into the channel.

Law enforcement tangle with pier jumping regs

"I've seen local parents down there encouraging their kids to dive in, and they all know we can't enforce it (rules against diving)," he said.

The reason for the recreation department's removed stance is simple — the site doesn't belong to them. The South Pier has been owned and maintained by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers since they built it in 1879.

From a police officer's standpoint, Halverson said the applicable laws against pier jumping and channel swimming aren't so transparent. State and marine safety laws may be enforced by any police officer, he said. These include interfering with boating traffic, disrupting fishing activity and leaping from the Bridge Street drawbridge — an activity that is altogether illegal because it takes place on state-owned property.

Otherwise, Halverson said, "Regulating activity on something that doesn't belong to you is difficult."

Halverson said if the circumstances allow a city police officer to cite an individual for pier jumping, the district court would assess any fines, which vary with the nature of the activity.

It must be understood that a pier jumping offense exists on several degrees, said Janet Potter, Charlevoix County District Court administrator and magistrate.

An individual may simply be swimming in the channel while boats are present. A "disorderly person" may dive into the channel while intoxicated. Thus, fines are set according to the situation.

She added that it's rare for a pier jumping citation to reach district court.

Citations issued by city police officers are typically municipal civil infractions and are usually settled between the police department and the individual. The greater the infraction, the greater the chance of the citation landing on Potter's desk in district court. Should a pier jumping citation reach her, Potter estimated the fine to be around $200. This is roughly the same amount one would have to pay if caught jumping from the drawbridge.

If a juvenile is seen jumping from the pier, Halverson said, he may either be taken into custody and then turned over to his parents or cited in Charlevoix County Probate Court.

Tom O'Bryan, civil engineer with U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Grand Haven office, admits enforcement of Corps' rules on the South Pier is challenging.

"We are not going to enforce it (rules). We have five people to cover the whole west side of the state," he said, adding that his Grand Haven office doesn't even have park rangers to patrol the region. "It really has to be something adopted by the community — a local ordinance that doesn't allow swimming or jumping."

"In accordance with our rules and regulations, swimming, diving, snorkeling or scuba diving at one's own risk is permitted except at launching sites, designated mooring points and other areas so designated by the District Engineer. Diving or jumping from bridges and other structures which cross project waters is prohibited," O'Bryan said.

The Corps' rules and regulations further state, "Individuals who are hoisterous, rowdy, disorderly or otherwise disturb the peace on project lands or waters may be requested to leave the project."

The Pine River Channel falls into the category of "project waters," O'Bryan said, because it is considered to be a federal navigation channel.

With so much apparent gray space surrounding the issue of enforcement, Halverson hopes the city police may assume greater authority over channel activity in the future. He has enlisted the help of the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema, who is now reviewing applicable laws in the Marine Safety Act.

"We're searching for a legal application to restrict this activity," he said. "It is an unsafe practice."

Boss agrees that the channel waters pose a serious threat to swimmers, citing unpredictable rip currents and rocks beneath the surface.

"I know those currents are faster than two mph," added O'Bryan. "People think they can swim faster than that, but before they know it they're taken out to Lake Michigan."

"Lots of people think they can fight a current and you can't do it," he said, explaining that the Pine River Channel possesses a continuous current that is constantly fluctuating in severity. "Typically, people get in currents, get trapped, then panic, exhaust themselves, then drown. The correct way to handle a current is to let it take you, then get out. It may take you out several hundred yards from shore."

According to Charlevoix Fire Chief Paul Ivan, pier jumpers not only face the threat of choppy currents, they are putting themselves in the harmful path of slow-moving boats.

"Because they're going so slow, it reduces their ability to navigate well," Ivan said. "It's just a dangerous situation. Barely a year goes by when we're not called because a by-passer notices someone in the channel in distress."

Jeff Stevens, EMT specialist and lieutenant with the City of Charlevoix Fire Department works at the Department of Natural Resources station and observes individuals jumping into the channel daily.

"A lot of times, the kids will jump from the pier, but now they're jumping from the railing, which is 13 or 14 feet above water," he said. "That concerns me. The channel is only about 12 feet deep at the ladder (near the lighthouse)."

O'Bryan said the rough nature of the channel makes it difficult for the Corps to perform regular sounding tasks which measure the depth of the channel.

"We're not going to enforce NO-SWIMMING signs (at South Pier)," O'Bryan said, adding that advisories are currently in place at the site. "Once we put up a sign, somebody needs to enforce it. People just need to realize that it's (the pier) a navigational structure, not a recreational structure."

Ride the Charx bike event to take place Aug. 6

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Put some baseball cards in the spokes and don your knee length spandex, it's time to bike around the lake.

According to Paul Servais, director of the fifth annual Ride the Charx which will take place Aug. 6, the nonprofit bicycle ride around Lake Charlevoix grew out of his love of biking.

"I've been riding for a number of years now," he said. "It just started as a fun bike ride and that's what it is still."

Servais said there were about 300 attendees last year and he expects even more for this year's ride.

Distances of rides range from a leisurely 20 mile ride from Boyne City to the Ironton Ferry and up to the 105 mile ride "for the truly crazed," which consists of a 62-mile ride before lunch and ends the day with a 43-mile loop.

Regardless of distances, all rides will begin and end at the pavilion in Boyne City's Veterans Park.

From noon to 2 p.m. this Saturday there will be a catered lunch of barbecue and vegetarian meals in Veteran's Park as well as free refreshments on the road for all routes. People who wish to join the riders for lunch may register for a $10 non-rider fee.

"We're known as the bike ride with the great food," Servais said.

Servais said the Charx ride is for anyone.

Participants in last summer's Ride the Charx bike ride around Lake Charlevoix take the Ironton Ferry across the south arm on their return trip. This year's Ride the Charx will take place this Saturday.

Cost for the ride is $20 and the luncheon and ride will take place rain or shine.

"The cost is very low so we try to run it with making no profit at all," Servais said. "What we're about is promoting healthy lifestyles and bringing people into the Charlevoix area."

"It's just a way to get out and see the lakeshore and get some exercise — get out and play a little, that's what it's about," Servais said.

Servais said proceeds are distributed to local nonprofit organizations.

"We did accidentally make a little money last year so we used the money to buy a bicycle for the Boyne City Police Department," he said.

There will also be showers available as well as maps of the designated rides.

There are four rides on three routes which have been designated each with differing difficulty to match all levels of riders, from intermediate to expert.

Helmets are required and children under 16 must be accompanied by an adult.

Registration for the 20-mile ride begins at 10 a.m. with departure of no later than 11:30 a.m. Registration for the 43-mile begins at 7 a.m. with departure no later than 8:30 a.m. Registration for the 62 and 105-mile rides both begin at 7 a.m. with departures of no later than 8:30 a.m.

For more information on Ride The Charx call (231) 582-3468.

Local designers embark on business venture

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

The current "soft market," or buyer's market, may seem a curse for homeowners, but it is a favorable trend in the eyes of interior designers, said Mary Pollard, of Charlevoix.

Pollard and friends Andi Gerring, of Ellsworth, and Kerian Yohler, of Rapid City, have developed a prospective company, "Sold by Design," patterned after the hit HGTV program "Designed to Sell." The three women are offering their services to homeowners who wish to update and accentuate their property's features.

The women have just finished their first undertaking as a trio: decorating and remodeling a vacant, 2,880 square foot home at 203 Prospect Street in Charlevoix. The property will be open for public viewing from noon to 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 6. The designers will be on-site to discuss their business concept and to describe their approach to interior remodeling.

The project, completed at the request of Prospect Street homeowner and close friend of the group Cathy Agnello, was twofold. It decluttered the home to exhibit its natural space and provided subtle accents to present its potential.

Charlevoix's Vacation Properties Network is listing the four-bedroom, 3.5-bathroom property. Alicia Mosher, Vacation Properties real estate agent and host of the upcoming open house, said "Sold by Design" presents a "fresh approach" to interior design.

"This is a business that people are looking for," she said. "We can give people insight on how to sell their property."

Using a ragging technique — dabbing a rag in paint and then on a surface to achieve a soft, two-toned look — Gerring transformed the interior of the home from cold and barren, with white walls, to warm and tasteful, said Mosher.

Framed pictures were hung around the home, lighting fixtures were updated, windows were washed, wallpaper was stripped and select furniture was positioned in rooms that were once bare.

"They're amazing," said Agnello of the designers. "They're fast workers. They're reliable. I've been really impressed."

The women spent only five days sprucing up the Prospect Street home. After an initial consultation with Agnello, the women got down to business. Small vases were placed here and a rocking chair was positioned there. One bedroom's walls were painted pale blue and its bed adorned with a complementary pastel quilt. Striped earth tones replaced loud wallpaper in the downstairs bathroom. New knobs were secured to kitchen cupboards and window treatments were retired.

"We like to play up certain points in a room," said Pollard, who accompanied Agnello on shopping trips to acquire small fixtures and complementary decorations. "We spent $10 to update the glass globes on a ceiling fan."

Gerring even painted panels on a metal door that leads

New yacht dealer locates in Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Jefferson Beach Yacht Sales has been catching the eye of Bridge Street shoppers. The boat dealer opened its Charlevoix location at 224 Bridge Street this summer to offer northern Michigan residents and visitors a taste of the boating lifestyle. Attached to the windows are plenty of shots of luxurious boats for sale to lure in passersby.

The boat sales and service company which is headquartered in St. Claire Shores, relocated its Bay Harbor store, which operated for six years, to Charlevoix.

In January the company purchased the 1,400 square foot commercial, street level building which occupies the former Appletree lot.

The reason for a move to Charlevoix — a change of venue.

"We go where the boaters go and who doesn't know Charlevoix," said Jim Kehrig a sales representative for Jefferson Beach Yacht Sales.

Kehrig a Clinton Township resident, who together with Ron Montoya of Torch Lake mans the Charlevoix office, said the company's decision to locate here was made before marina renovation plans were finalized.

He said now, with a new marina likely being installed before the next boating season, the Jefferson Beach crew is looking forward to the opportunities the coming system will bring for business.

Kehrig said transient boaters will be more easily accommodated by the overhaul to the marina which should bring more money to Charlevoix businesses.

While sales haven't been earth shattering this summer, Kehrig said this season brought an opportunity to get the word out that Jefferson Beach Yacht Sales is here to stay.

"We are here to meet people and greet the community," he said.

The company represents four lines of boats including Viking Yachts, Viking Sport Cruisers, Cruisers Yachts and Sunseeker Yachts.

Other Jefferson Beach Yacht Sales locations include Grand Haven and St. Claire Shores. Sales reps are also located in Ohio.

The new boat sales and service location will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Sunday or by appointment. For more information call (231) 237-0957.

Venetian Festival tennis tourney winners

The annual kickoff for the Venetian Tennis Tournament July 17 featured tennis professionals who live and work in this area.

The featured pros were: Jim Rich from the Chicago Club and Charlevoix Country Club, Thomas Meinac and Charlie Drury from the Bay Harbor Country Club, Eric Lundteigen from the Belvedere Club and Charlevoix High School and Lansing's Larry Letwin.

The Sunday afternoon event began with a singles and doubles exhibition among the pros. It continued when six local players teamed up with the pros to play additional doubles matches of men's and mixed doubles play.

The tennis professionals were very gracious when playing with the local players.

According to Venetian Festival games commissioner, Dean Davenport, it is the desire of festival organizers to increase the awareness of tennis talent in Charlevoix and let those interested in improving their level of play interact with the professionals.

Croquet champs

The Venetian croquet tournament which took place July 20, saw three flights of competitors. In the all-important match pitting the City of Charlevoix employees playing the Charlevoix Township team for the right to go first in the Venetian street parade, the township team emerged the victor. It was close all the way but the final shots went the township's way. In the service club division, the Kiwanis team pictured above of Dave Burzyck and Terry Edger defeated the Lions team and then edged the defending champion Rotary Club team of Susan VanWieren and Chris Turkelson to claim the crown. In the Open Division it was a family affair as Kevin and Vicky Greyerbiehl slipped by Sam Williamson and Garth Jackson in the finals.

VFW in need of furnishings for new building

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

As reconstruction of the Charlevoix Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) post nears completion, its members look to furnishing it.

According to VFW Post 1153 Charlevoix Commander, Charlie Butcher, the VFW would really appreciate any donations the public can give.

"We lost all of our internal property," he said. "We didn't salvage anything."

The post needs to raise between $25,000 and $30,000 in order to replace some of what was lost to the Dec. 10, 2004 fire.

Many of the items at the VFW post are irreplaceable including a roster of lifetime members and some original cartoons by famed Stars and Stripes cartoonist Bill Mauldin as well as some retired flags.

"We had four of his cartoon ink printings on the walls in the meeting room," Butcher said. "I don't know how we'll ever replace those."

Some items the post needs for operation are tables, chairs, kitchen equipment and a computer.

Members of the post have managed to replace a few things, Butcher said. "We have replaced our flags," he said. "We had them in the Venetian parade for the first time."

He added, "We also replaced our portable public address system."

The fire which destroyed the more than 50-year-old building in the early morning hours of Dec. 10 was ruled accidental, most likely due to a failure in the electrical system.

The post is expected to be completely enclosed by Aug. 1 with hopes of being finished by the end of the month when a rededication ceremony will take place. Anyone interested in helping can send donations to VFW Post 1153, P.O. Box 753 Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Butcher said no decision has been made on what types of services the post will offer the community such as bingo and dinners.

"We haven't crossed that bridge yet," he said.

VFW Post 1153 received its charter on June 16, 1937 and has served the veteran community by donating to veteran's hospitals among other organizations as well as helping local charities with yearly financial contributions.

The building which was home to VFW Post 1153 was formally dedicated in 1953.

Pump Gas?

I can do that!

Northwestern Bank employee Marci Sullivan received a call from a customer who was traveling to Muskegon. He had applied for a debit card but it wasn't yet activated. There he was, miles from home, at a gas station with no way to pay for fuel he'd already pumped.

So Marci spoke with the store manager and provided her own credit card number to pay for her customer's gas. Then she personally activated his debit card. Whenever you hear any Northwestern Bank employee say "I can do that!" you'll quickly realize they really mean it.

Even if it means going above and beyond. We can do that.

Oscar Stroud attends annual Republican picnic

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix resident Oscar Stroud, "Mr. Republican," took over the Republican party here nearly 70 years ago and has been working the political scene ever since.

The annual Republican picnic, which took place July 10 at Whiting Park in Eveline Township, marked the 67th year that Stroud attended the picnic to support county Republicans and their efforts as well as to help raise funds for the party. "I took the Republican party over and did a lot of work with it to raise funds," Stroud said.

According to John Haggard, Chairman of the Charlevoix Republican Party, the Republican picnics date back nearly to Lincoln, but before Stroud got involved support in the area wasn't as strong.

He said, about 125 turned out for the annual picnic, including chairman of the Michigan Republican Party, Saul Anuzis.

Haggard said, Stroud, 92, started the annual picnic 67 years ago to bring state and local Republicans together.

"To my knowledge, he's (Stroud) never missed one picnic. And the years that we've been doing the spring Lincoln Day dinners, he never missed one," Haggard added.

"His service to the community, Charlevoix city and township, has been one of the greatest things that's happened to Northwest Michigan. He's been instrumental in his leadership getting water and sewers to the area and his own township got a nice township hall paid for with funds that he was able to accumulate without increasing millage. People owe him gratitude and respect."

Haggard explained that Stroud has been instrumental in working with the party as a township supervisor who "promoted a good, conservative way of government."

Stroud was the longest running township supervisor in Northern Michigan, resigning his post in 2003 after 34 years.

"It didn't make a difference which party you were — both parties like him," Republican party member Bob Drebenstedt said. "He's just one of those guys that's 'Mr. Charlevoix Township.' He isn't in it for moving up to county commissioner, or governor, he just pushes for the best for Charlevoix Township."

Drebenstedt said politicians from all over the state have come just to meet Stroud and shake his hand.

And, he added, in Stroud's 70 years of work with the party, he always had a sense of humor.

"He'll tell more jokes about himself than anybody," Drebenstedt said. "I don't see people like that anymore."

Drebenstedt said he hopes the Charlevoix area has Stroud around for another 67 years.

to the garage.

"Paint can take on marble or wood looks. We like to use soft, neutral colors so the home is move-in friendly," she said, adding that the group's approach to remodeling a home contrasts the staging techniques often used by real estate agents. "Sometimes staging is too much. We like homes to retain that airy feel."

The women painted a total of eight rooms in the Prospect Street property. Supplies, however, were always contained in one area of the home, said Pollard.

"We're very neat, even to the point of vacuuming," she said. "What distinguishes us is that we get dirty. We advise customers, but we'll actually take it to the next step for them."

The prospective company, whose name was suggested by Beth Strawbridge, will charge customers an hourly fee — each woman's labor is included, as well as supplies and merchandise acquired during shopping trips with the women.

"Sold by Design" is flexible when it comes to their potential clientele, assuring the public that homes need not be vacant or even on the market to be considered as projects. Similarly, the women aren't limiting their prospective clients to those living in Charlevoix.

From remodeling homes in Detroit, to Miami, Fla. to Mackinaw Island, the group has set lengthy boundaries for their passion.

Yohler, a former set designer in Virginia, has been involved in home renovations for nearly 15 years.

Pollard, who worked alongside her father as a child when building their home, has pursued a freelance career in painting and renovating for nearly 20 years.

Gerring, who earned a master's degree in art history and has studied with a decorative painter in New York City, N.Y. has been painting for nearly 20 years as well.

The women, who all possess second jobs, agree that a future devoted totally to "Sold by Design" is ideal.

"This is what we all love," said Gerring. "We all work so well together. We all bring something different to the table."

City police now armed with tasers

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

They're not Robocop or the Terminator, but citizens of Charlevoix may soon notice a more futuristic look to the local police department.

Charlevoix City Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, has yet to use his firearm while on duty in Charlevoix, but in the interest of a less lethal option in crime fighting, the city purchased three new Tasers.

"The hope is eventually all officers will be assigned one (Taser)," he said.

According to Halverson, over the course of a year the Charlevoix Police Department has as many as 25 or so physical altercations.

"We're hoping this reduces any potential injuries to our officers and potential perpetrators," Charlevoix

Deputy Police Chief Scott Hankins said.

Taser is an acronym for the Thomas A. Swift Electric Rifle, a weapon from a collection of futuristic kids books from the early 1900s. While generally used to describe all Electronic Control Weapons (ECWs), Taser is merely the brand name.

According to Charlevoix City Treasurer Richard Brandt, the three Taser brand ECWs Charlevoix recently acquired cost a total of $3,804. Of that, $2,415 was for the stun guns and the rest was for air cartridges, alligator clips, holsters and other accessories.

Once the weapons were purchased, Hankins trained on their use and instruction at Shanty Creek in Bellaire.

"There were probably about 30 of

S.A.N.E. leads crack bust off Kipke Road near school

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Late last week, a major crack cocaine bust shook down in the City of Charlevoix.

As the result of a continuing investigation into cocaine sales in the area by Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (S.A.N.E.) two Charlevoix residents were arrested during the afternoon of Aug. 5.

"This underscores how important S.A.N.E. has become to communities similar to ours. These individuals were allegedly selling crack in the shadow of one of our schools," City of Charlevoix police chief Dennis Halverson said.

Using a warrant, the enforcement group, along with patrolmen with the City of Charlevoix Police Department, executed a search of a duplex off Kipke Road, near the Charlevoix Middle School.

Inside the house, detectives seized 25 pea-sized rocks of crack cocaine, worth between $10 and $20 each. They also seized a handgun, cash and a vehicle.

The two residents at the duplex were arrested.

One of the suspects arrested is a 22-year-old Charlevoix male. He is being charged with three counts of delivery of crack cocaine in a school zone, one count of possession with intent to deliver crack cocaine in a school zone, one count of conspiracy to deliver crack cocaine in a school zone, one count of felony firearm possession and one count of maintaining a drug house.

The second suspect, a 24-year-old female from Charlevoix was arrested for one count of possession with intent to deliver crack cocaine in a school zone, one count of aiding and abetting the delivery of crack cocaine in a school zone, one count of felony firearm possession and one count of maintaining a drug house.

Both subjects were lodged in Charlevoix County Jail pending arraignment in Charlevoix County District Court.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Strock said that while the news of the bust is disconcerting, he wasn't entirely surprised.

"There is no place that's sacred I don't care where you are. Because we live in northern Michigan some people think those things does happen here. But they're wrong," he said.

"So, we need to prepare our kids and the community needs to be aware of what's going on and help the authorities. With that in mind I hope we can try to keep these activities out of our community and most importantly away from our kids."

Halverson said the first time he came across crack cocaine in Charlevoix was about 10 years ago. And added that drug use and the sale of drugs are problematic and the fallout is also a major issue.

"The residual effect of drug use is a corresponding increase in criminal activity and behavior," he explained.

ficer/instructors there literally from across the State of Michigan," he said.

Approximately 135,000 of these less lethal devices are being used in the nearly 6,000 law enforcement offices throughout the country.

The Taser uses a burst of air to shoot two pins up to 25 feet. The pins, which can penetrate clothing up to five centimeters thick, are connected to the Taser with thin copper wire. When the pins are embedded in a person's skin the controller of the weapon can deliver up to 195 five second blasts of 50,000 volts each.

According to Hankins, as a part of his training he volunteered to take a hit from the Taser.

And, despite being over 6 feet tall and around 200 pounds, Hankins said he fell to the floor, flopped uncontrollably and screamed out like a little girl when he was zapped.

"It's the longest five seconds of your life," he said.

Hankins said the Taser is better than pepper spray because once the electricity stops flowing to the victim, the person can get up and start moving around while pepper spray affects an individual for long after the spray is administered.

And, he said, pepper spray doesn't discriminate — citing that he has been on the receiving end of an accidental, but well intentioned shot of the spray by one of his partners while trying to subdue a suspect.

According to Hankins, there is no exact explanation for when a Taser will be used, but there are some universal guidelines for the use of force.

"The standard is the amount of force necessary to (make) the arrest," Hankins said. "Our policy is any use of force considers the totality of the situation."

Hankins said the Taser has been used in many situations where it de-escalated the situation from use of lethal force to one of merely subduing the suspect.

Red Cross bear art family day to take place Aug. 12 in Bay Harbor

Family Day, taking place in conjunction with the 2005 outdoor art project Hunt for Bearable Art, will take place Aug. 12.

Glen's Markets of Northern Michigan and the American Red Cross invite families and friends to be their guests from 1 to 4 p.m. Aug. 12 at the Village at Bay Harbor for Family Day.

This will be the only opportunity to view all of the bears in one location. Activities, refreshments and snacks will be provided free of charge. The afternoon will also include the opportunity to contribute to the design of the Family Day Bear, which will be auctioned to the highest bidder Aug. 13.

For more information, contact the American Red Cross at (231) 348-7666.

But, overall, he feels it will be an enhancement to his department's ability to protect local citizens and his officers.

"I've been watching the development and implementation of these things for years," Halverson said.

According to statistics reported by Taser International, the Cincinnati Police Department which has full employment of Tasers, is down 70 percent in the category of officer injuries, down 50 percent in citizen complaints and 40 percent in suspect injuries since they began using the Electronic Control Weapons.

gus claims of officer abuse, the Taser has a built-in computer which monitors when, how often and for how long the weapon was used.

The Taser records time, date and number of deployments which can be uploaded to a computer via a USB cable.

According to Halverson, from the statistics he's seen, the Taser is an all-round positive addition to good policing.

"The Taser is an alternative to physical contact. It's a weapons system that I think you have to back up with policy, training and monitoring," he said.

Halverson said the main downside to the Taser is many people's assumption that it is a negative tool for law enforcement due to some recent publicity.

But, overall, he feels it will be an enhancement to his department's ability to protect local citizens and his officers.

OPINIONS

Parenting page to join the Courier line-up

Julie Witthoef
'Just a thought'

It's time for the chitlins to head back to school and for parents to start thinking outside the sandbox.

With weather cooling off and kids returning to school — that forlorn look of boredom in the eyes of our children will also return.

And with it come other fun facets of the school environment which include a heavy concentration of germs kids are exposed to daily.

It seems that during the school year there is always a "flavor of the month" illness parents tackle. Whether it be lice, croup, the flu or a cold — the battle is fast and furious.

In recognition of the school year rat race the Charlevoix Courier will publish a parenting page monthly. Headlining the section will be a column written by an area health practitioner with the skinny on symptoms and treatments for that month's most common ailment.

A dietician will write about healthy eating habits and an athletic trainer will offer insight into treating common injuries.

Also to be included in the section will be a children's events listing with low-cost ways to wipe the boredom away.

No one knows better than parents about what is hot and what is not in Charlevoix. So, the success of the events listing is in your hands. I would like to ask readers to clip the box at right of this column and send in event ideas for families to partake in. Please include the time, date and place where the event will occur, as well as an associated name and contact number.

These events can be anything from play groups to an ice cream social at the library, a fall tug of war at the beach or a recent outing you took that was a great fit for the kids.

Hopefully, this addition to your local newspaper will have you searching for your Courier next time your wee one has a sniffle or a bored whine.

The tiniest things can be the most amazing

Roger Knutson
'Ear to the ground'

For nearly all of human history our view of the world was bound by what we could see with our unaided eye.

On the largest scale, we could see the stars and planets and speculate about exactly what they were and where they were located.

The smallest things accessible to our normal vision are the smallest of bugs, usually called mites, which we can see only as tiny moving dots.

Until the early 1600's no one knew that a world of smaller things was waiting to be discovered. That world was revealed by the microscope, a device with one or two ground glass lenses that magnified things as much as 100 times.

When examined with a microscope, that tiny mite appeared as a nightmarish monster, and most wonderful of all, what seemed to the naked eye a drop of clear water from any pond was filled with previously invisible, teeming life.

Arguably the availability of microscopes changed our view of the world more than almost anything else that had happened in all of human history.

Before the microscope, blood was only known as a bright red fluid, coincident with life. With a microscope, blood can be seen as a clear liquid with small red discs floating in it.

The wings of a butterfly with all their striking colors are revealed as sets of overlapping scales, like shingles on a roof. The causes of many diseases previously assigned to bad air or invisible spirits were found to be tiny living things called bacteria.

Maybe most remarkable of all, every living plant and animal could be seen as composed of what Robert Hooke called "cells," because the first ones he saw in a slice of ordinary cork looked like miniatures of the rows of small rooms that housed the residents of monasteries. Those rooms were called cells and the name has been applied to microscopic cells ever since.

Knowing about those cells has made much if not most of biological science useful in the human quest to understand the world around us, to cure disease and to develop better crops.

For some decades after microscopes were available, they were the toys of the wealthy. An evening's entertainment in Victorian times might have consisted of looking at almost anything through an ornate microscope, with oohing and aahing like that we usually associate with the response to spectacular fireworks. More serious and scientific microscopists were busy changing almost everything about how we understood the world.

I have known hundreds of professional biologists over the years and nearly all of them can recount with great pleasure the first time they looked at pond water through a microscope and saw clearly what had been invisible.

My first microscope was purchased for 97 cents from an ad on the back of a comic book, and while the images were far from clear and were surrounded by halos of rainbow light, I could see what Robert Hooke had seen. I could see the teeming life in a drop of water, and I could see that ordinary paper was made of unbelievably tiny wooden sticks stuck together, and I could see the "cells" in a thin slice of cork.

Looking at a photograph taken through a microscope is not nearly as amazing as looking directly at a drop of pond water and seeing what had been invisible.

Simple and inexpensive microscopes better than those available to Robert Hooke in the 1600's can be had for a few dollars.

No child should ever grow up without the experience of seeing what had seemed invisible. It is not too late for any adult who might have missed out to have the same experience.

Almost all of the life on earth is in forms too small to be seen without a microscope. Explore the window to that world and encourage others to do so.

Your appreciation of life can only grow, and we could use more appreciation of life.

Author Suzy Farbman to speak at library Aug. 23

"Back from Betrayal," is a brutally honest account of marital infidelity and the long journey back to reconciliation. Farbman's personal odyssey is one of the first published by a woman who confronted infidelity and went on to save her marriage.

During the author's appearance at the Charlevoix Public Library she will discuss her experiences and what she learned about rebuilding a relationship.

Public radio coverage

Editor:

I read with great interest the article in the July 13 issue of the Courier concerning improved coverage from Interlochen Public Radio. The article, somewhat misleadingly, stated that the addition of the FM station broadcasting on 88.5 in Mackinaw

City will improve reception of IPR in Charlevoix. Actually, Charlevoix County is already well served by WICV, 100.9 FM which broadcasts from the East Jordan area. This station has carried IPR for years. I know from experience that it transmits a strong signal to Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan and areas between. Broadcast of IPR on 88.5 from Mackinaw City will certainly improve reception in the Straits area, including the Upper Peninsula. I welcome that. My wife and I travel to Charlevoix frequently, coming through the UP. We will be pleased to listen to IPR all the way from the UP into Charlevoix.

Kite sale underway to benefit Charlevoix Children's House

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Charlevoix residents Tonya, Dan and Kiley Mann pack a kite wherever they go.

The Sky Pilot, a kite in the Discovery Toys learning trinket entourage, is a staple in the Mann family travel bag.

Three-year-old Kiley can even run and launch the durable fabric kite on her own.

"These are the easiest kites in the world to fly," said Tonya, a educational consultant and sales representative for Discovery Toys.

She added that the best part is it's lightweight and collapses to 10 inches so it travels easily and carries a lifetime warranty.

Tonya's experience with the family kite prompted her to spearhead a fund-raiser for Kiley's school, the local Montessori preschool Charlevoix Children's House, that started Aug. 1.

"I want this fund-raiser to encourage families to get away from the TV and spend some time together outside," she said.

The school, which educates between 20 and 25 area students annually, aims to sell 200 of the $20 kites and hopes to raise about $1,000 to help pay for new playground equipment and further staff

Lions Club White Cane Safety Days Fund Drive Aug. 12-13

Charlevoix Lions club members will hit the streets of Charlevoix this week for their annual White Cane Safety Days Fund Drive.

The drive will take place Friday and Saturday, Aug. 12 and 13 at locations around town.

Initiated 75 years ago in Peoria, Ill., the red banded white cane is recognized worldwide for identifying and protecting those with little or no sight.

As a symbolic reminder to the public, each Lion collecting donations will be carrying an official "White Cane".

Donations to the Lions help support the Michigan Eye Bank and Transplant Center, The Michigan Leader Dog Training Center and its Puppy Search and Development Program; and the Lions Welcome Home for the Blind in Grand Rapids.

Locally, the club helps support the low vision reading center at the Charlevoix Public Library and pays for glasses for the needy with special eye problems. The club will also help those who need assistance with special hearing problems. Lions also collect used eyeglasses for distribution in third-world countries. Any Lion will take used glasses.

Currently used glasses can be dropped off at the Charlevoix Public Library, Charlevoix State Bank, Optometrist Steve Voci's office at 103 Clinton Street or Doctor Reed Freidinger's office at 14730 Park Avenue.

Rotary 'Porker' golf outing is set for Thursday, Sept. 1.

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will host its annual "Porker" golf tournament Thursday, Sept. 1 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

Billed as "The Affordable Golf Tournament," the entry fee is only $40 per person.

"We have had players comment that it is almost as if we are paying them to play because of the amount and quality of the prizes distributed at the tournament," said tournament director Tim Petrosky. "Last year we distributed gifts with a retail value of more than $3,000 to golfers. Everyone went home with a prize."

The event is a four-person scramble. The entry fee includes golf, a buffet dinner at Giuseppe's Restaurant and oodles of prizes. Prizes will be awarded based on skill, luck and random draw, as well as to teams that finish first, last and right in the middle.

"This tournament is more about fun than competition, although we do have strong teams every year," said Petrosky. "Year after year area businesses generously donate great prizes that pretty much assure everyone goes home with a smile on their face no matter how they golfed."

Registration forms are available at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course pro shop. The event is limited to the first 20 teams that register.

An optional skins game and "mini-ligans" will also be available to teams.

The shotgun start is at 4:30 p.m. Dinner follows at 6:30 p.m.

Rotary uses proceeds from the event to benefit the community with an emphasis on area youth.

For more information contact Petrosky at (231) 547-8177.

Watershed council asks for volunteers to monitor streams

This fall, Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council will add a new element to its repertoire of water quality monitoring programs.

After more than 20 years of coordinating a volunteer lake monitoring program in the northern Lower Peninsula, the Watershed Council is expanding horizons and will undertake a volunteer stream monitoring program.

As with lake monitoring, stream water quality data will be used to rate the overall health of the stream and to collect baseline data for determining changes over time, but the similarities between the two programs end there.

As opposed to collecting data on specific water quality parameters, volunteer stream monitors will collect "critters," which are used as bio-indicators to gauge the health of a stream.

Volunteer stream monitors will have less of a time commitment than their counterparts in the lake monitoring program, collecting field data only twice a year, in the fall and spring, and then participating in follow-up indoor identification sessions.

"Anybody interested in volunteer stream monitoring should think of it as educational aquatic field trips, two times a year, getting out and mucking about, exploring the fascinating aquatic ecosystems that literally surround us," said Kevin Cronk, Monitoring and Research Coordinator at Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council.

The Volunteer Stream Monitoring Program will start next month with a training session for new volunteers scheduled to be held at the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council office in Petoskey on Saturday, Sept. 17.

The first field data collection will take place the following week on Saturday, Sept. 24 and the follow-up session to identify aquatic insects, crustaceans and other macroinvertebrates collected in the field will be held two weeks later on Saturday, Oct. 8. Each session will take approximately a half-day. The program will continue in May of 2006 and then indefinitely into the future, each spring and fall.

This year the Watershed Council will start the program by monitoring tributaries of Lake Charlevoix, Mullet Lake and Torch Lake. Regardless of whether you live in or around those lakes, you can still participate in the program. No experience is required, only a desire to experience first-hand the magnificent stream ecosystems of northern Michigan.

Interested individuals should contact Cronk at (231) 347-1181, extension 109 or by e-mail at kevin@watershedcouncil.org.

Ivan Witthoef

Ivan Joel Witthoef, 64, of Charlevoix died the morning of Aug. 2, 2005 at his home after a brief battle with cancer.

Ivan was born Sept. 29, 1940, in Hubbard County, Minn., the son of Marvin E. and Eleanor L. (Lanum) Witthoef.

He grew up in Michigan, N.D.

On May 19, 1962 at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Waianae, Hawaii, he married his beloved wife, Lucille E. Figueroa, who survives. Father Elmeir officiated.

The couple met while Ivan served a tour of duty in Hawaii with the United States Navy as an EMFN (E-3). He was both an electrician and a fireman for the Navy.

After finishing his time in the service, Ivan went into the energy business, where he happily worked his fingers to the bone until his death. He went from a telephone repairman to building rocket fuel and acting in a supervisory role for Consumer's Power at nuclear power plants around the country.

He was preceded in death by his father, Marvin E. Witthoef.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions can be made to Hospice of Northwest Michigan. Camp Quality or the family.

A funeral took place at 10 a.m. Aug. 5 at the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix man injured in personal water craft accident

At approximately 12:47 p.m. on Saturday, July 30, a personal water craft accident occurred on Lake Charlevoix near Young State Park.

Eighteen-year-old Sean Thomas of Charlevoix was injured while riding his personal water craft as he encountered a large wake at which time Thomas was lurched forward into the handlebar receiving a severe laceration to his chin.

Thomas was knocked unconscious and fell into the water. A passing vessel operated by Bart Wangeman of Boyne City notified the Coast Guard and Charlevoix County Sheriff's Marine Patrol and then transported the victim to the Municipal Launch in Boyne City where Thomas was then transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by EMS.

Thomas was treated and released from Charlevoix Area Hospital. Sheriff George Thomas Lasater reminds all person water craft users to use the utmost care and caution on this type of water craft by never traveling alone.

The accident was investigated by Marine Deputies Brian E. Brachel and Nick Rewald and it remains under investigation.

Lake Charlevoix Mariners auction set for Aug. 13

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
 Special to the Courier

The Lake Charlevoix Mariners will host their summer boat and equipment auction to benefit the 4-H Youth Sailing School Saturday, Aug. 13 at the Irish Boat Shop on Ferry Avenue.

Powerboats, sailboats, dinghies, trailers, excursions, services and marine equipment will be offered to the public during the nonprofit organization's major annual fundraiser.

All proceeds from the auction will go directly to the Lake Charlevoix Mariners, the fund-raising arm of the nearly 20-year-old sailing school.

Last year, more than 40 boats were sold, said Jeff Glenny, an employee at the Irish Boat Shop. These watercraft included both private and business donations.

An official list of boats to be auctioned off will not be made available to the public until the time of the event, he added.

The live auction, which will be facilitated by auctioneer Scott MacKenzie of the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce. This will be complemented by a silent auction — a new feature this year, said Gina Attee of the Lake Charlevoix Mariners.

Attee said the silent auction will include prizes such as a cruise with Sunshine Charters, a three-month pool pass to the Charlevoix Area Community Pool, gift certificates to Village Inn Pizza and Whitney's Oyster Bar, and an overnight stay-on Beaver Island.

The 4-H Youth Sailing School — which runs for another week at Charlevoix's Depot Beach — is offered to youth ages 8 to 19 each summer at Boyne City and Charlevoix facilities. During the nine-week program, U.S. SAILING-certified instructors teach participants skills such as knot tying, rigging a sailboat, small boat handling, weather and environmental awareness, docking and departing, basic racing and good sportsmanship.

The school currently operates with 21 boats, including the three safety powerboats used by its five instructors, said Linda Orlow, a 4-H Youth Sailing School program leader along with her husband, Tom.

Boats available for student use include 10 JY15 sailboats, which are 15-foot rig boats, and eight OPTI sailboats, which are 10-foot prams ideal for younger sailors and solo practice. A JY15 sailboat was recently donated to the school for student use, said Orlow.

"We are in need of a new dock system and grounds improvement," she said, adding that the school's maintenance and operating expenses are mounting alongside the steady increase of participants each year.

Registration for the Lake Charlevoix Mariners boat/equipment auction is at 9 a.m. at the Irish Boat Shop on Ferry Avenue on Saturday, Aug. 13. The auction begins at 10 a.m.

A sneak peek, where guests may pre-register for the event, will be held from 3 to 9 p.m. Friday, Aug. 12 at the Irish Boat Shop.

For more information on the auction or to donate an item, contact Jeff Glenny at (231) 547-9967.

Waterfront Art Fair celebrates 46th year

 Artists from across the country will converge on East Park Aug. 13 for the esteemed Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair.

Who: Charlevoix Council for the Arts
What it is: Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair
When: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Aug. 13
Where: Downtown Charlevoix's East Park

On Aug. 13, many of the nation's finest artists and craftsmen will be coming to the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair to exhibit their works.

The famed show, which is the second oldest juried art fair in Michigan, will take place from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Aug. 13 in downtown Charlevoix's East Park.

Considered one of the most visually exciting art fairs in the country, the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair, now in its 46th year, has a reputation with critics and collectors because of both the quality of the work and the unparalleled location.

The exhibiting group was chosen from a pool of over 1,000 applicants who submit their work to the jury for review.

The artists who show at this prestigious fair come from the area as well as from thousands of miles away for the pleasure of Charlevoix's summer visitors and the local residents.

The quality of the show is evidenced by its audience — the fair draws over 25,000 art lovers to Charlevoix.

The fair's focus of bringing fine arts and crafts to northern Michigan hasn't changed since a group of Charlevoix residents coined it and began the fair in 1958.

All profits collected in fees are used to invest in the children of the Charlevoix area to provide exposure to cultural activities not usually available in northern Michigan.

Local artist returns to Waterfront Art Fair

 Charlevoix resident Edith Pair will display her painted furniture which has "an eclectic, contemporary-pop flair."

By ANNE KELLY
 Special to the Courier

In 1991, Edith Pair, a senior at Charlevoix High School, was invited to be a featured student artist in the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair. She never dreamed she would return 14 years later as an exhibitor.

Upon graduation from Charlevoix High School, Pair enrolled in the School of Art at the Art Institute of Chicago in Chicago, Ill.

Graduating five years later with a Bachelor of Fine Arts and a major in fashion design, Pair engaged in an assistant buying job at Montgomery Ward in the windy city.

She was soon disenchanted with retail and decided to regroup.

It was during this time that she worked for the chi-chi Bistro 110 café-restaurant in Chicago, Ill. and the artist in her reemerged.

During her sojourn at Bistro 110, Pair dabbled in freelance art work there and at other venues in the restaurant district. At Bistro 110, she painted wall murals, menu boxes, window boxes and decorated tables with her bright pop art.

Word of her talent spread to other eateries like Jake Melnick's Corner Tap where she painted beer logo table tops under the sponsorship of several beer companies, and the Ritz Coffee House where she painstakingly hand painted the entire menu along the walls of the shop.

acrylics, Pair paints furniture with what she would describe as "an eclectic, contemporary-pop flair."

Pair's dream is to open a gallery in Traverse City, perhaps by next spring, but she is mindful of the challenges involved in such an endeavor, not only in stockpiling salable artwork, but in mastering the business side of art.

She is presently working for her father at Midwest International in Charlevoix, where she is learning the ins and outs of the business world.

"I'm trying a little bit of everything," she explained. "To learn as much as I can about accounting, marketing and sales."

Pair has exhibited her work at the Arts and Crafts Show in Charlevoix from 2000-2003, Bay Harbor in 2001 and Petoskey's Art in the Park in 2001.

She will be showing her furniture and introducing a new series of mix and match paintings on epoxied wood at the Aug. 13 Waterfront Art Show.

Laura Meddaugh returns with 'Rooms with a View'

By ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

Laura Meddaugh, a veteran exhibitor at the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair, whose "Rooms with a View," are a favorite with art fair enthusiasts returns this weekend.

"I have been showing at the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair for 15 years," Meddaugh said. "I love seeing repeat customers and get a kick out of the fact that even boxers come up and huy."

Meddaugh creates her three-dimensional watercolor rooms painted on molded watercolor paper.

"In many of my 'Rooms with a View,' I also incorporate pastel pencil, fabric paint and water soluble crayon to get the effect I desire," she explained.

Her husband, a computer graphics and animation teacher at Waukegan High School in Wisconsin helps her with framing and in executing the 15-18 art fairs she participates in annually.

He has also added a technological dimension to her miniatures by scanning images of famous paintings and then using computer software to repaint them. These miniature paintings become the starting point for the evolution of her enchanting rooms.

"I think these pieces are something that both husbands and wives can agree on," Meddaugh said. "Even children recognize some of the featured artists in my rooms. They often bring their parents to my booth to show them their discovery of an artist they recognize."

Meddaugh's family also includes two teenage children who, along with her husband, accompany her to the various art shows each year.

"I've been showing my work in galleries and doing art fairs in the Midwest since 1982, and starting in 1986, I've been making this my full time job," she said.

Her work is presently represented by the Johnston Gallery in Mineral Point, Wis. and in the Frogtown Gallery in Bailey's Harbor, Wis.

This year, Meddaugh will introduce something new for her clientele at the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair.

She will bring bright and whimsical acrylics-on-canvas "Rooms with a View" to complement the miniatures. Every one of her works are one-of-a-kind originals.

Charlevoix resident joins African mission trip

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

You may have seen people on television pleading for 60 cents a day to help a starving child in Africa, but some local residents find they can help for a lot less.

According to Charlevoix resident, Al Simon, who is a volunteer with Joint Aid Management (JAM), the group provides food, clean water, education and skills training to hundreds of thousands of children all over Africa who otherwise might not have a chance — and they do it for $50 a year per child.

"These children would die, and they were dying," Simon said.

He added, "Even if they could survive, their mental capacity is so diminished many of them can't make it."

Genocide, poverty, war and famine are among the reasons there are so many orphaned children in Africa, not to mention the AIDS epidemic.

Thanks to the management program and it's many supporters, approximately 450,000 children have been fed, educated and given fresh water in places like Angola, Mozambique, Rwanda and South Africa.

Simon was one of a group of 25 from the Walloon Lake Community Church who traveled to Africa last October to help by stripping military vehicles and turning them into food hauling vehicles.

And, he added, "We grind food for ourselves and for the U.N. (United Nations) and they donate part of the food back to us."

They provide biscuits and dehydrated soup which has been enriched with vitamins and minerals then the huge military trucks haul the food to schools and orphanages.

Some members of the group, including Kevin Klevorn, who is the missions committee chairman and church board chairman at Walloon Lake Community Church, worked on securing the perimeter of the compound where they stayed.

"If it's not nailed down it's gone. We helped build an 8-foot high security fence with electrification on top," he said.

Klevorn said there is a 40 percent unemployment rate in South Africa and an extremely high rate of crime.

"There are two huge problems," Klevorn said. "One is the AIDS epidemic and the second is unemployment."

According to Simon, in spite of the turmoil the African people are facing, there haven't been any fatalities among the volunteer group he works with.

"We've been blessed," he said.

There have only been a couple incidents in the over 22 years the organization has been in existence.

"We had a rig blown apart in the Congo during an uprising," he said. But, luckily, no one was injured.

Getting out of the area to help people who are in need is an important part of what the Walloon Lake Community

"We try to make it a habit to get out to keep missions on the forefront of what we do," he said. "The trip to (Africa) was probably the furthest we've gone as a church body."

Klevorn said there were people as young as eight or nine years old.

The organization's main goal is to educate while feeding the children so the kids can grow up to lead happy, productive lives.

"There are people in the government in Mozambique who came out of the orphanage," he said.

"Our intent was to get the kids to learn so we're not feeding them for the next 100 years," Simon said.

But, Simon added, while the organization was started to help children, no old, blind, crippled or pregnant individuals are ever turned away.

The program hopes to feed and educate one million children in the regions in which they operate by the year 2007.

JAM also helps find families for many of the orphaned children and drills wells for fresh water with a little over 200 wells being drilled and completed last year alone.

The area of South Africa they were in, about two hours from Johannesburg, is a 21 hour journey one-way but Klevorn said he wouldn't have given up the arduous and rewarding journey for anything.

"Walloon Lake is a church that has a heartbeat in the gospel," he said. "If we can keep it in front of the congregation that God is not a North American God he is a red, yellow, white, black in-between God, that's a good thing."

Klevorn said the mission group is looking into possible locations for their next mission. And, while he isn't sure where that will be, he knows there will be another.

"We always have something in the hopper," he said. "It really is an eye-opening experience to appreciate how much we really have in the United States."

Courtesy photo

Volunteers from the Walloon Lake Community Church take a break after turning what was once a military vehicle into a food hauling truck.

Klevorn said there are several ways to help needy kids, including sponsorships, and volunteering.

"I think it's more than just feel good about doing something nice, it's definitely bigger than that, the opportunity to serve someone else and to be a servant to a full-time missionary on the mission field just has tremendous benefits in terms of seeing or having a different perspective on how good we have it here."

Accident reports show 10 dangerous intersections

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Intersections with traffic lights may be no safer than those with a stop sign.

According to a report drafted by officials with the Charlevoix City Police Department, traffic accidents in 2004 at the 10 major intersections in town were about even with years before.

"Some people think that a light at an intersection makes it safer, but I think these statistics show that signalized intersections are more dangerous than a non-signalized intersection," Halverson said.

Halverson said he hopes people will take notice of higher risk areas and keep that in mind when they are driving.

"Use that information to your advantage," he said. "Those intersections are high frequency accident areas, keep that in mind and keep a highly defensive driving posture."

Intersections drivers should be on the defensive at include Bridge Street and M-66, Garfield and Carpenter Streets, Park Avenue and Mason Street where there were 15, 10, nine, seven and five crashes respectively.

The accidents occurred at or near the intersections listed.

None of the 15 crashes near the Bridge Street and M-66 intersection involved bicycles or pedestrians, three involved commercial vehicles and 11 were rear end collisions.

"Obviously with rear end collisions most of those (drivers) are not paying attention," Halverson said.

Prospect at Petoskey Avenue, State Street at Mason Street, Michigan Avenue at Pine River Lane and State Street at Garfield Street each had four crashes.

"I think what we can learn from those statistics is that you should be in more of a defensive posture than an offensive posture when in that area to keep from becoming one of those numbers," he said.

According to Halverson, conflicts such as stoplights, driveways and stop signs tend to increase the chances of an accident.

"Mile for mile the expressway is the safest because of the lack of conflict," he said.

Halverson said some of the main distractions to drivers people should watch out for are talking to passengers, changing radio stations and talking on the phone.

Another thing people can do to reduce their chance of a serious car accident, is to lower their speed.

"Just because it's posted 25 or 35, you don't have to go that fast," Halverson said. "A lot of time it's the optimum speed but there are times where reduced speed is safer — sometimes you should go much less than that."

In 2003 in the State of Michigan there were 1,172 traffic related fatalities, with four occurring in Charlevoix.

Study of women's issues in the county released

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

The Michigan Women's Commission in Lansing recently released "The Status of Michigan Women at the County Level," the group's first intensive study of women's issues in the state's 83 counties.

"The important thing about the report is that it expresses women's issues. There's still inequality that exists and needs our attention," said Judy Karandjeff, executive director of the women's commission, since May 2003. "Whether it's encouraging our daughters and granddaughters to get into professions with higher pay and benefits or gaining greater access to health care, there are a lot of issues women should be concerned about."

The categories and methods used in the report were developed by the Institute for Women's Policy Research (IWPR) last year and sponsored by the Ann Arbor-based James A. and Faith Knight Foundation.

The study's results are broken down into six concentrations per county including demographics; political participation; employment and earnings; social and economic autonomy; reproductive rights; and health and well-being.

According to the Women's Commission, there are 13,186 women living in Charlevoix County, 96.37 percent of which are classified as white. American Indian or Alaska Native women account for 1.49 percent of the county's female population, while those with mixed race account for 1.30 percent.

The percentage of county women, aged 15 or older, who are married is 61.81 percent, the study found. Divorcees make up 11.19 percent of county females, while widows make up 9.92 percent.

The employment and earnings category of the study states that the median annual income for women in Charlevoix County is $22,447. Women also make up 58.35 percent of the county's labor force.

In the social and economic autonomy category, the study found that 90.80 percent of women in Charlevoix County have health insurance. Also, the report states that 18.70 percent of county businesses are owned by women. The percentage of women in Charlevoix County living below the poverty line is 8.98 percent, the study reads.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau's most recent poverty report which was completed in 2003 and is available at www.census.gov, the poverty threshold for a family of four is an annual income at or below $18,660. For an individual over the age of 65, the poverty threshold is an annual income at or below $8,825.

Karandjeff said she hopes community members find enough significance in the study's figures to initiate discussion or spawn activist organizations.

"Where we need to work on most of these indicators is at the local level," she said. "In 2004, the biggest issue was men-to-women earnings and the fact that we (Michigan) ranked 49th in the nation."

The "Status of Women in Michigan at the County Level" states the ratio of female-to-male earnings in Charlevoix County is 69.16 cents for every $1.

In the reproductive rights category, the study found Charlevoix County's health plan for civil service employees does not cover infertility treatments or contraceptives. The percentage of women in the county receiving prenatal care in the first trimester of birth is 87.50, while the infant mortality rate in the county is 5.20 per 1,000 live births.

In the final health and well-being category, the study states women's mortality rate from heart disease in Charlevoix County is 214.51 per 100,000 women; from lung cancer is 96.16 per 100,000 women; and from breast cancer is 29.59 per 100,000 women. An estimated 830 women in the county aged 18 or older have diabetes, while less than 5 women aged 13 or older are living with HIV.

Intended as a "community research tool," the Women's Commission has made the study available online at www.michigan.gov/mdcr.

Two interns, one from the Women's Commission and one from the foundation, were responsible for the study's preliminary research, which took about six months to complete. Data was retrieved primarily through public records — the U.S. Census Bureau, Michigan Uniform Crime Reports, and county and health care association statistics. Cold calls accounted for a small portion of the research, mainly in the reproductive rights category.

A peculiar matter this year, Karandjeff said, is women's political participation — the study states that 81.52 percent of women in Charlevoix County were registered to vote in the 2004 general election, but only 56.73 percent cast ballots.

The primary benefit of the Women's Commission study lies in

Coldwell welcomes new Realtor, Trip McNamara

Trip McNamara has joined the Charlevoix office of Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors.

A Petoskey resident since 1986 and a longtime visitor to the area prior to that, McNamara brings with him over 15 years of real estate experience, including a stint with a local mortgage company as well as several area developments.

"I'm very excited to be with Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors," McNamara said. "The firm has an excellent reputation, and the tools that I have access to now, from the Internet and Intranet sites to mailing lists, will make it very easy to build my business and assist my clients."

McNamara has generated over $100 million in sales in northern Michigan over the course of his career. Most recently he was with Bay Harbor, which he helped open in 1994. He specializes in project developments.

"I'm really happy to be with the team that Mark Knapp is building here in Charlevoix," McNamara said. "After meeting with him and with (company CEO) Ken Schmidt, it was obvious this would be a good move for me and for all the people I work with."

Knapp and Schmidt are both pleased to have McNamara on board.

"Trip has a very good and well-earned reputation in the area," Knapp said.

Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors, is a family-owned realty company with 28 offices throughout northern and western Michigan.

Consumers Energy reports record setting energy use

Heavy air conditioner use drove customer demand for electricity to record high levels Aug. 2-3 on Consumers Energy's system.

According to preliminary data, the total load on the utility's system hit an all-time record peak of 8,510 megawatts between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. Aug. 3. That broke the day-old record of 8,376 megawatts set between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. Aug. 2.

Before the back-to-back records, the previous all-time high was 8,347 megawatts set on Aug. 7, 2001.

Customer demand records also were set in June and July, according to preliminary data. A record June peak of 8,327 megawatts was set June 27 and a record July peak of 8,191 megawatts was set on July 25.

Consumers Energy serves about 1.8 million electric customers. A megawatt is a million watts or 1,000 kilowatts. That's enough electricity to power about 10,000 100-watt light bulbs.

Consumers Energy, the principal subsidiary of CMS Energy, provides natural gas and electricity to more than six million of the state's 10 million residents in all 68 Lower Peninsula counties.

Kur's request for disqualification denied

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

A motion made by former Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur in Emmet County District Court alleging bias on the part of Judge Richard May was recently denied.

Kur filed a motion in April with the Emmet County 90th District Court to disqualify Judge May, who covers both Charlevoix and Emmet counties, from hearing her cases in both counties.

In July, Grand Traverse County Circuit Court Judge Philip Rogers reviewed briefs issued by attorneys of both Kur and Judge May and ruled that there was not enough evidence of personal bias to justify disqualification of Judge May.

"In the few cases I've had since Judge Rogers' decision, I've felt my clients were treated fairly," Kur said.

At this time, Kur said she does not intend to appeal Judge Rogers' decision to the Michigan Court of Appeals.

"I'm going to take a wait and see attitude," she said.

Kur, entered private practice with

Hunter's education classes offered at Rod and Gun Club

A Hunter Education Clinic will take place Aug. 20 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

Registration for the clinic will be at 8:30 a.m. in the clubhouse. The days activities will conclude at 4 p.m. There will be a lunch break, and registrants are asked to bring a drink and sack lunch.

This clinic is open to all area residents regardless of age and is required of all first-time hunting license buyers born since Jan. 1, 1960.

Students under 11 years of age shall be accompanied by a parent or guardian or other adult, designated and provided by the parent or guardian, during the course.

A testing session, for those who complete the clinic will be held at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club at 6 p.m. on Aug. 22. Attendance is mandatory at both sessions to receive the Hunter Education Certificate.

For more information about the sessions call Jim Mansen at (231) 547-6862. This clinic is free and conducted with the help of the Department of Natural Resources, members of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and volunteer instructors from the area.

The Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club is located north of Charlevoix off U.S. 31.

the Petoskey firm Schmoll, Martin & Kur Jan. 1, 2005 after losing the August 2004 primary election to her former assistant prosecutor and current Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema.

She claims Judge May supported Jarema, who she went toe to toe with in a lengthy legal battle before the election, and this support has effected his decisions.

On March 7, 2005 Jarema hired Mark Muniak to the Charlevoix County Assistant Prosecutor's seat.

Prior to accepting the position, Muniak was a member of the four-person consortium of attorneys called the Charlevoix County Defense Team. This consortium has contracted with the county since June of 2003 to provide court appointed attorney services to indigent criminal defendants.

Muniak's resignation from the consortium left a vacancy and Kur was nominated by the remaining members of the defense team to fill the slot.

Under the current contract, the consortium's nomination must be approved by both Judge May and Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas and is ultimately ratified by the Charlevoix County Commission.

Kur claims Judge May's alleged bias surfaced in his printed recommendation which advised against hiring her.

In a written statement to the commissioners, dated March 22, 2005,

Judge May said, "I do not believe that the recommended appointment of Mary Beth Kur as a court appointed attorney is in the best interest of the community, the operation of the 90th District Court, or for defendants."

He went on to say that his position in the matter was based on past and current litigation facing the county. Litigation he alluded to includes two Whistleblower's Act claims against

Marilyn Boss 'Days gone by'

It was a slower time in the 1940s, when people were content with what they had, and everyone knew their neighbors well. There were always those who stood out around town and reminiscing about them is always interesting.

Marie McCall was such a person. She lived at 110 E. Hurlbut. She was the widow of Andrew. You could find her often at Schroeder's Drug Store, with her friends. She was a very cheerful lady, and always attended every basketball game, being and avid fan of the Rayders.

Clarence and Blanch McCalmon lived at 211 W. Lincoln. Their children were Michael and Maxine.

Dale McCann was a clerk at Milton Block's Store. He lived at 106 W. Lincoln. John McCann was a baker and lived at 104 W. Lincoln. Rose McCann was a widow (James) and lived at 605 State Street. Daniel McCann also lived there. He was a laborer.

Michael McCarthy and his wife, Florence, lived at 703 Bridge. He was a meat cutter for Martin Block Groceries and Meats. "Mac" was quite a story teller and a very comical butcher.

SCRAPBOOK

A look at Charlevoix residents from 1940

Lawrence and Alice McClanathan lived at 211 E. Lincoln they had a son, William. Lawrence was a laborer.

Joseph McCormick was a clerk for the Pere Marquette Railway. He and his wife, Alma, lived at 907 Bridge Street.

Eva McDonald was a widow. She lived at 310 E. Dixon Avenue. John and Mary McDonald lived at 314 Prospect. They had a son, Charles. John was a lighthouse keeper and Mary was from Beaver Island, and was a very neat housekeeper. Charles later worked for Schroeder's Drug Store, and he and a little Volkswagen. Dale talked him into taking it out to the water hole that covered a section of Bells Bay Road in the spring of the year. Charles got halfway across the water and the car started to float. He kept his foot on the gas to keep the wheels spinning and this propelled the car to the other side of the water hole.

Robert and Sophrona McDermott and children, Robert Jr., Joseph, Catherine and Bettie lived at 111 E. Upright. A son, Robbie was born later. Robert was a fisherman.

Franklin and Lila McFarland owned the Parkside Dining Room. They were known for their good food and mile high lemon pie. They lived at 101 E. Garfield. Their children were: Betty, Charline, and twins, Mona and Dona, they had the first air conditioned building in Charlevoix. They pumped water from Round Lake through a set of coils with fans behind, to dispel cold air inside the restaurant. The case it was in was a big metal one, with fans and coils contained inside it.

James and Mary McGeah lived at 309 E. Dixon. He was a contractor. They also served dinners in their home to the resort trade in the summer time.

Eva McGhan was a housekeeper, and lived at 810 Bridge. La Vern McGhan lived on Route 3, and was a driver for the Charlevoix Co-op. Lyda McGhan was a widow (Albert) and she and her children Marie and Marion, lived at 704 Grant.

Omer McKinnon was an attendant. He and his wife, Dorothy and son John, lived at 1302 Bridge Street.

Margaret McLean was a widow (John). She lived at 112 W. Lincoln.

Lottie McMillan was a widow (Donald), who lived with her children, James and Viola at 203 Ferry Avenue. Archie also lived there, as did Pearl. Fraley F. McMillan was a physician, and he and his wife, Hazel, lived at 219 Park Avenue. His office was located at 213 1/2 Bridge St. He was also Vice President of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank.

Jennie McRoberts was a widow (Eugene) and lived at 104 E. Lincoln.

Daniel McSauby was a carrier for the Charlevoix Post Office, and he and his sons, Louis and Fred lived at 508 Newman. Fred was a laborer. Dan was the first Native American to carry house to house mail for the U.S. Postal Service. He always looked very sharp and dignified in his U.S. Postal Service uniform.

Nell Meech was a widow (Darwin) and lived at 202 Mason Street. She took care of children in trouble in her home, which had bars on the windows. She lived adjacent to the county jail on Antrim Street. The home was situated on a drive which went past the jail from Antrim to Mason Street.

Mark Meek was a partner with Ira Davis and they owned the Colonial Club, located Meech Street. Frank Poole, Sam King, and Albert Novotny were local men who parked cars for the establishment, and kept track of people who came there. They made sure no locals were allowed in to gamble. They didn't want locals to lose money, so they could keep the gambling secret.

The Colonial Club in Charlevoix, and the Club Manitou, outside of Harbor Springs were the two largest gambling houses in the State of Michigan. This, of course, was illegal. Dale remembers Albert telling of all the secret walls the building had. These walls folded up to cover the gambling equipment. When the law came in to investigate, everything was normal. Bob Miles used to say that the Governor of Michigan had license plate number 1, and the owner of the club had license plate number 2. Dale remembers going with his dad into the back door to deliver ice cream to Mr. Gatti, who ran the kitchen for the club.

Clarence and Edna Miles lived at 111 Park Avenue. He was a decorator. His son, Keith, also lived there. Robert and Esther Miles lived at 109 Park Avenue. Bob was a noted photographer, and owned Miles Studio. I had pictures taken there as a child, and he also took them of my children in later years. Bob was a good friend and I have a lovely Petoskey stone pen holder he made and gave me. He spent many, many hours cataloging old Charlevoix pictures, and was responsible for taking many of them, and collecting them from others. These are on display in the Harsba House Museum on State Street. Bob and Esther had two sons, Robert and David. David has taken his place at the museum, and continues to work with old pictures, and artifacts. He has a wealth of information in his head, and he presents programs, and has been on local TV, bringing most interesting aspects of Charlevoix history to the area. Walker and Sylvia Miles lived with their children, Suzanne, Clara and Bard at 202 Belvedere. He was a mail carrier. He was featured in Ripley's "Believe it or not" in the syndicated newspapers. The reason: His name was Walker Miles and he did walk miles every day.

Such were some of the people in 1940.

Kur: Judicial Tenure Commission complaint still on table

Kur that were filed during her time as prosecutor. One was filed by Jarema following his termination and another by two former county employees.

In Judge May's memo to the commissioners he said that based on these cases he would not endorse her as a consortium member.

"I am not comfortable that decisions are going to be made solely upon what is in the best interest of clients. With other qualified attorneys available, I am not willing to create situations that may continue to add fuel to these disputes, to the detriment of defendant's cases," he said in the statement.

While Judge May declined to recommend Kur for the vacancy, Judge Pajtas gave her a glowing recommendation which included references to her ethics, skills and accuracy.

"It is a privilege to recommend Mary Beth Kur for the position of public defender," he wrote in a September 17, 2004 recommendation.

Judge Pajtas wrote a second recommendation on March 23, 2005 consenting to the hiring of former assistant prosecutor Kerry Zahner for the public defender's opening. In that letter, he spelled out that his consent for Zahner's hiring in no way trumped his recommendation in favor of hiring Kur.

On April 13, 2005 the commission approved hiring Zahner.

On April 14 and 15 Judge May oversaw a hearing for Kur's motion to recuse himself from any cases she is involved in. At that hearing Judge May decided to deny the motion, claiming he could be fair.

According to Kur a claim she filed against Judge May on May 2 with the Michigan Judicial Tenure Commission remains active.

Paul Fischer, executive director of the Michigan Judicial Tenure

Commission, said he could not confirm any details of this because complaints are filed under the rules of confidentiality. However, he did say the commission has not issued a formal complaint against Judge May. Judge May was unavailable for comment.

Officials aim at sex offenders

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The incident involving Arthur Kirk a repeat sex offender working as a contracted employee for the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District (ISD) has prompted some local leaders to act.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, parents and legislators can't afford to wait to keep their children safe from sexual predators.

"Michigan wake up. Our children are being abused and re-abused by perpetrators," Lasater said. "I think the current situation we're involved in with the Americorp representative being a past convicted pedophile with three previous charges prompted our concern that there are holes in the system."

Lasater and Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema have both requested State Representative Kevin Elsenheimer and State Senator Jason Allen introduce a bill which would mandate complete criminal histories including fingerprints for all employees and volunteers who work with juveniles.

"They were very interested in assisting with public entities," Lasater said. "They have reservations about private entities, but I feel very strongly that whatever agency has dealings with our youth should go through the same background checks, the two have agreed."

He added that citizens concerned about the safety of their children should contact state representatives in Lansing and make those concerns known.

Lasater said, if a more extensive background check would have been in place, the sex offender never would have been contracted to work with children in Charlevoix.

"If it's unrealistic for private entities such as Boy Scouts and summer camps to perform fingerprinting, then waive the fee of the prints and let's just get this done," Lasater said.

Not only did Allen and Elsenheimer introduce a bill mandating the use of fingerprints and background checks, the two have come up with a package of bills designed to help protect children from sexual predators both in and near schools.

"We've got an entire package called the Student Safety Initiative on this topic. Kevin Elsenheimer and I are working on it and we're trying to put something together," Allen said. "We will continue to work with the sheriff and prosecutor."

Some of the major sections of the Student Safety Initiative are meant to keep schools and day-care centers free of employees or

Navy trains in Charlevoix for deployment

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

Special Warfare Combatant Crewmen (SWCC) with the United States Navy were in Charlevoix last week doing special warfare training.

On Aug. 12 the Navy group from San Diego, Calif. was at Ferry Beach, prepping rigid hull inflatable boats spanning 11 meters in length, for a day of water training.

According to Teri Alexander, a lieutenant commander and public affairs officer with the Navy, the crewman, called "Sweiks," are part of the Navy's special warfare team. They are in charge of operating vessels that bring in and take out Navy Seals.

"This is a highly respected group," Alexander said. She explained that this exercise was conducted in conjunction with an overall training regimen to prep soldiers for the global war on terrorism.

"This is preparation for units before they will be deployed overseas," she said.

Alexander would not comment as to when deployment was scheduled citing security and safety reasons.

She said that during the month of August, about 700 military personnel from various units will be trained at locations around northern Michigan. The training base is located in Alpena.

"The Alpena area is an excellent training site," she said. She said the variety of environmental conditions in this area help prepare soldiers for changing circumstances they may face.

Alexander declined to comment as to whether other personnel will be trained in Charlevoix or when the group arrived and left during last week's training regimen.

"I am not allowed to release information about travel dates due to security," she said.

This tight lipped approach to the training even kept local officials in the dark.

On Friday, Aug. 12, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said he was unaware of the mission and said the crewmen might be affiliated with the U.S. Coast Guard.

Chief of Coast Guard Station Charlevoix, John McLean, said he didn't know they were here until spotting them on their way out of town late last week.

"See how secretive that is," he said.

Deputy and daughter recover stolen canoes

A local dad and daughter duo helped in the recovery of stolen canoes.

Off-duty Deputy Westrick from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office had picked up his 12-year-old daughter, Andrea, from Camp Daggett and was drying her home. She was telling her father stories of the great time she had had at the Charlevoix County camp when about 15 miles from camp she observed a pick-up truck being loaded with numerous canoes at a home along side of the road. Andrea told her dad, "The two red canoes were stolen from Camp Daggett."

Andrea was sure because she had read the wanted posters hung up around the camp describing the stolen canoes. And said the two canoes were missed because campers did not have enough for recreation.

Deputy Westrick approached the young adults loading the canoes and identified himself. The trio had a story lined up and had taken measure to disguise the canoes identity. Deputy Westrick was unsure and left the group and drove home. Andrea said the canoes had "New seats just like the wanted poster."

Later, the Deputy Westrick began his duty shift and made it a point to check the situation one more time. After questioning suspects and friends the subjects were convinced to tell the truth.

They had stolen the canoes two weeks before by pulling them off the shore and towing the vessels with a motorboat. The suspects then used the canoes for an Upper Peninsula river trip.

Within the day the canoes were confiscated and returned to use at Camp Daggett. The campers and directors were elated. They did not expect to see the canoes again. The canoes will be touched-up and put to use immediately.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater expressed great happiness with Andrea, the persistent and observant camper and presented her with a Sheriff's Appreciation Certificate.

High School auditorium. This year's headliner is the Northwest Academy Jazz Band under the direction of Gary Stutzman.

Allen and Elsenheimer push for new legislation

volunteers who may have been sex offenders in the past by requiring more complete background checks and creating safety zones near schools, wherein convicted sex offenders would be prohibited from working, living or loitering within 1,000 feet of a school.

The initiative would also mandate that school employees inform administrators and the Michigan Department of Education about any serious criminal sex crime charges pending against them.

Referring to the recent incident concerning Kirk, the sex offender working for the Charlevoix ISD, Allen said, it is a unique situation that someone would change their name after being convicted of a sex offense, so it is difficult to track that sort of thing.

But, he added, "We had a similar problem with the Traverse Bay Intermediate School District where a mentally ill child was abused by a staffer."

Because the sexual predator in the Traverse Bay district had offended in another state, the statewide background check was of little use to the school system.

Hence, part of the package proposed by Allen and Elsenheimer is to implement a national background check system with the hopes of averting future events such as this.

The Student Safety Initiative package consists of senate bills 601-617 each having different measures of protection.

According to a bill analysis by the Senate Majority Policy Office, Senate Bill 601 (SB 601), current law dictates that teachers, administrators and employees in state board approved positions are the only school employees who are required to have criminal background checks while superintendents and assistant superintendents are not required to have a background check completed.

"SB 601 will require all applicants for jobs in schools (and contracted employees) to have criminal history checks and FBI background checks conducted. The school must have received the results before employing the individual or allowing the individual to continue to work under contract or if the results are not yet available, the individual must sign a statement identifying all crimes for which he or she has been convicted," said policy advisor Anne Blankenhorn in her analysis.

She added, "If the background check reveals that the individual has been convicted of a crime listed on the sex offender registry, the applicant could not be hired or work under contract."

Lack of information: ignorance is not security

EDITORIAL

You may have noticed black boats with machine guns and camouflaged soldiers in the waters of Charlevoix last week.

They weren't filming the newest Schwarzenegger action movie and Castro didn't sneak up from Cuba to steal our petunias, it was a group of soldiers with several Navy assault boats completing training exercises.

Unable to verify or explain their existence, a soldier directed us to speak with the Navy's Public Affairs Officer. When we did she could offer no information to us citing the "Global war on terror." After all, she said, it is a matter of "homeland security." Upon independent investigation, we discovered these boats are generally used for Navy SEALs missions. So what were they doing in Charlevoix?

As far as we know, questioning the actions of our public servants has historically been one of few ways American citizens keep track of the buggers. So, what can we do when a governing body is no longer accountable for its actions?

Political or military cover-up? Tell the public it's a matter of homeland security. The next time the wife asks why you haven't taken out the garbage tell her it's an issue of homeland security and see how well it goes over.

Refusing to give troop movements and battlefield locations to us corn pone civilians is one thing. But withholding explanation for assault forces roaming the beaches of northern Michigan seems to be more fancy than homeland security.

And what better way to flex your proverbial muscle than to refuse to be held accountable to your subjects?

In light of the military's secrecy our minds raced. For all we knew Osama and his band of merry marauders came to rid "Charlevoix the Beautiful" of infidels.

Does Homeland Security mean your phone or e-mail may be monitored for days without a warrant?

Benjamin Franklin said, "Those who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."

Well, there isn't much liberty in being kept in the dark by our government.

There you have it, information no longer has to be privileged to be withheld from the American public, it need only bear the label of "Homeland Security."

We're not quite sure where this country is headed, but as for us, we'll just continue to stock up on duct tape and try to annoy the government with as many questions as possible.

Incidents remind writer, good grief is a good lesson

Gayle Gennett

'A look at life'

In the past few months I have felt the loss of significant individuals in our community.

Incidents like these bring back memories of my mother's passing, and serve to remind me that it's a good thing to talk about our grief. When someone dear to us passes away it has an impact that affects us the remainder of our lives. How we deal with our loss is varied depending upon our age, religious beliefs, and relationship to the person who died.

Life doesn't prepare us for loss. It's something learned through experience. Seek out others who have empathy for what you're going through.

One loss could mean losing a father to one person while it's losing a husband to another or a grandpa or good friend to yet another. We need to accept how each is feeling.

Yes, time makes it better but there isn't a timeline. Grief is the only emotion that can be brought back, it is an instant with a smell, touch, song, or sight. Learning to let go and live life will actually help bring back the best memories. Healing allows us to enjoy them. You can feel more like yourself again when the experience is shared with others who have experienced a loss. No one wants to grieve alone. Be good to yourself and give yourself a break when you need it. Grieving is a process — recovery is a choice.

And for children especially, be patient, honest and attentive. Have them write a good-bye letter. Involve them in the ceremony. Note their attention span is shorter and they quickly learn to go on with life. Maybe they are serving as an example for us. We can learn so much from them; they will only fear death if we do. As adults we go through more of these experiences and after a funeral we smile with our faces but children smile with their hearts. Their senses are keen and they follow our lead.

Be honest and use your belief system to describe what is happening. Talk about the things they did with the person who passed, the fun times you had, and assure them that their loved one is always with them in spirit. It's like taking off your coat and leaving it behind. Grandma or grandpa may be gone but their coat is still here just like their spirit.

Dying teaches us to live. When our friends experience a loss we sometimes just don't know what to say, but your presence will mean more than you can ever imagine. The smallest good deed is better than the grandest good intention. Supporting someone is best done by listening, and if you are the one mourning, seek out others who will listen and have empathy; then do something good for yourself. Holidays will be difficult as well so it may mean changing traditions.

Life is for the living but we can still honor those we grieve. Plants from their home, placed in your garden is a wonderful way to remember them and additional plants can be added with special anniversaries. A child's painting of grandma or grandpa may be framed for all to see.

So, good grief is a good lesson and serves to remind me to educate others to live their life well and also to remind my friends that no teacher on their deathbed said, "Wow, I should have written more lesson plans."

Letters to the editor

'Thank you' Charlevoix
Editor:

This is simply a letter of appreciation to the people of Charlevoix.

Jason, our youngest son, is now 25 years old and he was camping with his friends at Fisherman's Island State Park on Lake Michigan in Charlevoix. When my husband and I visited him at his campsite he said, "Thanks for bringing us to Charlevoix for all these years." He mentioned how he enjoys all the wonderful memories he had of summers past and how lucky he felt that he had the opportunity to enjoy Charlevoix.

In about 1985, Tom and I started taking vacations in the Charlevoix area where we simply camped or rented cottages. We had a new 20 foot Imperial boat, a bow rider, that was excellent for water-skiing and enjoying boat rides in the inland lakes. We had three sons and this kind of vacation was the best for our boys. There was nothing better for them than water skiing in the South Arm, biking down some out of the way roads, and spending the night at the boat docks. Daytime was brilliant and night time was haunting with shimmering lights and faceless voices.

Now my husband Tom and I are in our sixties and we continue to enjoy Charlevoix and we appreciate it more than ever. Charlevoix is especially beautiful because of the townspeople.

When we pull up to the docks with our boat, Hal, the harbor master says, "Welcome Home." The young women and men who work the docks are wonderful and always quick to assist us.

Everybody is kind and helpful. The people at Oleson's Market, the photographer at Aartvark, the waitresses and waiters at the Villager Pub, the shopkeepers at the Clothing Company and the Charlevoix T-shirt company, the owner of the Appletree, the waiters and waitresses at the Weathervane, Audrey, the potter at Studio 704 and all the others up and down Bridge Street are beautiful people. We also especially appreciate Bergmann Marine and it is good to see Doug there just flash us a smile when its time for his staff to dunk our boat in the lake.

We recently attended Mass at St. Mary's and noticed the new pastor. He said that we need to enjoy the life we have now and not wonder or wait for death to bring eternal happiness in heaven. There is much beauty in this world and there are many beautiful people and how good it is to have experienced all that it is so "heavenly" in Charlevoix.

Blood drive success

Editor:
On July 21 and July 28, the American Red Cross was in Charlevoix conducting blood drives. A total of 108 pints of blood were collected.

A shortage of blood products to treat the sick and injured is quite common during the summer months. The activities in our beautiful resort town during the long days of warm sunshine keep all of us immensely busy. That is why I'm so grateful to the donors who found the time to commit themselves to give the gift of life.

I'm especially thankful to my volunteers for working 3 hour shifts, some of them staying an extra hour to donate blood.

Once again, the Community Reformed Church and Bethany Lutheran Church in Charlevoix were gracious hosts. The Charlevoix Lions Club provided invaluable assistance to the Red Cross staff. Many thanks to Edith Dale for coordinating the blood drive at Bethany and I am obliged to the volunteer bakers who brought homemade desserts. I'm happy that the city put up my banners and that businesses allowed posters in their windows. Thank you.

Our next community blood drive will be from noon until 5:45 p.m. Sept. 15, at the Reformed Church. Please make an effort to help the Red Cross save lives by donating blood.

Sheehan's politics misguided

Editor:
The mainstream media have a heroine in Cindy Sheehan who lost a son in Iraq. She is an encamped war protester on the road to the president's ranch, and is demanding to see President Bush, who met with her once before.

First, she is an activist with a political agenda who has ties to various anti-war groups. If she were a conservative, blue star mom who wanted to tell the president that her son felt he was fighting for a righteous cause and was proud to play a part in freeing millions of people from tyranny, she wouldn't draw a moment's notice from the media.

It is sad that Mrs. Sheehan thinks her son's sacrifice was a waste. Sad that she can't take consolation from knowing that he volunteered out of a sense of duty, and was fighting a bloodthirsty enemy who makes no distinction between killing American soldiers or innocent Iraqi men, women and children. Apparently, Mrs. Sheehan has chosen to be angry and bitter rather than to associate honor and meaning with the memory of her son. Her grief will be long and inconsolable.

But her son's sacrifice will be honored. By the military, by this writer and by millions of Americans and Iraqis. Because of him and those before him who fought and died, Afghanistan is free. The Iraqi people are free and self governing. And most of Iraq is peaceful. The ripple effects of our presence

Charlevoix bridge stuck shut Sunday, Aug. 14

The bridge connecting Charlevoix's north and south sides was stuck shut on Sunday, Aug. 14.

According to Tom Irvin with the Michigan Department of Transportation, a problem with the bridge, which typically opens on the half hour and hour to allow larger vessels to pass between Round Lake and the Pine River Channel, was discovered at around 9 a.m.

Irvin said the root cause of the problem was a tripped relay. He said a power surge may have resulted in the trip.

The relay was repaired by 1:30 p.m.

He said no major problems resulted from the incident but it did delay ferry service to and from Beaver Island.

Pier jumpers to face fines for marine law violation

By JULIE WITTHOEF
Editor

Charlevoix residents and out-of-towners taking the plunge into the Pine River Channel from the South Pier will soon face fines.

Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson has been working with Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema to apply a law that will give local enforcement agencies the jurisdiction to ticket pier jumpers.

Halverson explained that a section of the State of Michigan Marine Act limits swimming within 100 feet of the perimeter of a designated swimming area.

"The pier would fall within that boundary," he said.

Both he and Jarema determined that because the pier is within 100 feet of Lake Michigan Beach, a popular public swimming area, the law could be applied.

Now, Halverson is working with marine patrol from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office to enforce the law.

This week the two agencies plan to get the word out that pier jumping is no longer permitted. But in another week jumpers will face citations.

Halverson said jumpers under the age of 16 will land in Charlevoix County Probate Court where they could be fined $95 for breaking the marine law and may be required to write an essay on the dangers of swimming in the Pine River Channel.

Jumpers over the age of 16 will face the music in Charlevoix County District Court where Halverson anticipates a similar $95 fine being handed down.

In the past, this type of activity has been overlooked for the most part because the South Pier is owned and maintained by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Tom O'Bryan, civil engineer with U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Grand Haven office, said, the Corps will not be involved in the enforcement effort because they don't have the authority or manpower to tackle a project like this. But he added that the Corps backs the city's effort.

"There are an awful lot of drownings adjacent to our structures. Rip currents are part of that," he said. "If you stop people from this type of activity, hopefully you will save someone's life."

O'Bryan explained that the Pine River Channel possesses a continuous current that is constantly fluctuating in severity.

The new development in the crack-down on pier jumping addresses concerns brought up by area parents; city officials and members of Charlevoix City Council who have said the channel waters pose a serious threat to swimmers, citing unpredictable rip currents, dangerous encounters with boat traffic and rocks beneath the surface.

Zonta Club's literary event to fund fall youth program

Members of the local Zonta Club recently announced the success of the first annual Literary Delights fund-raiser.

A trio of authors graced the club members and event attendees with their humor and writing expertise at the July gathering at Castle Farms. They included Priscilla Cogan, Kathy-Jo Wargin and Sheila Quinn Simpson.

Literary Delights helped the Zonta Club reach its goal to fund a new youth program this fall. As a result of the successful event, the club will bring Laurie Stewart, a nationally known facilitator, to speak with area sixth through eighth grade girls.

This program, whose purpose is to enhance self-image and encourage sound decision-making, will take place 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Nov. 12. Students in this age group, from all area schools, are welcome at no charge. The day will be filled with upbeat and informative presentations using simulation, discussion, role-play, music, drama and interaction.

New exhibit opened at Charlevoix's Depot Museum

Three thousand years before the founding of the City of Charlevoix, the banks of the Pine River provided the site of an earlier village. This village was occupied by Native Americans. The settlement was investigated by archeologists from Michigan State University in 1971 and 1972. The work on this site had to be investigated before it was destroyed by the construction of the LaCroft condominiums. Thousands of artifacts were recovered. Careful analysis showed that the Pine River Channel site was occupied at about 1500 B.C., again at A.D. 600, and several times after A.D. 1000.

The exhibit opened on July 5, 2005, and will remain open only on Fridays and Saturdays 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. until September 1, 2005. "Ancient Charlevoix: Life Before the Written Word" has artifacts on loan courtesy of Michigan State University Museum, East Lansing, Michigan.

The Charlevoix Historical Society wishes to thank these exhibit sponsors: Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians, Charlevoix County Community Foundation (Tunison - Garlock Memorial Fund), Michigan Council of Arts and Cultural Affairs - through the Cheboygan Area Arts Council, and Street Legends Car Club of Charlevoix.

While visiting the Depot, also enjoy many antique flower beds. The Heritage Garden was created and is maintained by members of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club. Enjoy the abundance of the garden and savor views of Lake Charlevoix in an historical setting.

Planned Parenthood offers back-to-school kit

The first year of college is an exciting time for young men and women. But for too many freshmen, it will also be the first time they are in situations where they feel they are not in control: alcohol abuse, drug use, and date rape are, unfortunately, too common at many colleges and universities.

Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan is offering "Off to School-Play it Safe" packets for college-bound young adults to help prepare new students for some of the situations they may face.

"Dormitory living affords new students both opportunity and challenges. Unfortunately, some of the challenges can compromise a young person's health and well-being. It is our hope that parents will discuss potentially harmful situations with their college-bound student; the kits are a resource to help start those conversations."

said Lori O'Neill, Director of Education. "Even if students who pick up the packets are not faced with every situation covered, they will be knowledgeable about what's out there, and prepared to take care of themselves or offer assistance to a friend or roommate."

The "Play It Safe" packets contain a variety of written materials covering topics like "Watch Out For Date Rape Drugs,"

"Abstinence and Self-esteem," "Sex, Alcohol and Your Right to Say No" and "Contraceptive Choices."

The College Kits are free to any interested college-bound students or parents and are available at the Planned Parenthood office located at 1003 Spring St. in Petoskey.

For more information, please contact Planned Parenthood at (231) 347-9692.

SEE-North plans underwater discovery field trip for Sept. 4

On Sunday, Sept. 4, SEE-North and Michigan Technological University researcher Mark Gleason will offer lake residents and the public the chance for a unique exploration beneath the surface of Lake Charlevoix using an underwater Remotely Operated Vehicle.

Gleason will deploy his underwater vehicle in hopes of getting a close-up, revealing look at the plants, algae, invertebrates, sediments, underwater land forms and objects, human artifacts, and fish that inhabit the depths of Michigan's third largest inland lake. If weather permits, the vehicle should be able to travel to depths exceeding 100 feet.

The vehicle consists of a waterproof video camera that is self-propelled and remotely operated via a long cable. It has two cameras that project a live view of the subsurface onto a video screen, lights, and a grapple for retrieving small objects. It is similar to, but smaller than, the remote operated vehicles used to explore shipwrecks.

Five 1.5 hour pontoon boat excursions are scheduled, with departure times at 9 and 11 a.m. as well as at 1, 3, and 5 p.m.

This event will be held both at the Lake Street Public Access Site in Horton Bay and at the Michigan Department of Natural Resources public access site in Boyne City.

This Remotely Operated Vehicle will explore beneath the surface of Lake Charlevoix.

Participants will observe some of these underwater features, learn more about the Lake Charlevoix ecosystem, and, of course, enjoy the scenic surroundings of the lake.

The event is suitable for both adults and children. There is a limit of 10 people per trip. Trips are free, but a donation of $20 per person is suggested to help support the programs of SEE-North. To make reservations or for more information, call (231) 348-9700.

Charlevoix Area Hospital helipad usage

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Long gone are the days when medical evacuation helicopters landed in the parking lot at Charlevoix Area Hospital, sending nearly 120 employees in a unified scurry to move their vehicles before a chopper's descent.

In September, the hospital's adjoining helipad will turn three years old. Along with its age, public curiosity about the structure's usage seems to be mounting: When do air ambulances typically use the Charlevoix Area Hospital's helipad? Which emergency medical responders frequently land at the site? And why are persons injured on Beaver Island typically flown to Charlevoix Municipal Airport and transferred to the hospital via ambulance when a helipad exists?

According to Chris Wilhelm, an administrative official at the hospital, the helipad is used about one to three times a month. "More (patients) go out than come in," she said, explaining that critically injured patients are often transferred to the University of Michigan medical center in Ann Arbor or Munson Medical Center in Traverse City.

Wilhelm added that the hospital doesn't own a personal "medevac," the term used to describe a medical evacuation by helicopter.

The three most prevalent air ambulances circling northwestern Michigan's skies are North Flight, a licensed emergency care service based in Traverse City; the University of Michigan's Survival Flight aircraft; and the U.S. Coast Guard, whose local air station is based in Traverse City.

Emergency Room Manager Josie Young said instances that usually require an emergency helicopter transfer from Charlevoix

Helipad bypassed by some for use of airport

Area Hospital include head injuries, severe trauma and burns. A physician, however, will ultimately determine a patient's mode of transport and services during flight, she added.

Young explained that medevacs typically seat four people — a pilot, two caregivers and an outstretched patient — but cannot fly over water. This limitation is one reason why few aircraft are able to land on the hospital's helipad. The other is the structure's enclosure, which some pilots consider to be too tight or small for their aircraft.

Although single-engine medevacs are smaller and easier to maneuver when landing on the helipad, they aren't powerful enough to safely glide over Lake Michigan. Meanwhile, multi-engine choppers and small planes provide a sturdier ride for patients and crew, but their pilots are hesitant to land at the hospital's helipad because of the large size of their aircraft and nearby obstacles — natural and manmade.

North Flight, the area's most commonly used medevac, uses a 10-seater, multi-engine Mitsubishi MU-2B-35 aircraft. This year, they transported 24 percent of injured patients on Beaver Island to the mainland, said Joe Moore, an 18-year volunteer paramedic with the island's emergency services team.

Because North Flight primarily operates a small emergency rescue plane instead of a helicopter, they have no choice but to land at Charlevoix Municipal Airport and transport patients to the hospital via ground ambulance.

"We can't use a chopper (over Lake Michigan) unless it is a twin-engine aircraft," said Moore. "One-engine helicopters are prohibited from flying over water. Federal law says aircraft have to coast all the way to the mainland."

In order to "coast" from Beaver Island to Charlevoix — a flight of about 10 to 20 minutes in length — an aircraft must ascend to an elevation of nearly 20,000 feet before heading toward land to avoid engine failure, said Moore. He said for a single-engine helicopter, flying this high is not only extremely dangerous, it's nearly impossible.

For a multi-engine helicopter, such as those operated by the U.S. Coast Guard, crossing Lake Michigan's waters is routine — it's landing on the hospital's confined helipad that presents difficulty. So far this year, the Coast Guard has been responsible for 18 percent of emergency airlifts off the island.

Bob Roloff, EMS coordinator for the City of Charlevoix Fire Department, offered a basic reason why air ambulance pilots bypass the hospital's helipad in favor of the airport: They simply aren't comfortable landing in such an obstructed area, preferring open space.

Steve West, director of the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce, agrees with Roloff, noting that many hospital helipads don't have suitable landing zones. He added that there are no licensed medevac helicopters operating on Beaver Island at this time.

Last December's tsunami, which devastated Indonesia, has spawned international goodwill that recently touched the lives of two Charlevoix students who will travel to the Indonesian Embassy in Washington, D.C.

Lexie Barnes

When nine-year-old Lexie Barnes decided to make bracelets as a fundraiser to help the victims of the tsunami she had no idea it would lead to a Aug. 23 visit to the Indonesian Embassy.

"I feel good about it — it's a once in a lifetime thing to do," she said.

Barnes said she plans to sit next to Maggie Hamilton on the flight to our country's capital so they can discuss the exciting event.

Ambassador of the Republic of Indonesia, Soemadi D.M. Brotdiningrat, will be at the reception. There is also supposed to be a connection made via satellite allowing correspondence between Hamilton and Nada, a little girl from Indonesia that Hamilton wrote to.

Maggie Hamilton

"I'll probably say we're really sorry for what happened to (Nada's) her family and talk to her about all the things that I've been doing," Hamilton said.

Hamilton said she ran a lemonade stand this summer and used the proceeds to purchase school supplies which she plans to send to Nada's school in Indonesia.

According to Hamilton, she can't wait to go to the reception.

"I'm happy that I got invited to go and I'm happy that Lexie got invited because she was the one that started making the bracelets," she said. "I'm very excited because it will be fun to see the ambassador again and it will be fun to see all the people there."

Representing the City of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education will be Charlevoix

Halverson said he enjoyed Ambassador Brotdiningrat's company when he visited Charlevoix earlier this summer.

"It might be my only opportunity ever to attend something at somebody's embassy," he said. "I'm pretty honored to represent the city and the school district at a function like this and hope to establish a goodwill relationship with a country that obviously took time out for us."

The reception, which will take place on Aug. 23, is intended to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Republic of Indonesia's declaration of independence as well as to say good-bye to Ambassador Brotdiningrat and his wife who will be leaving the embassy.

Concerts to take place in East Park Aug. 18 and 25

Charlevoix Concerts in the Park series brings two exciting performances to East Park.

At 8 p.m. Aug. 18 the Petoskey based band the Mudbugs will perform.

Mudbugs will play a mix of traditional Cajun and Creole music from southwest Louisiana.

Then, at 8 p.m. Aug. 25 Charlevoix will host the University of Michigan band. This program, by Professor of Piano, Dr. Louis Nagel, is a recreation of the pieces presented when Sigismund Thalberg and Franz Liszt had their famous 1837 competition in the salon of Precensis Belgioso.

Local scouts return from national jamboree

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Determined to overcome the tragedies at the recent 2005 National Scout Jamboree, over 50,000 scouts, leaders and volunteers pushed on.

G. Paul Stolt, 12, was one of three scouts from Charlevoix who attended the quadrennial event in Caroline County, Va. which took place from July 25 to Aug. 3.

G. Paul Stolt

"I went with 40 scouts (including adults) from the Scenic Trails Troop 1123. There were scouts from Traverse City, Brutus, Williamsburg, Interlochen, Cheboygan, Charlevoix, Beulah, Cadillac, Levering, Grawn, Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Maple City, Lincoln City, Empire, Lake Ann and Manistee."

According to Stolt, he is proud to be a part of the troop because they performed and behaved as a scout should.

"And, because of this, our troop received one of only two awards of excellence that were handed out (at the jamboree)," he said.

The three scouts representing Charlevoix Troop 11 were Stolt, and Rob and Brian Shutler. A total of 31,788 scouts, 7,743 staff and 3,532 scout leaders attended the gathering.

The Scouts headed out around midnight on July 21, from the Boy Scout Camp, Camp Grelliek in Traverse City.

On the way to the jamboree the scouts visited a few places like Gettysburg, Pa. and Washington D.C.

In Washington the scouts visited some monuments.

"There was a special military service happening at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier," he said. "We enjoyed watching the soldiers march and do their thing."

When the scouts arrived at the jamboree they participated in many events including foot races and rock climbing.

"We tried new things, learned new skills and made new friends," Stolt said. "Some of the activities were rappelling, scuba diving — my favorite — motocross biking, adventure in a coal mine, boating, mountain boarding, Geocaching, fishing and much more."

He added, "They bring in the best of the best to share their skills and knowledge with us."

Stolt said he participated in almost every event.

"It was so much fun that I didn't want to miss out on any of it," he said. "I was able to meet and speak with Senator Jason Allen. We talked like he was a friend that I already knew."

Stolt added, "He was interested in how I was enjoying scouting and encouraged me to continue."

In addition to meeting some state representatives while at the jamboree, Stolt was able to get a glimpse of President George W. Bush from his scoutmaster, Chris Stein's, shoulders. "I did get to see him (President Bush) at the closing ceremonies on Sunday," Stolt said. "I didn't get to personally meet him as there were over 70,000 people there."

The jamboree this year was the first Stolt attended and he hopes to make the next one in 2010.

"(It) will be the 100th anniversary of scouting. I will be 17 and still able to attend. I am already planning on going," he said.

Stolt began his scouting adventure as a tiger cub approximately five years ago when his mom got him involved. "It keeps me out and active in the community. We are constantly learning new skills and having fun while doing it," he said.

Stolt's rank in the scouts is Star, which is two ranks below an Eagle Scout.

"I am actively working toward my Life rank right now and will have it in a few months and then I will work toward my Eagle Rank," he said. "I would like to earn Eagle at a young age and then be able to continue in scouts in a leadership role and help younger scouts."

Renowned sleep expert advises readers

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix summer resident Dr. James B. Maas, an author, world renowned lecturer and sleep expert, said a good night's sleep is imperative to your health.

"They better hurry up and do what they need to do now or they are going to die early. Live longer and be more alert or go through life half drugged," Maas said.

Maas, who has been studying sleep for around 35 years and teaches the world's largest lecture class, knows the importance of sleep.

"I've written a New York Times bestseller on sleep called 'Power Sleep' and I make a lot of national television specials on sleep," he said.

Maas said he is constantly speaking about sleep deprivation on national television programs including spots on 20/20, Good Morning America, Oprah and the 700 Club.

"The purpose of my being on television is telling the nearly 70 percent of Americans who are not getting enough sleep that it can affect their performance cause heart attacks, obesity and even impact their golf game," he said.

Maas' book, 'Power Sleep,' covers the sleep deprivation crisis in America.

"Sleep is the key to our waking success. It determines our mood, our energy level, our alertness, our thinking, our reaction time, our creativity, our health and general well-being," Maas said.

He added, "I always like to say, you can be the person that your mother hopes she gave birth to."

According to Maas, most adults need between seven-and-a-half to eight hours of sleep a night on a regular basis.

One way to help ensure good sleep is to go to bed at the same time every night and awaken the same time every morning and sleep in a cool, dark, quiet bedroom.

"Avoid caffeine after two, avoid alcohol within three hours of bedtime, get plenty of exercise," he said. "Lastly, you have to make up for lost sleep."

Some warning signs of sleep deprivation are drowsiness during the day, sleeping in on the weekend and trouble focusing or remembering.

According to Maas, lack of quality sleep is one of the major causes of obesity, heart attack, stroke and type two diabetes.

"Many physicians don't know much about sleep. It's rarely taught in medical schools or if it is, they spend only a day on it," he said. "It may be one of the greatest predictors of life span."

He added, "The quality and quantity of your sleep is a better predictor than nutrition and exercise, which are both key. But, without quality sleep, you're probably not going to have as long a life as you could have."

Maas said people who think they only need a couple hours of sleep at night are fooling themselves.

"Anybody who brags they only need three or four hours of sleep are kidding themselves because they are so tired they don't know what it's like to be awake," he said.

Maas said many readers of his book are able to change their lives for the better.

"People say, 'I never knew what it was like to be awake before,'" he said.

One of the keys to getting better sleep is to make sure you do not have one of 88 sleeping disorders, one of which is insomnia.

"If you have a sleep problem that persists for more than three weeks you should go to an accredited sleep disorder center," he said. "We should learn that sleep is a necessity, not a luxury."

According to Maas, the best time to adjust your sleeping habits and sleeping schedule is right now when many people have vacation time.

"People say, 'Gee, I'd love to feel during the year like I feel when I'm on vacation in Charlevoix.' I say, 'You can — if you get enough sleep.'"

Insurance issue solved, skatepark to open doors

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

An insurance snafu that delayed opening of the new Charlevoix Community Skatepark has been ironed out and a grand opening will take place soon.

The initial park opening date was July 1 but, according to Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner, representatives from the city's insurance company, Michigan Municipal League Insurance, put the breaks on.

The park property located off West Carpenter Avenue is owned by the city and once fund-raising is complete, the entire project will be handed over to the city with ownership and operations falling under its jurisdiction.

However, in order to raise over $100,000 to make the project a reality, a group of seven determined parents filed 501C-3 non-profit entity paperwork under the name Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc.

Wiesner said city insurance cannot cover private or non-profit organizations.

That meant the core of the volunteer staff, the members of Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc., had a few options — not to work at the site, to get their own insurance or to disband.

So, the park group set out to insure its membership separately until fund-raising is complete.

Insurance for the group was secured July 11.

According to Vickie Daman, chair person for Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc., the park group's insurance requires participants to sign a waiver. City attorney Jim Young reviewed and revised this waiver, and felt it would be better if everyone signed the waiver.

"Less chance for error," Daman said.

With the insurance quandary solved, the park is set to open soon. As of press time a date had not been set.

Thus far, the group has raised over $92,000 to get the park up and running. While finalizing the project requires an additional $36,000, the group has enough equipment to open. Equipment currently available includes a half pipe, grind rails and ramps.

User fees are $2 for park entry and $1 for a helmet. Helmets are required. Concessions will be available.

Volunteers to staff the park are still needed. Call Laura Stebe at (231) 675-4505 to sign up.

Kevin Kusina joins the Eagle Scout ranks

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

New mile markers along the Little Traverse Wheelway, the non-motorized trail between Charlevoix and Petoskey, were installed this summer thanks to the volunteer efforts of a local teenager.

Since the second grade, Charlevoix resident Kevin Kusina, 18, has worked his way through the scouting ranks. He started as a Cub Scout moved up to Boy Scout and finally this July to Eagle Scout.

His final task on his way to attaining the rank of Eagle Scout — erecting signs on nearly 13 miles of trail.

"Being an avid cyclist putting signs along the trail was something I felt was needed," he said.

After meeting with county officials from both Charlevoix and Emmet counties, as well as with representatives of the Top of Michigan Trails Council and the Michigan Department of Transportation Kusina was given the green light to proceed.

Kusina said he got plans from the county and then surveyed the area to see exactly where the signs would go.

"From there I had a work day where I got some volunteers together who helped dig the holes and Quikrete the posts in," he said. "After that I put the signs on the posts myself."

According to Kusina, there are over 30 signs in all.

He installed two signs every mile, one facing each direction, along the nearly 13 mile stretch.

"I was working on it through January 'til June at different paces though, I really had to kick up the pace at the end of the school year to get things done," he said.

To become an Eagle Scout scouts must complete all requirements before their eighteenth birthday.

Kusina went before the review board three weeks ago where it was determined he had completed the requirements to receive Eagle Scout ranking.

According to Kusina, once you turn 18 you can no longer be a scout, which works out nicely for him because he said he's ready for a break.

Kusina said in the future he may consider becoming a scout leader, but for now he's looking forward to his senior year at Charlevoix High School.

"I still think it's a great organization and our local troop, Troop 11 is fantastic," Kusina said. "We have good leaders and I'd love to help them out when I can."

Kusina will be a senior this year and plans on looking at colleges next week. He is interested in pursuing studies in film production and advertising.

Donations for the project came from several sources including Preston Feather whose owners donated posts and ACE Hardware whose staff made the signs.

For Kevin Kusina's (second from right) final project to become an Eagle Scout, he planned, found funding for and organized a group of people to assist in the construction of mile marker signs.

Business finance solutions group open office

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

An international business solutions network has established its headquarters in Charlevoix.
Devon Arlt, 35, visited Charlevoix last summer from her home in Parkland, Fla., an equestrian community outside of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. And shortly after returning to the sunshine state found her heart was left in this northern Michigan resort town.
"The people got to me — I missed it so much," she said.

Now, one year later, Arlt has established Charlevoix as her home and business base.
The entrepreneur, who in Florida owned and operated a commercial real estate business and luxury equestrian facility with her husband Bill who recently passed away, is heading up Global Business Funding, a consulting and investment group aimed at assisting small to medium sized business operations.

"We can provide financing and education to business owners," she explained. "We want to see employment."

Services she said Global Business Funding can provide businesses facing failure include financial solutions, like tax benefits and assistance from private investors or small business investment companies.

"These are people with money that want to see a return on their investment," Arlt said.

While Global Business Funding can help businesses who might be on their way out Arlt's company also welcomes start-ups with bad credit who need capital to get their operation off the ground or those that need advice.

"When the bank is saying 'no,' chances are we can say 'yes,'" she said.

Types of financing Global Business Funding facilitates include equipment leasing, loans, financing and factoring.

The office overlooking Round Lake is located at 206 Bridge Street in the heart of Charlevoix's business district.

Arlt said her decision to open this type of operation came from her first impression of Charlevoix.

"I was alarmed by the number of businesses that were closed or closing," she said.

She added that the area is full of promising businesses, owned by talented people but there is an element of financial savvy missing from the operation which she and her staff of 11 certified business finance consultants can provide.

"You concentrate on the product, let us tell you what to do," she said.

The Charlevoix location opened Aug. 8. Arlt plans to add locations in Texas, Florida and California in the near future. She also plans to add bookkeeping to the repertoire of services offered at the Charlevoix office.

Initial business consultations are offered free of charge. Office hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and by appointment.

For more information, call Arlt at (231) 547-0155 or visit www.globalbusinessfunds.com.

Four Winns dealer Burt Lake Marina earns Winn Award 2005

Courtesy photo

Burt Lake Marina owners, Lisa Renaud LaPrairie and Ty LaPrairie were presented the prestigious Winn Award at the Four Winns International Dealer Meeting which took place in late July.

At the culmination of the 30th anniversary Four Winns International Dealer Meeting which took place in late July, company officials honored Burt Lake Marina of Indian River with the prestigious Winn Award.

The coveted Winn Award, established by Four Winns' founding family in 1987, is presented each year to the Four Winns dealership that best represents the drive, spirit, energy and courage of the Winn family. The Winn Award recipient is selected by representatives throughout the company in recognition of outstanding contributions to the marine industry.

Burt Lake Marina owners, Lisa Renaud LaPrairie and Ty LaPrairie were presented the award during the company's banquet July 18 in Cadillac.

"As a relatively small dealership, this award comes as a surprise and a great honor to us at Burt Lake Marina," said Lisa LaPrairie on receiving the award. "It is our mission every day to provide the service excellence and quality our customers deserve. I'm proud to know that our standards measure up to this award."

Burt Lake Marina sells new and used Four Winns boats, and provides year-round storage and service.

Four Winns Regional Sales Manager, Skip Marsh, presented the award.

"In the 18-year history of the Winn Award, we have paid tribute to many outstanding dealerships," explains Marsh. "But this year's honoree is especially noteworthy. For 36 years, Burt Lake has quietly gone about the business of serving their customers, and they truly exemplify the spirit of the Winn award as well as any Dealer - large or small - I've ever seen," he said.

Two local lodging facilities are 'Checking-in to Michigan Apples'

Northern Michigan hotel guests are invited to "Check-in to Michigan Apples" this harvest season.

Nearly 200 Michigan lodging properties, including about 50 in northern Michigan, will urge their guests to "Check-in to Michigan Apples" this month, in a promotion organized by the Michigan Apple Committee.

The focus of the campaign is to increase visits to local farm markets and u-picks as well as to boost awareness of Michigan's largest agricultural commodity - apples.

Delivery to Northern Michigan lodging properties is scheduled for August 15-19. Locally, both the Sleep Inn and the Weathervane Terrace Inn & Suites are participating.

"This campaign will not only benefit Michigan apple growers and the apple committee, but the lodging properties and community tourism organizations such as chambers of commerce and visitor bureaus," said Denise Yockey, executive director of the Michigan Apple Committee.

Each of the participating lodging properties will receive a quarter peck basket filled with Michigan apples and a display rack full of Michigan farm market and u-pick directories.

Two residents facing rare syndrome unite

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Americans have a better chance of being struck by lightning than being born with a rare condition known as Moebius syndrome.

Since so few people suffer from the it, a local woman afflicted with the syndrome recently held a get-together for the often misunderstood sufferers of Moebius.

"There are only about 800 to 1,000 people in the United States who have this, that we know of, and a lot of people don't know what it is," said Leslie VandeCar, of Charlevoix.

Though she has dealt with the effects of her condition her entire life, she was not diagnosed until she was 17 years old. And, knowing how difficult it can be to live in society while suffering the affects of Moebius, she decided to host a long weekend retreat for a group of about a dozen people who have Moebius syndrome.

"A lot of the things it causes are social," she said. "Kids are really, cruel so getting through school, especially middle school and teenage years, can be tough."

Improper growth of certain cranial nerves, generally both the sixth and seventh, results in Moebius syndrome. Damage to the sixth cranial nerve will cause strabismus or crossed eyes while damage to the seventh is the cause of a complete lack of expression.

While one must have damage or abnormality to the sixth and seventh cranial nerve to have Moebius, it can affect other nerves in addition which may result in other symptoms such as hearing loss and increased chance of motor skill reduction.

Some of the signs and symptoms of Moebius are deformities in the arms and legs, shorter and more than five fingers on each hand. Children may also have difficulty sucking/nursing, moving eyes independently of their head, crossed eyes or strabismus, unable to move their tongue or smile or small eyes.

Moebius can also cause problems for children such as crawling and even walking at a later age than most, due to the lack of muscle development. Other side effects include problems with their lungs, hearing problems from fluid which collects in the ears, inability or limited use of their tongue and a general sensitivity to light and sound.

According to VandeCar, she is speaking out about Moebius because she feels more people need to be aware of it especially for the sake of young children.

"Normally when we have something like this we don't want to draw attention to it," she said.

VandeCar said people will often mistake her and other Moebius sufferers for mentally retarded when they are in public because of their inability to make facial expressions.

The main reason VandeCar is being so vocal now is that she wants people to be aware of Moebius in hopes that five-year-old Charlevoix resident Aubree Dionne, who also has Moebius, might not suffer such severe social effects as she did.

"We're kind of misunderstood when we can't smile at somebody," she said. "Think about going through one day without smiling, especially little kids like Aubree, you can't tell when she is sad, upset, happy because she's not old enough to articulate yet."

Another reason VandeCar wants to educate people is that many parents and even doctors can't tell a baby has Moebius until long after the child is born.

"Mom has the baby and starts to feed and the baby can't suck or nurse right and the doctors often send them home with this problem," she said. "Then three weeks later the baby is back in the hospital and the baby is malnourished."

According to VandeCar, some doctors see cases of Moebius as having genetic causes while other cases seem to come from out of nowhere.

Leslie VandeCar and Aubree Dionne, both of Charlevoix, are two of less than 1,000 people in America afflicted with the extremely rare Moebius syndrome.

While a lack of blood flow to the fetus, use of drugs and alcohol as well as a trauma to the woman during pregnancy seem to put people at increased risk, the exact cause of Moebius is still unknown.

What doctors do know is that Moebius is caused primarily by damage to the central nervous system by way of the cranial nerves and there seems to be a link between parents with Moebius having children with Moebius as the chances of a parent with Moebius giving birth to a child with the disorder can be as high as a 50 percent chance.

There is no cure for Moebius syndrome but there is treatment including feeding tubes for babies who cannot feed, smile surgery and some corrective surgeries to attempt to fix strabismus.

Rotary Club earns $750 with tall ship sailing

Three trips aboard the tall ship, "Windy II" which docked in Charlevoix's Round Lake harbor Aug. 8, earned the local Rotary Club $750.

The 150' traditional four masted Gaff topsail schooner has 7,380 square feet of sail. The ship was launched June 16, 2000 in Charleston, S.C., with a home port in Chicago, Ill.

The Windy II offered three opportunities for the public to get a rare opportunity to sail on this unique vessel including a sunset cruise, Aug. 8 which drew 90 passengers and two cruises Aug. 9 which drew a total of 85 people.

Tickets for a sail were $25 for adults and $20 for seniors and kids. Of that money, 20 percent benefited the Rotary Club of Charlevoix.

The boat, which was docked in Charlevoix for two days left for Mackinac Island.

Whooping cough reported in Emmet County

Eight cases of whooping cough, or pertussis, were recently confirmed in Emmet County according to the local health department.

Seven of the cases are related and linked epidemiologically and include adults and adolescents whose immunity waned, and children who were not immunized. The eighth case involves an infant.

"These cases of pertussis highlight the need to make sure children are fully immunized," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Meyerson said that anyone with pertussis should stay home and away from public activities — including school, childcare and work — to avoid exposing others until appropriately treated with antibiotics.

People with pertussis should be treated with certain antibiotics, both to help modify the course of the illness, if diagnosed early enough, and to limit the spread of the disease to others. In addition, a course of preventive antibiotic therapy is recommended for members of the household and other close contacts of a pertussis case.

Pertussis affects the air passages and lungs, making breathing difficult, and it can lead to coughing spasms. Infections tend to be more severe in infants and young children who are at increased risk of complications associated with pertussis, such as pneumonia and seizures. They tend to be less severe in adolescents and adults, often going undiagnosed in these groups. However, even in older people, pertussis can cause prolonged coughing and illness lasting several weeks. Pertussis can occasionally cause death.

The routine schedule for pertussis immunization calls for primary series of four doses, given at two, four, six, and 15-18 months of age. A booster dose is given at four to six years of age.

Early in the 20th century, pertussis was one of the most common childhood diseases and major cause of death of children. Since the widespread use of vaccines, the incidence of pertussis has decreased significantly.

The Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency is the local health department serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego Counties. For more information about pertussis or the DTaP vaccine, contact your physician or local health department, or visit www.nwhealth.org.

Stupak fights high gas prices

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Gas is starting to give many locals indigestion — and they're not alone.

"They've got us over a barrel — excuse the pun, but they do," United States Congressman, Bart Stupak said. "Those who have available mass transit are probably using it, but in the rural areas we don't have mass transit so it hurts us more than anyone else."

According to Stupak, at a time when America refines and uses more gas than ever before, gasoline prices are outrageous because oil costs over $66 a barrel, up over $30 from last year.

"(The White House) can release oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) or stop filling the SPR," he said. "We're urging people to call the White House and tell them to stop filling or release oil from the SPR."

The reserve is made up of a supply of crude oil which is controlled by the United States government to be used in time of catastrophe, war or other negative event. Oil from the reserve is stored in several areas along the Gulf Coast. It was designed to hold approximately 750 million barrels of oil and is thought to be the largest emergency reserve of crude oil in the world.

Currently the Strategic Petroleum Reserve has nearly 700 million barrels of oil or is at 98 percent capacity.

Three to face multiple charges in cocaine bust

By JULIE WITTHOEF

Charlevoix Middle School.

Inside the house, detectives seized 25 pea-sized rocks of crack cocaine, worth between $10 and $20 each. They also seized a handgun, cash and a vehicle.

Three Charlevoix residents face hundreds of years in prison and hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines if convicted for their alleged role in a local crack cocaine distribution ring anchored near Charlevoix Middle School.

"This is a pretty good sized bust for Charlevoix and for being in a school zone — that's pretty shocking," Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema, said. "I think this is scary, I think it's a wake-up call for people who don't believe drugs are present in Charlevoix, they are everywhere."

As the result of a continuing investigation into cocaine sales in the area by Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (SANE) two Charlevoix residents, Anthony Curtis Burks, 22, and Chesica Dawn Brown, 24, were arrested during the afternoon of Aug. 5.

Using a warrant, the enforcement group, along with patrolmen with the City of Charlevoix Police Department, executed a search of their residence, a duplex off Kipke Lane, near the Burks and Brown were arraigned Aug. 10 in Charlevoix County District Court at which time a combined 11 counts of felony charges were handed down. At that time Judge Richard May opted to hold them both on a $100,000 bond at the Charlevoix County Jail.

The two were scheduled to appear for a preliminary hearing at 2:45 p.m. Aug. 23 in district court. At this time it was decided whether the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office had enough probable cause to bind the two over to Charlevoix County Circuit Court to face the charges. Results from this hearing were not available by press time.

Burks faces seven total counts. The first three counts are for delivery of less than 50 grams of the controlled substance cocaine within a school zone. Each of these counts carry a possible sentence of two to 60 years in prison and $75,000 in fines.

Reward offered for break-in information

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

RxPatrol Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the person responsible for a break-in at Central Drug Store last month.

According to City of Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson his department has "a lot of feelers" in the community and has received a few calls but no strong leads as to who is responsible for the July 23 crime.

"Statistically it (the perpetrator) is going to be someone local," he said.

On Saturday, July 23 while Halverson prepared for thousands to line Bridge Street for the Venetian Festival street parade, he was called to Central Drugs at 301 Bridge Street where a break-in had happened Friday night.

He said the perpetrators broke in through an access panel on the roof of the building and stole $15,000 worth of prescription drugs focusing primarily on the pharmacy's supply of the pain killer OxyContin and Viagra.

Halverson said the street value of the narcotics taken is between $60,000 and $70,000.

Halverson's department has been working with Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (S.A.N.E.) to try and track activity that could be related. But so far nothing has raised a red

Dennis Halverson

Halverson is hopeful that the flag.

"We have not noticed spikes in oxy (OxyContin) transactions. However, it is in the community and it is being abused," he said.

While

reward, donated by OxyContin distributor Purdue Pharma, will bring the criminals to justice, he isn't holding his breath.

"In my experience rewards do not tend to be that effective," he said.

This investigation is on-going and anyone with information is asked to call the city police department at (231) 547-3258 or RxPatrol Crime Stoppers at (888) 479-8477. Information will be kept confidential.

SANE bust three, charged with 13 counts for cocaine COCAINE

Burks' fourth count is conspiracy to deliver cocaine within a school zone. This count also carries a possible sentence of two to 60 years in prison and $75,000 in fines. Brown also faces this charge.

The fifth count he is facing is for possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver in a school zone. If convicted this could bring him two to 40 years in prison as well as a $75,000 fine. Brown also faces this charge.

The sixth count Burks is confronting is for maintaining a drug house. If convicted this carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison or a $25,000 fine. Brown also faces this charge.

The last count he is facing is for felony firearm possession. If convicted, this could tack on an additional two years to his time in prison after he has served out the other sentences. Brown also faces this charge.

SANE made a second crack cocaine arrest in the city arresting 41-year-old Marvin Darnell Hailey. An undercover officer purchased $100 of crack cocaine from Hailey who went to the Kipke Lane duplex to pick up the product, leading officers to Burks and Brown.

Hailey, who lived at 1203 State Street, was arraigned Aug. 16 and plead not guilty. He is facing two counts of delivery of crack cocaine and another for maintaining a drug house.

The three alleged dealers will be prosecuted through Jarema's office. He said he will either handle the case himself or it will be prosecuted by his internal SANE prosecutor Maria Barton.

"We'll push for maximum penalties in these cases," Jarema said.

Caught in the fallout of a Mars myth

Benjamin Gohs

'Staff writer'

A press release was forwarded to me via e-mail last Tuesday. It stated Mars would be closer to Earth on Aug. 27 than ever in recorded history.

The prospect of interviewing an enthusiastic amateur astronomer from Charlevoix sounded, to me, like the makings of a good story. I ran the gist of the information by my editor. She green-lighted the article and I, being a grade-A procrastinator, put the release in my to-do box — OK, it's more of an unofficial "I'll get to it eventually" pile.

Wednesday I reread the Mars release. My palms grew a little sweaty at the prospect of a planetary collision. From the information I gleaned Mars would be within 34,649,589 miles of the Earth. Though 34 million miles isn't even close to what scientists call a "Cosmic near miss," my mind raced with thoughts of apocalypse.

Thursday, I moved the Mars release to the bottom of the to-do box in hopes it might disappear. The paper was still there when I checked on Friday. I decided I had put the story off long enough. To no avail I called a few sources in hopes of finding someone interested in sharing their excitement over this once in a lifetime occasion. Despite my efforts I made one unsuccessful call after another. Were there no interested stargazers in the county?

By Friday afternoon I had a migraine headache accompanied by more sweat and uncontrollable blinking in my right eye at the thought of cataclysm. Not only was there a chance two worlds were going to collide, but I seemed to be the only one in Charlevoix who cared. Just what I needed, the Cassandra Complex. Rod Serling's Twilight Zone monologue echoed in my head.

Saturday morning I was cranky thanks to a lack of sleep induced by nightmares of the red planet and my constant thoughts of impending doom. Oh yeah, and my right eye was still twitching.

To keep myself busy I decided to do some more research. Surprise, surprise, I found approximately 6,840,000 hits for "planet Mars" on Google. I learned Mars is the fourth planet from the sun and has an average temperature of about 218 Kelvin. Great, I now knew almost as much about the cosmos as my 10-year-old daughter.

Sweating and twitching aside, things were moving smoothly — I was learning all I ever wanted to know about Mars and my hyperventilating had slowed to terrified gasps. It was then I found the informational site www.About.com. On it I saw a warning written by astronomy enthusiast Nick Greene which read, "It is possible you've received an e-mail which says that Mars will be closest to Earth in August in 50,000 years. Sorry, that was 2 years ago, you're reading a recycled e-mail."

Recycled what now? I was sick — not so much from my self-induced, horrified, overreaction as from the prospect of nearly sending a hoax out as news.

I didn't know what to do. I knew full well I couldn't call in "dead" on Monday morning — last time they recognized my voice. This coward was going to live, but he was also going to be without the top story for his Monday deadline.

Visions of an irate editor put the irrational thoughts of a cosmic collision to rest and I decided to verify this new information. I called a longtime amateur astronomer located in Marquette who wishes only to be identified as "Olga's husband." I know, being located in the Upper Peninsula didn't make him local. But I was desperate and I figured if anyone could help me at that moment, it was a 60-year-old-Yooper with a telescope.

I asked him about the Mars' situation. His guffaws reminded me of when I was eight and I showed my parents the new haircut I had given myself with a pair of Snoopy brand safety scissors.

Once he regained his composure, laughing-boy told me the whole Mars thing was a hoax. What he really said was, "Sounds like youse got hosed, eh. Dat red planit ain't gonna be too close to da Ert for annuder tree hundrit yers."

I felt a sudden flood of remorse for all those Dan Rather jokes I'd made — perhaps this was my National Guard story. And just my luck, "Gohs-Gate" doesn't roll off the tongue as easily as "Rather-Gate."

On a positive note, Olga's husband did say Mars would make a pass close to Earth in October, but not nearly as close as the one from a couple years ago.

The fact that other people fell for this hoax was little consolation. It scared me that something so simple as an official sounding e-mail could be mistaken as valid. Truth be told, I haven't been this nervous since I nearly missed out on buying all that prime swampland a few years ago. Boy I took that salesman for every acre he had. Some people are so gullible.

There are great lakes other than our own

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Surrounded as we are by what we call the Great Lakes, we might just overlook other magnificent bodies of water that are not so near. Lake Baikal in southeast Siberia comes to mind. How does it compare with our Great Lakes?

Let's look at age. How long have our Great Lakes been here? Depending on which one we are talking about they are from about 7,000 to about 32,000 years old. The Great Lakes as we know them did not exist until the most recent Ice Age ended and the Great Glacier that covered most of Michigan melted away. Lake Baikal has been a lake for much longer. It is 25 million years old; almost 800 times as old as the oldest Great Lake.

Size is important, and size can be measured in many ways. Our Great Lakes form the largest surface area of fresh water to be found anywhere in the world. But if we added up all the water found in all five Great Lakes, it would not quite equal the amount of water found in Lake Baikal. Let's hear that again. We could pull all the water from all five Great Lakes into Lake Baikal and have room left over.

At its deepest, 5,314 feet, Lake

Baikal is the deepest body of fresh water on earth. Lake Superior is deep by most standards, but Baikal is four times deeper.

What lives in all that fresh water in Lake Baikal? Most amazing, I suppose, is the presence of seals, thousands of miles from any ocean. They are different from other seals of the world and live nowhere else.

About three-fourths of the kinds of plants and animals found in Lake Baikal are found nowhere else on earth. The lake has been there long enough to have evolved hundreds of kinds of unique plants and animals.

Some of the watery residents would be familiar to us. Among the 50 or so different kinds of fish are Grayling, whitefish and sturgeon. Most of the rest of the fish we would not recognize. There are dozens of kinds of bullheads, for example, which are also unique to that lake.

In the 25 million years it has been a lake, Baikal, with more than 300 rivers running into it, has accumulated a lot of bottom sediment. Best guesses are that the sediment is about 20,000 feet thick. What that means is that the original bed of Lake Baikal is almost five miles below its water surface. Now, that's deep.

The local scenery includes nearby mountains that are 6,500 feet above the lake surface, as well as pulp mills and manufacturing facilities.

If this sounds like a place you would like to see, it's relatively easy to get there. The Trans-Siberian Railroad runs right by. Ask to get off at Slyudyanka which is just past Irkutsk. I'm sure it is possible to fly there, but the train ride might be even more fascinating.

I personally know about Lake Baikal only from reading, but a former student of mine on a solo around-the-world bike tour stopped for a swim there and reported that he nearly died from the respiratory infection he acquired after his dip in the lake. Water temperature peaks at about 55 degrees in August. I had encouraged him to visit Lake Baikal, and all in all he didn't regret it.

There are great lakes other than our own.

Letters to the editor

Skater safety

Editor:

We would like to clarify the actions/decisions of the skaters/longboarders/BMX riders involved in the Venetian street parade. Helmets were provided to the skaters by Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc. We made sure that all the skaters under 18 had a helmet on. We felt we had more control over the younger skaters requiring them to wear them. We did not have enough for all participants. We told the skaters over 18 it was their choice to "skate at their own risk." The skaters over 18 made their own decision.

We would like to extend an apology for sending the wrong message, to parents, supporters, and the Venetian Festival Board. All the skaters involved know that the park will require helmets, they know it will have posted rules and it will be supervised. At the temporary park we did not have any problems with the helmet requirement. The kids put them on no questions asked. Safety at the park is the primary objective. The second objective is adequate supervision, which the skaters requested. This shows they too value a safe environment to skate. We were happy that at least 15 skaters showed up to participate.

At the present time, due to insurance conflicts with the city provider, the park on Carpenter Avenue has not opened, which has been very frustrating for the local skaters. They have worked hard on this project and they have been waiting for almost a month. This means they currently don't have an outlet for their sport besides the street, parks and sidewalks, which we all know the police and local businesses would love to get them off of.

I want to also point out that there is a new skateboard in town, it is called a longboard and looks like a skateboard but is used on hills and gradual grades. It is longer, and has more of a surfing feel to it. It is not a board used in a skatepark. Some of the kids in the parade chose to longboard the south hill. It is the only day of the year they can ride on U.S. 31 without getting ticketed.

Anyone who knows skateboarders knows that this is not a sport that can be easily "organized." They tend to be free spirits, but they are also athletes. We have a very responsible group of riders. We try to advise them and mentor them, but if they choose to ignore it, that is their choice. They need an outlet soon; they are currently skating in areas that are not safe or supervised. We are working out the red tape to get it open. None of us involved ever dreamed it would be closed during the prime season. Mike Wiesner, the city manager, and his staff have been very supportive of this project, their guidance has been immeasurable but until it can open with everything in order, it will remain closed.

It will not open with questions and uncertainty; we owe that to everyone who has contributed and worked on this project. Please don't question the safety of this project or the members of this group. Safety and supervision are the driving forces behind this project. We are not volunteering and fund-raising to do this improperly. We made an error in judgment and it has been addressed. It has been a very frustrating summer to find that after all this work, the park opening is still at a standstill. We will be working with city council to get the insurance questions addressed as soon as possible. Please feel free to contact any of the board members or Mike Wiesner if you have any questions.

Donate to pantry

Editor:

As the end of summer nears, we are aware our seasonal visitors will soon be packing up and leaving for their winter homes.

As they prepare to clean out kitchen cupboards and pantries, we would encourage them to remember our local Charlevoix Community Food Pantry and donate items to it, rather than disposing of them.

The demand on the pantry has been greater than usual this year, so all contributions will be put to good use. They also can be used for tax exemptions.

We feel sure that our summer residents, who are generous in many ways, would be happy to help us out in this fashion.

We thank them in advance and wish them safe travels.

'Thank you' Navy crewmen

Editor:

I read your editorial about the U.S. Navy special forces (SWCC) with anger, disappointment and ultimately with sadness. I stopped to talk with those fine young men and had a brief and pleasant conversation with one of them. I did not ask about their mission here. I was informed of their equipment and knew then that these were exceptional people. I left with a feeling of awe and respect for our military and their mission to protect America, even Charlevoix if necessary.

My first reaction to your editorial was anger in reading a cynical outpouring by someone who felt they had every right to know what a specialized force is about. You are not a select sub-committee to whom they are responsible — try to believe that. Disappointment followed when I realized nothing they might have said would change your attitude towards them and finally sadness that there may be more like you ready to demean the people who are putting their lives at stake for me and my loved ones. Thank goodness they are there and maybe you are where you are at.

When I left the crewman all I could say was, "Thank you," and I knew that wasn't enough.

Delay bridge for parade

Editor:

I was in your beautiful town for Venetian week. It was great to be back, where as a young adult with three children I used to come and play, enjoy the boats, the park and of course the fudge. But times have changed and I've gotten a little older, a senior citizen to be frank, and I have a suggestion, to make the Saturday of the parade a little easier on the drivers going in and out of town and crossing that beautiful bridge.

Instead of every half hour raising it, when the line of traffic goes from the bridge to neverland, make it known to the wonderful boats that they can wait and that bridge be only raised every hour or even 2 hours. It wouldn't hurt the boats, they are at their leisure, and would help the traffic, alone the gas that would be saved waiting for the bridge.

Thank you for listening and putting it in letters to the editor from an out of townier that had a great time, enjoyed the entertainment, food, fireworks and all the activities.

New exhibit opened at Charlevoix's Depot Museum

Three thousand years before the founding of the City of Charlevoix, the banks of the Pine River provided the site of an earlier village. This village was occupied by Native Americans. The settlement was investigated by archeologists from Michigan State University in 1971 and 1972. The work on this site had to be investigated before it was destroyed by the construction of the LaCrosse condominiums. Thousands of artifacts were recovered. Careful analysis showed that the Pine River Channel site was occupied at about 1500 B.C., again at A.D. 600, and several times after A.D. 1000.

The exhibit opened on July 5, 2005, and will remain open only on Fridays and Saturdays 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. until September 1, 2005. "Ancient Charlevoix: Life Before the Written Word" has artifacts on loan courtesy of Michigan State University Museum, East Lansing, Michigan.

The Charlevoix Historical Society wishes to thank these exhibit sponsors: Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians, Charlevoix County Community Foundation (Tunison - Garlock Memorial Fund), Michigan Council of Arts and Cultural Affairs - through the Cheboygan Area Arts Council, and Street Legends Car Club of Charlevoix.

While visiting the Depot, also enjoy many antique flower beds. The Heritage Garden was created and is maintained by members of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club. Enjoy the abundance of the garden and savor views of Lake Charlevoix in an historical setting.

Two injured in accident at U.S. 31 and Boyne City Road

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigated a two-vehicle traffic crash that occurred at 1:40 p.m. Aug. 19, at the intersection of U.S. 31 and Boyne City-Charlevoix Road in Charlevoix Township.

Peggy Sue Farley, 22, of Boyne City was traveling westbound on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road driving a 1992 Oldsmobile 98 and stopped at the U.S. 31 intersection.

Farley then made a left turn onto U.S. 31 into the path of a northbound 2000 Chevrolet Impala driven by Carl A. McComb, 81, of Lapeer.

Investigation showed that there was another northbound vehicle in the right turn lane onto Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, which obstructed Farley's view of the approaching McComb vehicle.

Both drivers were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by City of Charlevoix ambulances.

Their vehicles suffered extensive damage and were totaled.

The Sheriff's office was assisted at the scene by the City of Charlevoix Rescue Unit, Charlevoix Township Fire Department, Charlevoix City Police Department and the Michigan State Police.

The crash remains under investigation by the Sheriff's Office.

Sheriff Lasater wants to remind motorists to use extra caution and to double check that there are not approaching vehicles which may be hidden by slower moving vehicles at this intersection.

This intersection is slated for improvements in the next several weeks.

New teachers join Charlevoix Public Schools

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix high, middle and elementary schools each have a new edition to their teaching staff.

Born and raised here, Sara Parrish graduated in 2000 from Charlevoix High School and went on to Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo for her teaching degree. She will be teaching special education half-time at the Charlevoix Elementary School and half time at the middle school. "I'm very excited about it because I'm really glad to be back in Charlevoix and to be part of such a great teaching staff," she said.

Parrish has had two long-term substitute teaching assignments in Charlevoix in both seventh grade science and general education at the fifth grade level.

She said she is looking forward to establishing, "Close relationships with the students and with the other teachers as well."

In addition to working in the schools this fall, she will be working toward her masters degree in special education.

Originally from Charlevoix, Steve Carland went on to Saginaw Valley State University in Saginaw where he received his teaching degree which he will now use at Charlevoix High School.

"This is my first year actually, so it's nice to teach back in my hometown," he said. "I've been subbing for the last two years. So I think it's finally my turn to step up."

Steve is the son of recently retired elementary school teacher Pat Carland.

"It's kind of funny she retires and I get a job — keeping the Carland name going I guess," Steve said. Steve substitute taught long-term previously in Boyne City.

"I just loved it over there, so I can't wait to teach here," he said. "I'm up for the challenge."

Steve said he enjoys working in special education because he loves to see the kids succeed.

"Seeing smiles on their faces when they accomplish something," he said, is the biggest reward of all. "It's challenging and in the same way it's fulfilling."

He has always wanted to teach in Charlevoix because this is his hometown.

"They've got a good group of people at the high school — actually at every school," he said. "I'm looking to get back to my roots and working with some of the teachers that taught me." Steve said he feels it is time for him to give back to the community.

"I'm just glad I got my chance to start my career back where I grew up. I can't wait to get in the classroom and do my thing," he said.

Jodi Thompson

Born in Milwaukee, Wis., Jodi Thompson has lived in many places, but she hopes to make Charlevoix her last stop.

Thompson received her teaching degree from Miami University at Oxford in Ohio and then Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant to update her certification in elementary music. "I'm going to be at the elementary school teaching kindergarten through fourth grade full-time," she said.

Thompson spent the last four years of her teaching career at St. Mary's where she taught music.

But, she said, "I've been teaching mostly part-time for about 11 years."

Thompson said she has one daughter still in the elementary school and another going into fifth grade, so she is familiar with the public schools.

"I've volunteered as a parent and I'm familiar with the staff," she said. "I love working with the elementary students because they are so excited about learning. It is my desire to share my passion for music with the students in Charlevoix Elementary School so that later on they will continue to enjoy music."

Thompson, who majored in music education, plays guitar and was a vocalist in college.

Township voters to decide fate of 'Big Box'

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The proposed "Big Box Ordinance" in Charlevoix Township passed all required boards for implementation, but has been stalled due to a petition request by some township residents.

Charlevoix Township resident Charles Scherping helped author a referendum which put the proposed 90,000 square foot cap on commercial buildings to a vote this November.

"I think it's against the constitution of the United States," Scherping said. "I think they're interfering with commerce."

He added, "What are you going to do, tell the next gas station not to come into town because you don't like their brand? Where do you stop with trying to control commerce?"

According to Scherping, he and

"Most people just don't like Charlevoix Township interfering with commerce."

Charles Scherping,
Charlevoix Township resident

the others who signed the petition turned it in early this month.

"Our main goal is to overturn the amendments to the zoning ordinance that the Charlevoix Township Board made so that it doesn't regulate whose business can come to town," he said.

According to Charlevoix Township Supervisor Dale Glass, until a decision is made on the ordinance, Charlevoix Township has passed a temporary resolution directing the planning commission not to accept site plans for any commercial building of 50,000 square feet or greater.

"It passed all the steps, but because of the request for a petition, it can't go into effect until it is voted on," Glass said.

If there are enough votes cast to overturn the township's zoning ordinance, that section of the ordinance will be thrown out, Scherping said.

He added, "My personal opinion is to overturn the zoning ordinance to allow commerce to come to Charlevoix. I'm not telling (Charlevoix residents) where to shop, but if they want more commerce to come to town they should vote."

A resident of this area since the 1960s, Scherping said, he has never witnessed the township attempt something so drastic.

"I don't think they've tried to control commerce and business like this before," he said. "It's protectionism in some ways. We'll pass an ordinance to help protect some businesses in town," but that's not the American way."

He added, "What's the government's business to say we're not going to allow that type of business? They don't have that type of expertise, they are local citizens. They're (Charlevoix Township board members) all nice people and good people but this is something that's way out of their league."

Scherping isn't about to predict how the vote will go this November, but he said, the over 200 people who signed the petition agree that it should be put up to a vote.

"That's probably one-third of the registered voters in the township," he said.

If there are enough votes against the "Big Box Ordinance" it will be overturned. However, Scherping said, the township board can always start proceedings over at another time to have the ordinance reinstated.

"Most people just don't like Charlevoix Township interfering with commerce," he said. "Whether they like Wal-Mart or not is not the issue."

City Fire Department responds to State Street

At about 9:46 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 18 the City of Charlevoix Fire Department was called to the Bartlett residence at 506 State Street because the garage was filling with smoke.

Everyone was out of the house when firefighters arrived.

Investigation discovered a dried plant in a plastic flowerpot in the garage, smoldering. A cigarette butt was found in the pot. No other property was damaged. Firefighters were on scene for about 30 minutes.

No injuries in rollover accident off Barnard Road

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigated a one vehicle crash that took place approximately 9:10 a.m. on Aug. 18 in Norwood Township.

Frederick W. Jolliffe, 71, of Banks Township was southbound on Barnard Road when he lost control of his 1995 Mercury Tracer at the crest of a hill. His vehicle ran off onto the opposite shoulder and struck the curb at the Warner Road intersection.

The vehicle became airborne, rolling down an embankment and striking several trees. A passing motorist discovered the crash about 30 minutes later.

Jolliffe told investigators that he did not remember what had caused the crash. He refused emergency medical services transport for his injuries.

The vehicle was totaled. Jolliffe was cited for negligent driving.

Residents return from Uganda mission trip

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

After spending 17 days in Uganda, local missionaries faced dilemmas heavier than their eyelids or luggage — reverse culture shock and recurrent feelings of helplessness.

A team of 17 had just returned from treating nearly 1,400 patients, 60 percent of which were children under the age of 13, for conditions ranging from worms to HIV/AIDS. Hosted by the Washington-based World Outreach Ministries Foundation (WOMF), members were housed, fed and transported to several remote villages, orphanages and even two minimum-security prisons in the central-east African nation.

An assortment of professionals made up the team, which included 14 members from the Charlevoix Community Reformed Church, one pastor, three retired physicians, one registered nurse, one research pharmacist and 11 support persons ranging from teachers and builders to housewives.

"In a medical team, if 25 percent of your people are medically-related, that's all you really need," said Don Trimper of Charlevoix, who led the team. A retired physician, Trimper has participated in more than 15 missions in Ukraine, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Romania and Kenya.

The group departed Detroit July 26 and returned August 13 — after a nearly 20-hour flight spent mostly on Ethiopian Airlines.

For six days, the team transformed churches into medical clinics for the natives.

Sometimes traveling three hours over rutted dirt roads to reach a village, members treated Ugandans for intestinal parasites, malaria, skin diseases, scabies, respiratory infections, muscular-skeletal problems and gastro-intestinal problems. The team also traveled with the foundation's mobile HIV diagnostic unit — in two days, 18 percent of patients seen tested positive for the virus.

"This is a big event for them. They live in dirt huts and when you have a medical clinic, people come dressed like they're going to a wedding," said Trimper, whose wife, Marcia, also traveled with the team. "It's an honor for us that they think so much of our effort. It's embarrassing to try to live up to what other people think Americans are."

Medication for the Ugandan people is commonly obtained from Christian clearing houses, which purchase nearly expired medicine from pharmaceutical warehouses fearing the drugs will only take up space. Trimper said the medicine recently prescribed to Ugandan patients will expire in about four months, but added that most medicine is good to ingest well beyond its expiration date.

Additional days were spent administering clinics at two minimum-security prisons, where about 40 percent of inmates were HIV positive, and visiting a World Outreach Ministries Foundation orphanage to distribute backpacks with school supplies and "Jesus Loves You" messages from children in Charlevoix.

In an e-mail written to friends and family, registered nurse Sue Bokyo wrote, "The prisoners get routine health care as part of this mission. The villagers, on the other hand, have never had a real medical clinic and most of them had never seen white people before. The children were either fascinated or appalled by our appearance."

Bokyo, who works at Northern Michigan Hospital, continued, "Five children under five years old were positive for HIV during testing today, most likely transmitted to them at birth. Sad, sad thing to tell a mother. The hardest part is leaving hundreds behind without being seen, but this is what local missionaries insist we do. They promise to send another team next month, which I hope will happen."

During the excursion, members were housed by Ron and Shirley DeVore, founders of the World Outreach Ministries Foundation, in two base sites. The team selected the agency as their host organization in Uganda simply by process of elimination. Beginning with a list of about 20 agencies, Trimper said the foundation held steady at the top of the bunch.

"In 18 years, I've never seen any organization do as much as they have been able to do in Uganda," he said. "You know they must be well-organized, they must have good leadership, they must have good relationships with local and national governments. All of that is very important."

Since 1987, the World Outreach Ministries Foundation has planted 35 churches in Uganda, initiated eight primary and secondary schools, created two Bible schools, ministered to several hundred prisoners, supported two medical clinics, founded an orphanage for children who have been abandoned because of AIDS which presently houses 110 children and supported 430 orphans with monthly food, clothing, school fees and medical care. Currently, the agency is building a hospital in southern Sudan, which is Uganda's northern neighbor.

Flanked by translators, most of which were university students affiliated with the church, the team made no mention of any threats to their personal safety while abroad. Uganda lies within a volatile and developing region of east Africa. It borders Kenya, Rwanda, Sudan, Ethiopia and the Democratic Republic of Congo.

The Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) has been active in northern Uganda — an area visited by the team — and in March 2004, two Americans were murdered there. In May 2004, the leader of the resistance army issued an order to target Americans, according to the U.S. Department of State Web site, www.travel.state.gov.

"We've never experienced any anti-Americanism anywhere we've gone," said Trimper, whose missionary work has primarily been with the Christian Medical Dental Association. "We've been put up on a pedestal that we don't deserve."

Along with the receptiveness of the culture, team members are humbled by the rigorous work ethic of the Ugandans and their simple pleasures.

"People live in mud or brick homes," Bokyo wrote in an e-mail. "Most laborers earn about $5 per day for a 16-hour day."

Another team member said it was grounding to watch the natives wake at 5 a.m. every day to lead a hicycle of bananas more than 10 miles into town.

"These people aren't lazy," Trimper said. "They make about 500 shillings a day, which is equivalent to $2.20, not for an eight-hour day, but for a 12-hour day."

At a recent re-entry meeting held at the Community Reformed Church, several team members recounted their experiences in Uganda. Although irritated to be waking at 4 a.m. each morning due to the time difference, the team begged a sobering question: How do we make lasting change in Uganda, a nation so devastated by disease, poverty and suffering?

"What we do medically is of no consequence," Trimper said to the group. "It's all going to come back. It's the fact that you cared enough to go."

A community gift

At the Charlevoix City Council meeting Aug. 15 David Miles (left), co-director of the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum, and Charlevoix resident John Gaskin (center) presented council with a framed portrait of the first Charlevoix mayor, Gaskin's grandfather, Harvey Lee Iddings. Iddings was in office from 1905 through 1907. This gift was given to commemorate the City of Charlevoix's 100th anniversary of incorporation which took place June 1. John's wife Pat Gaskin is pictured at right. Council is considering furthering this gift by searching out photos of other past mayors for display in council chambers. The Gaskins are in the process of building a home in Virginia where they plan to relocate. Framing for the Iddings gift was donated by Charlevoix Camera.

Sure, it might seem like a little thing. But this customer might not have even made it through the front door at most banks. Whenever you hear any Northwestern Bank employee say "I can do that!" you'll quickly realize they really mean it.

Kirk, a former ISD contract worker, arraigned

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Originally arrested by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office on multiple counts of felony weapons charges, 70-year-old Charlevoix Township resident Arthur Kirk has new charges leveled against him.

Arthur Kirk

Kirk was arraigned on the morning of Tuesday, Aug. 16 in Charlevoix County District Court on five counts. Three of those counts are for perjury not related to court stemming from false statements he made on a concealed weapon permit. A fourth count for notice of habitual offender related to three prior felony convictions. The final charge is for felony weapon possession.

In addition to the state charges, there may be a federal indictment on federal charges as well.

"Since he's a habitual offender, the felony possession by a felon of a weapon and three perjury counts are up to life in prison," said Charlevoix County Prosecutor, John Jarema.

Kirk, who retained Jennifer Deegan as his attorney, is still out on $10,000 cash or surety bond with the conditions he may not possess any weapons and he is not to have contact with anyone under 16.

Kirk's preliminary examination is set for 2:30 p.m. Sept. 13 in district court.

Kirk formerly provided contracted services to the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District as coordinator of the federally funded AmeriCorps Program, the Domestic Peace Corp.

Law enforcement were tipped off when Kirk applied for a concealed weapons permit in late May and the FBI and Michigan State Police background checks revealed he had applied using an alias. Under the name Arthur Heilberg Kirkeby they found several prior arrests and convictions including felonious assault and sex offenses ranging from 1964 to 1980 in Oakland and Macomb counties, and at least three prior sex offense convictions.

Kirk's last conviction, for which he was sentenced to 25 years in prison, was for the second offense of first degree criminal sexual conduct with an 8-year-old boy.

A lieutenant with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and a police officer with the City of Charlevoix

Police Department executed a search warrant at Kirk's condo in Charlevoix Township on July 30. During the search, three handguns were seized including two .357 caliber revolvers and one .40 caliber semi-automatic pistol.

According to Jarema, his office is set to move forward in September.

"We have everything we need for the charges that are filed right now," he said. "If anything new comes to light we will be seeking more charges, but we're ready to go right now."

Officials discuss holes in background check

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

State and local officials came together last week to discuss how team work packaged with improved technology and legislation can protect Michigan children.

"We raised each other's awareness of our resources and limitations — we all share a common goal and that is keeping the kids in this state as safe as they can be," City of Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson said.

Halverson steered the meeting that took place Aug. 19 at the Char-Em Intermediate School District office off Mercer Boulevard.

Also attending were Mark Eckhardt, superintendent of the intermediate school district, state representative Kevin Elsenheimer and Lieutenant Colonel Tom Miller with the Michigan State Police.

Discussion was primarily focused on the Internet Criminal History Access Tool (ICHAT). Miller revealed that the 20 year-old main-frame system will soon see major improvements as an $8 million grant has been awarded for updating it.

Miller said under the improved system a recent incident involving a Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District contract worker with an extensive criminal history would never have happened.

Arthur Kirk, 70, of Charlevoix Township, who was arrested in early August and charged with felon in possession of a firearm and falsifying a gun permit application, worked in the school system as coordinator of the volunteer group AmeriCorps.

His duties included writing, facilitating and maintaining AmeriCorps grant activities and records, coordinating and training AmeriCorps volunteers and acting as a liaison to the Michigan Department of Career Development.

Michigan State Police officials have said the criminal background checking system which screened him twice was working properly when it failed to locate an extensive criminal history for Kirk who was using an alias.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's office investigators said they discovered Kirk's criminal history, including several criminal sexual conduct convictions from 1978 and 1981, under the name Arthur Heilberg Kirkeby.

Fingerprints determined that Kirk is Kirkeby. Miller explained that currently, ICHAT is a computerized name-based search of the Michigan Criminal History Record, so those who provide a false name or an alias cannot be distinguished from persons who have no criminal history record.

ICHAT uses identifiers including name, race, sex and date of birth to match names to criminal histories. Additional identifiers such as driver's license and Social Security number can also be used to broaden the search, but are not used to match criminal histories without a match on the name.

Halverson said Kirk/Kirkeby isn't included on the state's Public Sex Offender Registry because his convictions came through prior to 1995, exempting him from registration.

"Kirk was the perfect storm, everything lined up perfectly for him to fall through the system's cracks," Halverson said.

However, at the meeting, Miller said Kirk was checked using the improved ICHAT system and his history was revealed. The new system, set to launch this fall, incorporates name variations.

"This is going to give me a lot more confidence in the system," Eckhardt said. "I'm responsible and when this happened (Kirk incident) I wasn't sure how I felt about the criminal records checking system."

The technology branch of this initiative spurred Halverson to request a joint effort between the Michigan State Police and the Michigan Department of Education to establish background check guidelines for schools. Miller headed back to Lansing with this project on his plate.

Eckhardt said in establishing guidelines, state agencies have to find a happy medium — to check every volunteer in the intermediate school district would be a logistical nightmare. With Michigan's "No Child Left Behind" legislation requiring parents to volunteer in the classroom, each parent would have to pay $70 for a complete screening.

"We have to strike a balance between the public good and personal rights," he said.

While the state may establish guidelines, districts can also set their own policy.

"There is one place where we can control policy and that is the Char-Em ISD and we are doing that," Eckhardt said.

He said intermediate school district policy requires checks on all AmeriCorps volunteers.

The third piece in the puzzle is legislation.

State Representative Kevin Elsenheimer is working with State Senator Jason Allen to support a package of bills called the Student Safety Initiative. The initiative would mandate complete criminal histories including fingerprints for all employees and volunteers who work with juveniles and would create safety zones near schools, wherein convicted sex offenders would be prohibited from working, living or loitering within 1,000 feet of school grounds.

Having digested the three directions this meeting went in — technological advancements, state and internal policy and legislation — Eckhardt said he is satisfied for now.

"I left the meeting knowing there is no system anyone can put in place that is 100 percent fool proof. But we are closing the loopholes and the state police are doing everything they can to enhance the system and I feel comfortable with that," Eckhardt said.

Ebert goes 'South of the Border' with Camp Quality

By JULIE WITTHOETT

Parker Ebert, an 8-year-old Charlevoix resident, spent last week hanging harnessed from ladders, flying high in a hot air balloon, netting frogs and munching camp food at Camp Daggett.

When asked what the stouthearted camper wouldn't do he said, "There is one thing I won't do, that would be quit."

Ebert, who spent the week at camp in conjunction with the Petoskey based Michigan chapter of Camp Quality USA, Inc. applies this persistent outlook to everything he does.

On March 10, he was diagnosed with Rhabdomyosarcoma, a soft tissue cancer that arises in the muscles and accounts for about 4 percent of all childhood cancer. It is believed to originate in the embryonic state of the development of children.

The outlook is that if treated with chemotherapy he should have a full recovery. Since beginning weekly chemo treatments at DeVos Children's Hospital in Grand Rapids he has established two complaints — hospital food and a touch of the boredom blues while admitted.

While Ebert faces a long road to recovery, he has found the light at the end of the tunnel.

"When I'm done with my cancer I can come back to camp and be a companion," he said.

Every Camp Quality camper is paired with a companion who is dedicated to his or her care. Last week, there were 57 campers from across the Midwest and Canada in town for the "South of the Border" themed outdoor fiesta.

This year Jim Morgan, a pastor from Community of Christ Church in Onaway was Ebert's companion.

"Parker has taught me a lot of things — to be patient," Morgan said.

Ebert tends to look on life's brighter side. He even found the sunny side to hair loss — a side effect of chemotherapy most people despise.

On the third day of camp, Aug. 16 counselors called for a lice check. In recounting the tale Ebert tipped off his orange baseball cap to reveal his small, smooth bald head and said, "But I didn't have to go, I can't get lice."

His bright attitude carried him through the week where he said every activity he did was his favorite.

With camp experiences lodged in his head and heart Ebert is now preparing to hit the books as a third grade student at Charlevoix Elementary School. He said his student experience is typical unless his white blood cell counts are low, in which case he has to stay home. He said chicken pox and other illnesses that float through schools can be fatal to someone with his condition.

Camp Quality is a summer camping experience and year-round support program for children with cancer. For more information, visit www.campqualityusa.org or call local camp director Eleanor West at (231) 582-2471.

If you would like to make a donation to help support Ebert send your donation in care of the Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighters Association, 210 State Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Northwest Academy tackles major repairs

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The local charter school, Charlevoix's Northwest Academy is undergoing $46,000 worth of intense renovations.

According to music director and academy co-director, Gary Stutzman, things are really starting to fall into place.

"Now the possibilities have become realities," he said. "When the building was initially designed for our school we made improvements as needed along the way, but this year we've made major renovations to the interior."

All rooms from floor to ceiling have been painted and a little over half of the flooring has been installed.

"It's a really important point, especially for parents of elementary students," Stutzman said. "They are concerned with the environmental safety of the building. They want to see that it's up-to-date, modern and clean."

In addition to the fresh new look, Stutzman said, people will see a slight increase in number of kids.

"There are new students enrolling every day," he said.

Stutzman cited word of mouth regarding the school's good work as one of the factors.

And, he added, "We've never gone out and promoted our school like we have this year."

Despite the new interest and awareness in the school, Stutzman vows to maintain a limit of 15 students per class.

7-Eleven beefs up underage tobacco deterrents

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Possibly the most recognized name in party stores, 7-Eleven Incorporated, will increase an already firm approach to dealing with underage tobacco sales.

Some of the new ways of dealing with this issue will be to place tobacco away from those products which may entice children and many of the stores are now using a new computer system.

"We have a new scanner that runs an ID through," said Charlevoix 7-Eleven owner, J.J. Tuncap. "We scan it and it automatically validates your drivers license."

And, he said, the new scanner is better than the old system because, "It also has 48 states that it covers, because we were having some problems with some out-of-state licenses."

According to Tuncap, the system prevents a clerk from selling alcohol or tobacco unless the license is validated.

"It won't let you complete any transaction without that," he said. "And I would say we are the best in town at checking IDs. It's a hold statement to make, but I feel confident that our girls are doing their jobs."

Tuncap said this isn't the end of underage kids getting a hold of the wrong things, but it's a good deterrent.

"It's just another safeguard," he said. "If someone underage is going to go through trying to buy beer or cigarettes it will help keep them from doing it."

7-Eleven Inc. hires an outside firm to perform sting operations on 7-Eleven stores to ensure clerks are doing their jobs correctly.

"If the clerk does (sell to minors) they are fired automatically," Tuncap said. "But when they do pass it, they reward them greatly."

Tuncap said, clerks who pass the sting receive $50 in cash and their name is entered into a drawing at the end of the year for a few thousand dollars as an incentive to eard everyone.

The safety checks have occurred for about five years now, Tuncap said.

"They shoot for a 93 percent compliance in the State of Michigan," he said. "Out of 100 usually a couple will fail."

He added, "Gas stations I think are only in the 80 percents."

Tuncap said checking identification for people buying cigarettes isn't the favorite part of everyone's day, but it is necessary.

"We know some people get pretty upset about it, but it's something we need to do so that underage people don't get it (tobacco) from us," he said.

Garh-Ko owns all the rights to all 7-Eleven stores in Michigan and they are the ones who monitor clerks to make sure they only make legal sales.

"I would say they probably try to sting us about once every other week," he said. "They know it goes on, they just don't want it coming out of a 7-Eleven."

Charlevoix High School golf lose season openers

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Aug. 15 the Charlevoix Rayders golf team opened the season with a Lake Michigan Conference match against all eight teams at Grayling Golf Club.

"We're off to a fast start," said Charlevoix Rayder golf coach, Jim Glynn. "We're senior laden so we have a lot of experience."

Glynn said Charlevoix hasn't played up to the level he knows they can reach.

"We need to play better, but we're in the hum," he said. "We've got a shot at playing for the Lake Michigan Conference title of course."

He added, "Traverse City St. Francis is the team to beat."

Last year's champions, Traverse City St. Francis, took first place at the opener with a 318.

Harbor Springs came in second with 325; the Rayders were in third with 327 and Grayling came in fourth 332.

Charlevoix Rayders Kyle DeYoung and J.D. Speigl had a 78 and 80 for the day respectively.

Fifteen schools competed in the second match which took place Aug. 17 at the Russ Harvey Memorial Alpine Course at Boyne Mountain.

Traverse City St. Francis had 316, Grayling came in with 332, Harbor Springs had 344 and Charlevoix had 346.

The Rayders high scorer was Stephen Parker with 82.

Match three took place on Aug. 18 against the Columbus Academy of Ohio at the Belvedere Golf Club where Columbus bested Charlevoix 333 to 364.

The Rayders' Kris Bartling shot an 84 that day while Kyle DeYoung had 90. Matt Novotny and Kenny Anderson each shot a 95 and Kevin Kusina and Stephen Parker shot 100 and 103 respectively.

Parker managed a hole in one on the fourteenth hole with a seven iron.

Results for the matches on Aug. 23 and 24 were not available by press time.

The Rayders next match will take place at 8 a.m. Aug. 25 at the Traverse City Resort for the Traverse City St. Francis Invitational.

PUBLIC NOTICE

APPEARS IN YOUR NEWSPAPER.

Currently, and historically, it is the responsibility of state and local government to publish public and legal notices here in Michigan's newspapers. This paper you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. And its pages hold your right to know what the government is doing in your community. In fact, it's law.

In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. That is why you have, and read, your newspaper, where public notices are published with accountable circulation and presented to you on these pages in clear black and white.

Celtic games take place on Beaver Island in July

Celtic strongmen from across Michigan converged on Beaver Island in late July for the first Beaver Island Celtic Games.

Competitors competed in events such as the caber toss — a 20-foot long pole that they must pick up and flip in the air — and the 100-pound Irish stone of strength — which must be picked up and thrown with two hands for distance.

The competitors were Dale Gehman of Gaylord, Damon Barth of Fort Wayne, Ind., Kip Miller of Mason, Mike Brown of Shepard, Ken Green of Lansing, Bill Gordon of Deerton, Chris Snider of Saline, Jody Gilbert of Elkhart, Ind., Dave Carl of Nashville, Jeremy McBain of Charlevoix, John Tracey of Wayne and judge Jerry Bowersox of Hudsonville. Miller was the overall winner in the competition.

McBain went on to compete in the esteemed Detroit Highland Games sponsored by the St. Andrews Society in conjunction with the Detroit Scottish Festival.

Stupak: 'Suspend oil delivery to federal reserve'

GAS

Stupak said, ceasing the increase in oil to the reserve wouldn't hurt America's energy security at all.

Rather, he said suspension of oil delivery to the reserve would put additional barrels of oil into the U.S. market to help stabilize our oil supply and provide some relief at the pump for consumers.

If enough people complain to the government, Stupak feels President George W. Bush and the federal government would be more likely to take notice.

"At least if he gets a number of calls he might think twice about it," Stupak said. "Or call the department of energy and they might start to understand."

Stupak said, unfortunately his provision intended to cease the delivery of oil to the reserve was removed from the Energy Bill.

"I ran my amendments through the house and they got stripped by the senate," he said.

As the price of gasoline continues to increase, Michigan State Senator, Cameron S. Brown, a Republican from Fawn River Township, recently called on Gov. Jennifer Granholm to use $1.3 million intended for the hiring of more gas station inspectors.

In a press release dated Aug. 18, Brown said, "We can't wait any longer. With gas nearing $3 a gallon it is imperative that all protections which can be afforded to consumers are used."

According to Brown's release, gas stations will be inspected that have prior records of poor quality and complaints. And, the release said, Michigan gas pump compliance rates are below the national average for both quality and quantity.

And, the most typical quality violations include selling lower octane gas as high octane gas and having unacceptable amounts of water or sediment in it. Quantity violations occur when consumers are shorted the amount of gas they pay for.

Brown said in the release that if only 10 percent of Michigan gas stations were to short consumers two table spoons of gasoline from every gallon they sold each year, consumers would be overcharged by $24 million.

"I find it extremely disturbing that nothing has been done yet to help protect Michigan motorists," Brown added.

Stupak is calling on the White House to do the right thing and keep their promise to protect American consumers.

According to Stupak, the President and the Secretary of Energy have the power to divert domestic barrels to increase oil supply and that will directly affect the crunch at the pump. They could also release oil from the reserve to help ease gas prices, just as Presidents Bill Clinton and George H.W. Bush did during their tenures.

So far, President George W. Bush has refused to do so.

Stupak wants to know why the government is filling the reserve when oil prices are at an all-time high.

"Why are you filling oil when it's most expensive? You should fill it when the price of oil is low not when it's the highest it's ever been."

"So it's taxpayer's money filling that SPR when cost is the highest," he said. "From a budgetary point of view it doesn't make much sense."

Stupak said part of the justification for high prices is the terrorist surcharge on each barrel of oil.

"Because of the war (oil companies) are claiming they have to put this surcharge on oil," he said.

According to Stupak, the usual surcharge might be $1 or $2 but that number has risen to $15 or $20 a barrel.

He said, this additional fee, called a "terrorism risk premium," helps offset losses if production is halted because of an attack. But in the meantime no one is offsetting the cost to the consumer.

"If you knock that (the risk premium) out you could drop the price by 25 percent tomorrow," he said. "Who comes up with this? Where do these numbers come from? This isn't a government agency who makes up these things, this is the industry."

While at the moment it is not, Iraq was the second largest contributor of oil to the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and Venezuela, also a large contributor to OPEC, is making things difficult for the United States as far as getting oil is concerned, Stupak said.

Despite the high cost of gas now, Stupak said, the gas you are pumping now is from a long-term contract.

"Which was probably $30 a barrel. So they're making huge profits off this terrorist concern on oil which won't make our shores for a number of years," he said.

Stupak added, "So you can see the profits they're making off this."

Stupak said he doesn't feel the current administration will do much to change the trend in high oil prices left to their own devices.

"There is some monkey business going on here," he said. "And in my position as the ranking Democrat on the oversight and investigation subcommittee of energy and commerce I'm not too sure the Republican controlled Congress will allow us to look into it too far."

According to the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), there are resources available which were designed to alleviate the financial burden on Michigan motorists due to high gasoline prices.

MDOT established about 215 carpool lots in different areas across the state for a total of nearly 8,000 parking spots for people who carpool. For more information on Park and Ride visit, www.mi.gov/parkandride.

MDOT also developed a program called Ridesharing which allows people to use a statewide carpool program wherein fully insured nine or 15 passenger vans can be supplied to passengers of nine or more commuters with the costs being shared among those involved. For more information on the Rideshare program visit, www.mi.gov/rideshare.

Commuters can find out how much they spend each year on their vehicle by using the Driving Cost Calculator located on the Web at: <http://mdotwas1.mdot.state.mi.us/public/rideshare/drivingcost.cfm>

Algae build-up continues to plague some area beaches

Lake Michigan's shorelines are still sporting the latest fashion of a stringy, green goop called benthic algae or periphyton.

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council is launching a Rapid Response System to keep tabs on where the growths are occurring.

As part of the Rapid Response System, the watershed council will be collecting algae samples from northern Emmet County to Antrim County for analysis of the specific makeup and species in the "green goop."

The algae analysis is being performed by Dr. Rochelle Sturtevant with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Center of the Great Lakes. Results should be available in the next few weeks. Results will be reported through the Rapid Response System.

"In order to understand the algae growth better, we are also developing a method for citizens to report and describe growths," said Ann Baughman, program director at the watershed council.

"We would like to try to keep track of the location, size, and type of growths occurring on Lake Michigan. We have developed a simple data sheet, that citizens can complete to help report the growths," added Baughman.

The data sheet requests information on the location, description, coordinates, length of the growth, average width of growth, average depth of growth, average depth of water where the growth was found and color of the growth.

Community members can sign-up with the Rapid Response System to receive updates via e-mail and postal mail.

If you would like to sign up for the Rapid Response System or help with the volunteer algae monitoring, please contact the Watershed Council at (231) 347-1181, extension 100 or send an e-mail to info@watershedcouncil.org.

Felonies up 56 percent over 2004

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

It may not constitute a full blown crime wave, but the increase in incidents of law breaking in Charlevoix is disconcerting to many area officials.

From Jan. 1, 2004 to Aug. 24, 2004 there were five cases of fleeing and eluding a police officer, 10 cases of drunk driving, 35 cases involving drugs, nine cases of home invasion and seven cases of individuals blatantly writing bad checks.

According to Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema those 2004 figures are a pretty picture compared to those recorded in 2005.

"I really don't know what I attribute it to," Jarema said. "But it's an alarming increase."

He added, "Hopefully it's an aberration, hopefully next year will come down a bit."

In 2005, there were 11 charges of fleeing and eluding a police officer, 12 drunk driving charges, 73 charges involving drugs, 20 cases of home invasion and 25 charges of bad checks being written.

According to Jarema, there were 146 felony cases between Jan. 1, 2004 to Aug. 1, 2004 which rose to 229 for the same period of time in 2005 for an increase of about 56 percent.

And, he said, "Misdemeanors during same time period were 669 in '04 up to 685 (in 2005) so there's only 30 cases up for the year."

According to Jarema, the number of criminal sexual conduct cases has also skyrocketed up from 15 between Jan. 1, 2004 to Aug. 24, 2004 to 22 in the same time this year for an increase of 68 percent.

There is a 65 percent increase in juvenile cases and 50 percent for child support, which the prosecutor's office handles for out-of-wedlock cases.

Jarema said some contributing factors could be a faltering economy, an increase in population and an increase in gambling debt due to the close proximity of casinos.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Michigan's unemployment rate as of June was near the top of the list at number three with 6.8 percent, just under Mississippi with 7 percent and the District of Columbia with 7.5 percent.

"There are a lot of embezzlements and bad check writing cases and people stealing to cover old debts," Jarema said.

He added, "I think we're getting into a time where the influx from southern and lower Michigan is getting up here. Unfortunately as the population grows, so does crime."

Jarema also said the increase shows that all law enforcement agencies are doing their job.

As always, Jarema said, to help prevent crime people should be aware of their surroundings, lock car and home doors and be conscious of your personal space and belongings.

Investigations at camp and school into student safety

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Officials with Charlevoix Public Schools and Camp Daggett are conducting internal investigations into a two-year time period when convicted sex offender Arthur Kirk volunteered for them.

"My first thought (after Kirk's criminal past was uncovered) was total anger — I felt the system had failed and as much a victim as those he victimized prior to working at our school," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock said.

Kirk, 70, of Charlevoix Township, was arrested in early August and charged with being a felon in possession of a firearm and falsifying a gun permit application.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigators said they discovered Kirk had been using an alias and has a criminal history including several criminal sexual conduct convictions from 1978 and 1981, under the name Arthur Heilberg Kirkeby.

Fingerprints determined that Kirk is Kirkeby.

At the time of his arrest he was a contract worker coordinating volunteer operations for AmeriCorps through the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

However, in 2000 and 2001 he was an AmeriCorps volunteer at Charlevoix Middle School and in 2002 and 2003 was a counselor at Camp Daggett.

According to Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, Kirk acted as both a tutor at the middle school and on one occasion volunteered to chaperone an eighth grade trip to Washington D.C.

Sturock said students who may have had contact with him are juniors in high school right now.

Because of Kirk's background, Sturock said he and his staff are working with local law enforcement agencies to conduct an internal investigation.

"We are doing this simply because we want to make sure nothing inappropriate happened in our school," he said.

Sturock said the investigation centers around discussions with students and parents who Kirk may have had the opportunity to have had contact with.

Sheriff Lasaster issues fraud warning

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has received numerous complaints of contractor fraud.

Fraud claims include information that there are several individuals currently working in the area who are offering home improvement services and are not fulfilling their obligations to homeowners.

Sheriff George T. Lasaster advises homeowners to be aware that the work being offered such as roofing, painting and driveway sealing is not being performed as promised.

Sheriff Lasaster suggests whenever you are dealing with contractors that you are not personally familiar with, to get as much information as you can from the contractor in conjunction with the type of work you are having done.

- A call to the Better Business Bureau to check for any adverse information they might have in their files is also a good idea.

- Be certain their licenses are up to date, and that they are insured properly.

- Most importantly, withhold payment until after the work has been done satisfactorily.

If you have any suspicions concerning a contractor, call the sheriff's office at (231) 547-4461.

According to Heinzelman the program was recommended made by the ISD and Kirk was provided through the ISD as well.

Heinzelman is taking a similar approach to that of Sturock, talking with other counselors who were at camp during the time Kirk was there.

He said camp policy which maintains no one is to be alone with a camper should have protected the children.

Kick back and have a hotdog this weekend

Benjamin Gohs
'Staff writer'

Congress made Labor Day an official holiday in 1894 to celebrate achievements of American workers.

And, while some folks spend the weekend in contemplation of the labor movement, there are others who do it differently.

Thursday is spent packing the car at breakneck speed so dad can, "Get a head start on all the tourists." Yes, there can be 8,000 other cars on the expressway this weekend, but the old man is the only one who isn't a tourist.

"Don't forget the suntan lotion. Don't forget the bug spray and for heaven's sake don't forget the 26 pounds of hot-dogs."

Friday morning is a mad dash to keep up with dad, who seems to have slept in his clothes, because if he can't get on the road before 10 a.m., "There isn't much point in going."

Somewhere between Michigan's largest pink elephant and the U.P.'s tastiest hamburger, a relaxing cruise through the majesty of the open road becomes a cross-eyed blinking frenzy when dad realizes that, yes he did pack the 20 foot by 20 foot tent with built in shower room and breakfast nook. But somehow, most likely in the interest of staying on schedule, he failed to pack the poles.

Eighty-six miles from home and dad is making good time — he isn't about to turn around. The only intelligible sounds emanating from the front seat are mother's stifled giggles and dad's broken, angry gibberish, "Never again!...Why?...We'll rough it." After all, this is camping.

No one dares ask, "Are we there yet?"

A few hours of uncomfortable silence pass and you know you're "there" because the car is parked between an outhouse and a picnic table covered with ants.

The silence is broken by anguished cries when dad realizes gnarly pine boughs weren't intended to be used as tent poles, and no amount of banging his head against a defenseless oak tree is ever going to change that.

Upon awakening Saturday morning it is understood why people don't sleep in cars more often. Mom is lurching so far forward she looks like she should be ringing the bells at Notre Dame and, despite slapping himself black and blue, dad never did manage to kill the loudest mosquito in the northern hemisphere.

Later that afternoon the old man manages to scrounge a few hundred feet of string and spends the rest of the day repeatedly assuring mother that, "It will not cause the tent to cave-in causing mass suffocation during the night."

When the elderly couple camping in the Greyhound bus turned RV across the way ask why the tent looks like a demented marionette, dad tells them, "It's one of those European jobbies," but he doesn't join the couple in the laughter which follows. The whole time mom is giving him that, "Don't even think of saying what's on your mind," stare.

Lying in the drooping nylon coffin, Junior is lulled to sleep by a horde of marauding raccoons eating what sounds like the last of the graham crackers. Yeah, he assured his father he would put the cooler in the trunk before he went to bed, but that was before dad told the story of the 1,200 pound man-eating grizzly the locals affectionately refer to as "skulls."

Which, he added, was spotted just a couple miles east of the campground.

Sunday morning dad's off fishing.

mom and sister head to the beach and Junior finds the perfect walking stick for his safari through the woods. The safari is cut short when an overzealous chipmunk rustling in the leaves sounds a little too much like a hungry bear. It's not so bad, Junior would rather spend the morning locked in the back seat of the car anyway.

That afternoon dad finally masters a knot capable of keeping the tent in place and mom masters her, "No, really, this looks good," face.

Monday morning mom and dad sit around one last campfire drinking one last cup of coffee. Sister fights black ants for supremacy over the picnic table and Junior roasts the last hot-dog. That's when the realization sets in — despite the minor inconveniences and chores involved, relaxing with your family one last time this summer is all worth it. At least that's how I remember it.

Stay safe this Labor Day weekend, Charlevoix, and enjoy it with your family, man-eating grizzlies, European tents and all.

Comedic success

Editor:
On July 7, a magical evening of entertainment was held at Castle Farms.

"Comedy at the Castle," with Jay Laffoon, was a laughter filled evening.

It was a fund-raising benefit for St. Mary School. We would like to extend a gracious and most appreciative thank you to Richard and Linda Mueller for the donation of the facility.

To Jay Laffoon, formerly of Petoskey, for his performance.

A big thank you to the staff at Castle Farms, for their input and guidance for this first time fund-raiser. We would also like to acknowledge all other donors and the numerous volunteers who made this event successful.

'Thank you' Helen Open supporters

Editor:
On behalf of Hospice of Northwest Michigan (formerly Charlevoix County Hospice, Inc.), its Board of Directors and volunteers I want to thank Ron Weislik, Cheri Hoffman and Tim Whippo for chairing the Fifth Annual Helen Open in memory of that very special lady, Helen Weislik.

The event took place on Aug. 21, 2005. We are very appreciative of the extremely generous donations provided by community businesses and citizens.

We do not charge for our services — volunteer, bereavement and community outreach — and this money will be put to good use helping those in our communities. I know how much work was put into this activity — those who worked, those who participated and those who donated.

I know that Helen is smiling down on all of you, and joins us in saying thank you.

Gas solution off base

Editor:
To our us congressman, Bart Stupak, I read the headline article in the Aug. 24 issue of the Charlevoix Courier, titled "Stupak fights high gas prices" (page one).

In it you are quoted as saying "the White House can release oil from the strategic petroleum reserve (spr) or stop filling the spr" as a solution to the high cost of oil.

I find this approach to solving the gasoline over utilization by the majority of the American public incredibly short sighted, if not magical thinking.

You should be striving to mandate conservation to the point that we are no longer dependent on foreign oil, no longer sending our brothers and sisters, sons and daughters to their deaths in the Middle East to protect our supply of oil for our inefficient automobiles.

As the old saying goes "lead, follow, or get out of the way." With the approach that you prescribe, you are in the way.

Community thanks

Editor:
During early August you were most kind to present extensive factual and editorial information concerning our son, Andrew Tuck, and his plans to attend Interlochen Arts Academy.

There was also much appreciated information about the scholarship fund-raiser concert he performed

Aug. 11. We are writing to thank everyone who supported this effort and helped make it a success in every respect. The generous financial sponsors for Andy's passion to study music was exceeded only by the loving emotional and moral support of our community.

We humbly acknowledge all who attended and/or contributed; and we offer specific thanks to the following individuals and organizations who unselfishly gave funding, time, hard work, handshakes, warm embraces, kind words, joyful tears and applause to our son.

David Holland, viola instructor and conductor, Dr. Maria Kranz, DMA, piano instructor, Margaret (Peggy) Beck, artistic director of the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra and mentor to Andy, Edith Gilbert, supporter, publicity and dear friend, Robert Northwest fund-raising

Editor:
Now that the summer season is ending, I would like to take this opportunity to extend thanks to the local community for your generous assistance during our summer fund-raising projects. I would like to thank Mr. Dan Barron of the Venetian Festival Committee and the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce for their assistance to the Friends of Northwest Academy. Our fund-raising efforts during the Venetian Festival and the various art fairs turned out to be quite successful and certainly benefited from your help.

Currently we are expanding and renovating our facilities. Our student population is on the increase and our programs are growing. The funds we raised this summer will go towards scholarships and renovations. We look forward to another exciting school year. Your assistance is greatly appreciated.

Value of eminent domain

Editor:
Benjamin Gohs' pessimistic view that the Supreme Court's decision in Kelo vs. City of New London places us all in danger of losing our homes to land grabbing private interests is off base. "Eminent Domain Imminent Disaster," Aug. 3, 2005 Charlevoix Courier.

Legislative bodies such as city and county commissions are always exercising discretion, and when they get out of line the voters can replace them.

Exercise of the power of eminent domain is one of a variety of powers which is exercised with discretion. Long ago Justice James Iredell observed:

"It is not sufficient to urge, that the power may be abused, for, such is the nature of all power, such is the tendency of every human institution; and it might as fairly be said, that the power of taxation, which is only circumscribed by the discretion of the Body, in which it is vested, ought not to be granted, because the Legislature, disregarding its true objects, might for visionary and useless projects, impose a tax to the amount of 19 shillings in the pound.

We must be content to limit power where we can, and where we cannot, consistently with its use, we must be content to repose a salutary confidence.

There are occasions when land is indispensable for a project of great value to a community and compulsory purchase at a fair price is the only means by which to obtain it.

Denying that authority to a public body would be akin to throwing out the baby with the bath water.

Community foundations announce grant deadline

Once again, it's time to put local charitable dollars to work on behalf of the community.

The Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation are inviting nonprofit organizations, educational institutions, and municipalities who are in need of funding to submit grant requests in support of their projects.

During the next few months, the community foundations and their Youth Advisory Committees (YAC's) will review grant proposals to help fund health initiatives, community development projects, education, the arts and cultural events, environmental efforts and human service programs. The youth committees, which are made up of representatives from high schools throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties will award grants to programs that serve children and teens.

Programs chosen for funding must serve residents of Emmet or Charlevoix county and have a nonprofit tax status. The deadline for grant requests is Oct. 1, 2005.

Applications are available by calling the community foundation office in your county. All applicants must call and discuss their proposals in advance. Foundation staff are available to offer advice and assistance to organizations interested in submitting a proposal for funding consideration.

Both community foundations are grassroots charitable organizations made up of various funds — all of them established by local donors. Some funds are earmarked for specific causes, and others are open-ended to meet changing needs. The funds are held in permanent endowment, so they can continue to grow and generate income to enhance the quality of life in Charlevoix and Emmet counties, now and for generations to come. Together, the community foundations grant-making total amounts to over $10 million since 1992.

For more information about the grant-making process, establishing a fund, or making a gift, contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI, 49727, or by phone at (231) 536-2440.

CD released featuring local student musicians

High school jazz musicians from Petoskey, Charlevoix and Northwest Academy are featured on a new CD that is on sale now.

The CD showcases students who participated in the Jazz in the Mitten Spring Fever Concert that took place in May at Charlevoix High School.

The concert was the culmination of a Michigan blues and jazz educational program funded by the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs and the National Endowment for the Arts through a grant administered by North Central Michigan College. The Crooked Tree Arts Council is a partner organization.

The program was created to help students develop their musical, recording, marketing and graphic arts talents through contact with professional musicians and artists, and to promote Michigan's musical heritage.

This fall, students learning about the music marketing business will market and distribute the CD. For now, copies may be purchased at North Central Michigan College's Institute for Business and Industry Training.

For more information call (231) 348-6705. Revenues from the sale of the CD will help fund the jazz project.

Chris Ventzke, who goes by the stage name Doc Woodward, coordinated the project. He and several other professional musicians accompany the students on the CD.

Thomas Dammann: died Aug. 23, 2005

Thomas L. (Toni) Dammann, journalist who covered Europe, Eastern Europe, and the Middle East, and later the Upper Great Lakes, since 1935 died at his home in Charlevoix on August 23. He was 92.

A newspaper man all his working life, Mr. Dammann began his career as an editor of the Harvard Crimson. After graduating in 1935, he joined the City News Bureau of Chicago, Ill. became a reporter for the Chicago Daily News, then the Nashville Tennessean and in 1937 was assigned by the Chicago Times to cover the Nine Power Peace Conference, set up as an attempt to avoid war in both the Far East and Europe.

As a reporter Mr. Dammann believed in pursuing world events from all angles, getting away from the capitals and into the country. He was equally at home interviewing kings, presidents, field workers, guerrilla fighters, or deck hands on the gold smuggling dhow out of Abu Dhabi. He also delighted in the off-beat and had a literally disarming sense of humor. Once in the 1970's he reported from the Middle East with a Mexican jeweled beetle given him as a joke, presenting it during interviews with Middle Eastern leaders as a "CIA Bug," saying it spoke equally fluent Arabic, Hebrew, English and French and that the bug could be debriefed for information. With the bug he successfully persuaded laughing Palestinian guerrillas to allow him past a check point into Israel.

His love for international reporting began in 1938, when with war in Europe looming, Mr. Dammann and his then wife Harle Dammann developed a syndicated newspaper column for some 60 U.S. newspapers, including The San Francisco Chronicle, Chicago Tribune, Detroit News and San Diego Union-Tribune, focused on the attitudes of the youth of Europe. They reported from Germany, Italy, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Poland. In the late summer of 1939, they were expelled from Germany for photographing Nazi Brown Shirts being spat on by a sea lion in the Berlin Zoo. Driving east, on September 1, 1939, they encountered German troops massing at the Polish border. With fake documents sealed with wax, they inserted themselves into the Nazi columns and followed the Germans into Poland, reporting back to their client newspapers. They filed reports from behind the German lines in Poland, the former Czechoslovakia, and the former Yugoslavia, and Hungary, until warned of discovery by the Gestapo.

After a frightening night hiding in a hotel full of German troops, they began their escape, pausing just long enough to fill with water the line of storm trooper boots outside each room. They made their way out of German-occupied Europe to Italy where they caught the last boat headed for the U.S. and were forced to escape through Romania to Greece and Italy.

Throughout the war, Mr. Dammann served as a chief correspondent for the Office of War Information for the Pacific Theatre, working from San Francisco. At the end of the war Mr. Dammann was in charge of the foreign press at the San Francisco conference establishing the United Nations. He then moved to southern California where he was the Hollywood correspondent for The Times of London and became active in California politics. With the dream of farming as he raised a young family, he moved to San Diego County, operated a large onion ranch in Fallbrook, and was then recruited by film actors Gregory Peck and Mel Ferrer to be resident manager and publicist for the La Jolla Playhouse. He also served as the San Diego County manager for both of Adlai Stevenson's Presidential Campaigns in 1952 and 1956.

In 1959, Mr. Dammann resumed his career as a foreign correspondent, writing from Eastern Europe and the Middle East for The Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News Syndicate, The Times of London, Chicago's Today and later the North American Newspaper Alliance.

During that time he covered President Richard Nixon's trip to the former Soviet Union, including the "Kitchen Debates" between President Nixon and Soviet President Nikita Khrushchev. He also served as the Eastern European correspondent for the World Book Year Book. His journalistic work took him to Cyprus where he covered the continuing conflicts between Greek and Turkish Cypriots as well as the Middle East where he covered not only the Arab-Israeli conflict but the smoldering regional conflicts between Egypt and Saudi Arabia, particularly in Yemen.

In 1964 he was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for exposing the Egyptian use of phosgene gas against Yemeni Royalist. During the 1967 Arab-Israeli War he uncovered the Russian attempts to rebuild the Egyptian air force.

Mr. Dammann continued covering the Middle East, with his second wife Sara Gay Dammann, until they returned to Charlevoix, Michigan, site of the Dammann family summer home since 1917. From Charlevoix the Dammanns wrote news and features, focusing particularly on political, environmental and Native American issues in the Upper Great Lakes region as stringers for The New York Times, Chicago Tribune, Detroit News, several national magazines including Parade, Sports Illustrated, Travel and Leisure, and Time-Life, as well as a number of regional newspapers. Mr. Dammann retired in the mid 1980's to fish, sail, and travel.

He is survived by his wife, of the past 38 years, Sara Gay Dammann and their son F. L. Dammann and wife Agatha; daughter Nancy Dammann Davis and her husband Todd Davis; his daughter Terre Edwards and her husband Mark Edwards of La Jolla, Calif., from his first marriage; his granddaughter Marnie Gavit and her husband George Gavit; his three great-grandchildren, Jacob, Mark, and Harle Gavit of La Jolla, his brother Dr. J. Francis Dammann, of Charlottesville, Va., his sister Nancy Dammann, of Phoenix, Ariz., and his first wife, Harle Montgomery of La Jolla, Calif.

He was pre-deceased by his son Thomas L. Dammann Jr., and daughter Harle Adair Dammann, grandson Caeden Rye Dammann, and brother Peter Dammann of Friday Harbor, Wash.

The family asks that in lieu of flowers donations be made to Northwest Michigan Community Health/Hospice or Amnesty International USA (5 Penn Plaza, New York, NY 10001).

A celebration of his life will take place from 3 to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 10 at Polecat Point.

Balasz family join mission to Cameroon

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

The West African nation of Cameroon, formerly divided into French and British colonies, is where three Charlevoix residents decided to spend two weeks working at a medical clinic.

For their first mission trip abroad, the Balasz family was careful to select a country with a stable government. Jay, a local dentist, his wife, Kris, and their 15-year-old son, Sam, traveled with a group of about 19 Americans under the coordination of Global Health Outreach — a component of the Christian Medical and Dental Associations based in Tennessee from April 1-17.

Traveling with pharmacists, dentists, doctors, nurses, two recent medical school graduates from the University of Michigan and medical trainees, the Balasz family was housed in a rustic Presbyterian convent located about nine hours on bus from Cameroon's capital city of Yaoundé.

"It was an amazing trip," said Kris, adding that outreach work was something the family had wanted to experience for a long time. "We want each of our kids to experience this and we are both very interested in Africa. I think it's because of the need there."

Jay and Sam spent each day at the medical clinic performing dental work on Cameroonians. According to Kris, pulling teeth was the sole task completed by Jay during the trip.

"From sunup to sundown, he was only pulling teeth, which tells you how bad the situation was there," she said, adding that Sam has long been exposed to his father's profession.

During the mission, Kris' duties were to fit and distribute 1,000 pairs of eyeglasses to Cameroonians — 2,000 of these were donated to the missionaries by Lions Club International. The remaining 1,000 were left at the medical clinic, a mainstay facility operated by locals and volunteers.

"Not one person asked to look in a mirror to see how they looked with glasses on," she said. "That was really rewarding. It was just amazing how much they needed."

Medical supplies in the rural Cameroonian village, said Kris, are so limited that caregivers will often salvage rubber gloves by washing them after every use. Upon arrival to the clinic each day, she added, lines would be formed and hillsides filled with natives waiting to be cared for.

"We had a pretty respectable pharmacy set up with antibiotics and cold remedies," she said. For each group member, one suitcase was intended for personal belongings and another was reserved for medical supplies or medicine.

Prior to their departure, individuals were given immunizations for malaria, hepatitis and yellow fever. Those who developed sickness during the mission, Kris said were stricken with worms or amoebas and many became ill from the native's prepared meals. Attempts by Cameroonians to make American food, such as rolled pancakes with fish in the center, were often the culprits of sickness, she said.

Global Health Outreach was selected by the Balasz family as a host organization in Cameroon mainly because of its recommendation by Don Trimmer, a Charlevoix resident and veteran missionary who now leads trips with Community Reformed Church.

The group, which Trimmer has traveled with several times, accommodated guests from eight to 60 years of age, supplying each member with a translator. The primary language in Cameroon is "pigeon the American missionaries depart because that meant his stint as a worker had ended.

In Cameroon, Kris said, typically one person in each family has the privilege to be educated. Since the young man's sister had already been given that opportunity, there was little hope for his own future employment.

"The experience was exhausting — physically, mentally and spiritually," Kris said. "You look at everything differently. It was almost easier on Sam. He just went with it, no worries."

Charlevoix resident Kris Balasz recently spent two weeks in Cameroon fitting 1,000 pairs of eye glasses to needy villagers.

Initially, Kris and Jay were hesitant to transport their then-14-year-old son to a landscape rife with hepatitis, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. Faith, caution and contact with the Cameroonian people, however, eventually shrunk the size of those concerns.

"They have so little and have so much joy," said Kris, recalling the hymns that would be sung outside the clinic as natives waited to be treated and the festive four-hour masses. "It's just hard when you're there for only a short period of time because these are long-term problems. I think we'll definitely go back."

The Balasz family, residents of Charlevoix for 11 years and members of St. Mary's Catholic Church, plan to encourage their two daughters — one a three-year-old adopted from China, and the other 12 years old — to perform missionary work later in life.

"I love being able to expose our children to the world," said Kris. "These experiences may give them a better perspective on life."

Charlevoix Township builds new rec facility

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Charlevoix Township residents and anyone else for that matter who visit Shanahan Field will soon benefit from a new concession and restroom building.

According to Charlevoix Township Supervisor, H. Dale Glass, construction of a new restroom, concession and storage building, which is almost complete, is well overdue.

"Everything will be made handicap accessible," Glass said. "And the brick building is designed to match the hall."

Glass said the new building located adjacent to Shanahan Field off Old Orchard Road will serve multiple purposes that the township has needed for quite some time.

And, he said, the new building will be larger.

"I think we're looking at 28 feet by 38 feet. It'll be pretty good size," he said. "It will have general storage in the back, of course two separate lavatory facilities and then it'll have a bit of a concession stand toward the front and so forth."

Construction of the new building should be completed around the end of September, Glass said.

The cost of completing the new structure is about $100,000, which Glass said may seem a little high to some, but it will meet all codes for fire, handicap accessibility and it will last much longer than the old building.

"It has all up-to-date interior," he said. "The other one wasn't insulated, this one is up to all code standards."

He added, "It will be 100 percent better."

The new building was designed by Ron Way of Way Construction.

The detailed engineering designs were created primarily by Performance Engineering and the general construction work undertaken by L & J Porath Construction, Inc.

According to Glass, once the new building is complete, the old structure will be demolished.

"The township got that original building when someone gave it to us about 15 years ago," he said.

"Someone was abandoning it in the country and we moved it here."

Glass said the old one was out of date and it didn't meet the requirements of the recreation department.

But, the new building, he said, "Will be a substantial enhancement to the recreation department in Charlevoix Township."

Squirrel causes power outage downtown

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

As Emerald Isle passengers stood on the deck of the ferry, anxiously awaiting the opening of the bridge, downtown Charlevoix was dark and a number of confused people rambled around asking, "Who shut the lights off?"

The major outage which knocked out power from the south side of the bridge to the top of the hill by 7-Eleven took place at about 7:30 p.m. Aug. 23.

The culprit was an unfortunate squirrel who met his demise on one of many transformers that sit at the top of light poles in the City of Charlevoix.

City engineer Don Swen said squirrels frequently cause power outages.

"Three out of four times when we lose power it's a squirrel," he said.

He explained the squirrels stand on top of the transformer and then tails hit the other phase, completing the circuit, sending a current of electricity through them and blowing a fuse.

Swen said in most cases the electricity knocks the squirrel off the transformer and the blown fuse leaves a street without power.

This time, Rocky stayed on top of the transformer so the current was delivered three times before the substation shut it down entirely, including power to the bridge.

Swen said the bridge is hooked up to a generator which requires the operator to flip a transfer switch but the operator didn't know how. This left the bridge stuck closed and stranded ferry passengers in the Pine River Channel.

A Coast Guard boat docked at the channel's Lake Michigan entrance to block other vessels from entering the channel.

Josh Barnes and John Haggard face off in Nov. 8 primary

By JULIE WITTHOFT
Editor

A contentious race for the Republican running seat for the First District Charlevoix County Commissioner's position is underway.

Two Republican nominating petitions were submitted by the Aug. 16 deadline — one by interim commissioner Josh Barnes and the other by Charlevoix Township resident John Haggard, the 64-year-old chairman of the Charlevoix County Republican party.

Because two Republicans filed, Haggard and Barnes will face off in a primary race Nov. 8. At that time, voters living in the north half of the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix, Hayes and Bay townships will decide who the Republican candidate for the seat will be.

No Democrats filed nominating petitions to run. That means at the Feb. 28 general election the primary winner will run unopposed unless a write-in campaign is launched.

Josh Barnes

Barnes, 77, was appointed by the members of the commission to fill a vacancy left by his daughter, Valerie Snyder, who resigned on March 10, 2005 because she was moving to a location just outside Las Vegas, Nev.

He said he wants to be elected to finish the term which ends Dec. 31, 2006.

"I enjoy the work and I'm doing a good job. I think the commission is better because I'm there," Barnes said.

But Haggard, a former commissioner of four years has stepped in to challenge him and Barnes said Haggard has "no business" running.

"The chairman of the Republican party has no business causing a primary election the county has to pay the bill on," Barnes said. "He assigns campaign funding. He holds the purse strings of the Republican party. He could benefit financially from the position he's in and I think he should resign."

Barnes added if Haggard resigns he would feel the two were playing on even ground.

Haggard, who has held the party chairman's position for about 15 years said the Republican party does not allocate funds for a primary election and he has no intention of resigning his seat.

John Haggard

Haggard said he has no beef with Barnes but is interested in taking a seat on the commission once again. He was a commissioner from 1978-1982.

Both candidates have extensive political and business experience.

Barnes was mayor of the City of Charlevoix for four years. He is currently director of Summa Industries, owner of several operating companies including local manufacturer Spectrus-LexaLite, which he founded. Barnes is also a consultant to several businesses.

Haggard, a Charlevoix native, is co-owner of Haggard's Plumbing and Heating. Aside from running this local business he has also had his hands in local and national politics since he was a teen.

This first district commission seat will be the only matter on the county primary ballot. Township election questions for Hayes, Bay and Charlevoix townships will be on the ballot along with the commission seat.

Charlevoix County buys screen to shield victims

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Anonymity can be precious, especially for a child forced to testify against an adult in court.

Because of this, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema recently decided there was a need for a screen to keep young victims from seeing the alleged perpetrators in court.

"We purchased a screen which gets placed in front of them so the kids don't have to see the perpetrator in court," Jarema said. "It should alleviate their anxiety and help kids with the traumatic experience of being in court and talking about some difficult issues."

According to Jarema, whenever a young person has to go to court, the prosecutor's office brings the child in early to get them acclimated to the room in an effort to get them ready for the hearing.

"And they are always concerned if they have to see the perpetrator or alleged perpetrator," he said. "And this is intended to alleviate their anxiety."

The $900 screen is made of Plexiglas with holes in it so the child cannot see the alleged offender much like a two-way mirror, Jarema said.

"They've been around for a while but this is the first one Charlevoix has had. And, it seems like with the increase in CSCs (criminal sexual conduct cases) we've been having, I felt that it was a need," Jarema said.

The funds used to purchase the screen were allocated from the State of Michigan through the Victims Rights Advocates Grant.

area this July.

The construction is expected to last approximately five weeks.

According to Charlevoix County Road Commission Director, Patrick Harmon, the detour for the duration of the construction will be along Burgess Road and Old U.S. 31 with an emergency access at the construction site.

The section of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road under construction will have improved drainage, new tile and ditch work and it will be wider.

It will also have dedicated left turn lanes to Charlevoix as well as a right turn lane toward Petoskey which is expected to improve the flow of traffic.

Back-to-school bus traffic safety rules

State highway officials want to remind drivers that 'Stop' means 'stop,' especially when it comes to school buses.

AAA Michigan stresses the need for motorists to follow state school bus safety laws to keep students safe.

"It's very simple — the law requires motorists to stop when the overhead red lights of a school bus are flashing," says Richard J. Miller, Community Safety Services Manager for AAA Michigan. "This law applies to drivers on both sides of the road, unless the highway is divided by a barrier."

AAA, in partnership with the Michigan Association for Pupil Transportation (MAPT), has created several new television public service announcements on the school bus stop law being distributed to network and cable stations throughout Michigan this month.

According to the pupil transportation group, on an average day in Michigan, 18,000 buses transport 860,000 students to and from school. Michigan averages three fatalities per year due to school transportation-related crashes.

Nationwide, since 1993, 191 school-age pedestrians have died in school transportation-related crashes. Nearly two-thirds (65 percent) were killed by school buses, 31 percent by other vehicles involved in the crashes and 4 percent by vehicles functioning as school buses.

As part of its annual "School's Open" campaign, AAA also emphasizes that driving carefully begins with focusing on basic traffic safety practices, such as as the proper use of safety belts, child safety seats and booster seats.

"It's vitally important that all children age 12 and under be properly restrained in the back seat," said Miller. "Caregivers often don't realize they need to alter the type of child safety seat as children grow, which means that booster seats are underutilized or used incorrectly. Typically, children between the ages of four and eight or up to 4'9" are candidates for booster seats."

AAA urges motorists to follow these safety tips:

- Always stop for school buses that are loading or unloading students when red lights are flashing (unless you are driving in the opposite direction on a divided highway).

- Slow down in or near school and residential areas.

- Drive with your headlights on — even during the day — so children and others can see you.

- Look for clues — such as school safety patrols, adult crossing guards, hi-cycles and playgrounds — that indicate children may be in the area.

- Scan ahead between parked cars and other objects for children who could dart into the road.

- Practice extra caution in bad weather.

- When using a booster seat, always use both the lap and shoulder belt. Make sure the lap belt fits low and tight across the lap/upper thigh area and the shoulder belt fits snugly crossing the chest and shoulder to avoid abdominal injuries.

Chapel's fate topic of public hearing debate

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The fate of the Brookside Chapel in Charlevoix's Brookside Cemetery is in the hands of the community.

The City of Charlevoix, who owns the chapel, has scheduled a public hearing to discuss its future. The hearing will take place at 7 p.m. Sept. 6 in city council chambers at city hall located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

A tour of the building will take place at 6 p.m., prior to the council meeting discussion, at the chapel, which is located at 98 Stover Road.

A study has been completed and the cost of renovating the building is estimated to be $440,000.

The building was proposed for demolition in 2002, but members of the community quickly stepped forward and said the building has historic value and should be saved.

Charlevoix's city council agreed to look into a possible renovation of the building. They formed a chapel committee made up of city administrators and community members.

In January of 2003 the committee hired Patrick Birtles an architect with Birtles, Hagerman and DeKryger Architects of Cadillac to look at potential uses for the chapel. The challenge for Birtles and the chapel committee was to find a use for the building.

Its former use as a facility where bodies were stored in the winter for spring burial is no longer relevant as the city now performs burials year-round and has a separate facility at the cemetery for storage when necessary.

One possible use that is being considered is a site for post-cremation ash storage that also serves as a place to find cemetery plot information, a sanctuary and a historical reference point.

After touring the site Birtles told the committee it can be saved.

He also commented on the building's unique construction and found that its block structure is something he hadn't seen used before.

The building's block is a cement and colored glass mix. He said block reproduction would be expensive and renovation plans will attempt to save what is there.

Birtles also talked with the committee about providing access to both levels of the building and the potential high cost for that part of the project. If the building is designated as a historical landmark, it may be exempt from the barrier free requirement.

Birtles said historical grant funds for this type of project are limited and hard to get but if renovations are pursued, the city should try for it. He added that there are possible tax credits for the city if it pursues the project.

It has been estimated that renovation costs for the Brookside Chapel, pictured above would be $400,000. The fate of the building will be the topic of a public hearing scheduled to take place Sept. 6.

Grand Haven man tackles island test

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

In August 1999, David Anderson found his way to Beaver Island while in a manic state of manic-depression, or bipolar disorder. His actions were sporadic and thoughtless, his identity became distorted and his mind operated in a whirlwind of panic and paranoia.

This month, the 49-year-old Grand Rapids resident returned to face the landscape that both haunts and inspires him. Paired with his social worker, Anderson spent five days on the island without experiencing a single detrimental episode — the trip was a success.

"I had to prove to myself I could go to Beaver Island," said Anderson, who was diagnosed with bipolar disorder at the age of 23. "For me, it was the best trip I'd ever had in all my life. Coming away from it manic-free was real meaningful. I had a good companion who would've noticed something going on."

Steve Harrington, consumer advocate with Touchstone Innovare Mental Health Clinic in Grand Rapids, said Anderson needed little if any help from him during their return visit.

"He did it all on his own," he said. "He was med-compliant, meaning he was taking his medication. Bipolar disorder is kind of unpredictable. You never know when a manic episode is coming."

Harrington explained it is uncommon for a mere memory to trigger a manic episode. Rather, a state of mania is the result of a chemical imbalance in the brain. Because Anderson had not experienced an overly high or overly low episode in a while, the trip to Beaver Island occurred during a time when his imbalance wasn't so severe.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health Web site, www.nimh.nih.gov, bipolar disorder is a neurological disorder that causes irregular and severe shifts in a person's mood, energy and ability to function. The illness, typically maturing in late adolescence or early adulthood, affects about one percent of the U.S. population age 18 and older per year.

"I think that a lot of people in his life were leery about him going to Beaver Island because it's a place where he's had problems," said Harrington. "He didn't tell a lot of people in his life that he was going back for fear of their reaction. It helped him to go (to the island) with a friend."

Anderson said he still has not divulged the details of his return visit to his family.

"It's a real delicate spot for me," he said.

What drew Anderson to Beaver Island in 1999?

Perhaps it was the friendliness and hospitality of the locals, the fact that nobody locks their doors or that the atmosphere, for many, is reminiscent of the 1930s.

"I used to bicycle the island when I was 21, two years before I came down with the symptoms (of bipolar disorder)," said Anderson. "I've always wanted to go back to Beaver Island because it's such a nice place to go. Then, though, I was in a manic fray of mind."

Common symptoms of mania, according to the National Institute for Mental Health, include spending sprees, poor judgment, racing thoughts and unrealistic beliefs in one's abilities and powers.

"I always traveled when manic," said Anderson, whose family has a history of manic-depression. "I drove 'til the gas ran out."

A manic episode, he added, is usually followed by a long depression.

"I usually work myself out of it (depression) in three weeks if I'm supervised," he said.

During a depressive episode, people with bipolar disorder may experience feelings of hopelessness or pessimism, decreased energy or fatigue, difficulty concentrating and making decisions, restlessness and irritability, irregular sleep patterns and even thoughts of suicide.

Because there is no cure for bipolar disorder, medication — typically mood-stabilizers and anti-convulsants coupled with psychosocial treatment is an optimum combination for treating the condition. Lithium was the first mood-stabilizing medication approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for treatment of mania and is

Red Fox Regatta tradition continues this weekend

This Labor Day weekend the tradition continues.

For more than 30 years the Charlevoix Yacht Club has hosted the Red Fox Regatta on Lake Charlevoix. Once again this year the club is expected to be organizing the largest fleet of sail boats to cross the waters of Lake Charlevoix.

With an anticipated 90 boats to be registered, the scene on the lake will be spectacular. The festivities begin Friday, Sept. 2 with the Nu-Core triangle with boats racing on the north end of Lake Charlevoix.

Then, Saturday, Sept. 3, the fleet will sail to Boyne City with marks near Hemmingway Point, Horton Bay and Young State Park.

The traditional corn roast and barbecue party will be held on Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Park in Boyne City. The boats will sail back to Charlevoix on Sunday.

An awards party will take place directly following the race at the Charlevoix Yacht Club. For more information visit www.charlevoixyachtclub.org.

Cross country teams come out strong at first meet

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

Despite doing so much in so little time, the Charlevoix High School Boy's and Girl's cross country teams are still making great progress in their respective meets.

"The boys looked little tired from the shortened yet intense training camp this past week," said Boy's varsity cross country coach, Ken Plude.

He added, "It's a good start to the season."

On August 27 the boy's finished 7th out of the 14 Big Division schools.

Varsity medalist Brandon Stevens finished 21st in the meet with a time of 17 minutes and 32 seconds. He was followed by Scott Plude 17:59; Jacob Wimmer 18:16; Isaac Matchett 18:25; Zach Scharenbrach 18:31; Chuck Mason 19:23; Jacob Hunt 20:10.

The boy's junior varsity squad had an outstanding day finishing second to Division 1 cross country power Rockford.

Junior varsity medalists were:

Nick Wimmer in 7th place with 18:24; Dustin Arp in 11th place with 18:41; Nate Souyo in 12th place with 18:44; Alex Buday in 15th place with 18:52; Nat Gilmore in 23rd place with 19:10.

Other finishers included Sam Balasz with 19:23; Ryan Graham with 20:09; Logan Stachler with 20:44; Dan Myers with 21:20; Rob Shuter with 22:35; Steve Gelderblom with 23:19 and Michael McDonough with 25:12.

Rayder golf place 13 out of 18 teams at tournament

The Charlevoix High School golf team shot 352 to place 13th in an 18-team tournament hosted by Traverse City St. Francis Aug. 26 on the Spruce Run course at the Grand Traverse Resort.

Kris Bartling shot 83 to lead the Rayders, followed by J.D. Speigl, 88; Matt Novotny, 90; Kyle Smith, 91; and Kyle DeYoung, 93. Bartling placed 24th, Speigl was 48th, Novotny, 59th; Smith, 63rd; and DeYoung, 70th.

The tournament also served as a Lake Michigan Conference event, and the Rayders placed sixth in the eight-team league field.

Suttons Bay shot 309 to win the tournament.

One week earlier, the Rayders shot 363 to place sixth in a Lake Michigan Conference tournament hosted by Elk Rapids at A-Ga-Ming Golf Resort.

DeYoung shot 85 to lead the Rayders, while Bartling and Speigl each shot 92, Novotny shot 94, and Stephen Parker and Kyle Smith each shot 105.

Traverse City St. Francis shot 342 to win the event, seven shots ahead of second-place Grayling.

Parker is believed to have become the first Rayder varsity golfer to record a hole-in-one during a high school match when he accomplished the feat on Aug. 18 against Columbus (Ohio) Academy at Belvedere Golf Club. Parker used a 7-iron to ace the 14th hole.

The Charlevoix J.V. team won the six-team Rudyard Invitational on Aug. 24, recording a 356 team score. Gaylord shot 379 to place second.

Nic Williams shot 84 to lead the Rayders, while Chase Beatty and Woody Nitchman each shot 90, Zack Lake shot 92, and Alex Molter carded a 101. Williams earned medalist honors.

The Rayders play at the Bulldog Invitational at Indian River Inland Lakes on Wednesday, Aug. 31.

Rayder football shuts out St. Ignace

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

The guardian must have slept through Friday night's game as the Charlevoix Rayders defeated the St. Ignace Saints by a merciless margin of 35-0.

For the first time in 10 games over the past 16 years, the Rayders were able to beat the Saints, and beat them they did.

"We haven't won against St. Ignace in a long time. This got the season started in a the right direction," said Charlevoix Rayders varsity head football coach, Don Jess.

He added, "We were able to establish a running game and that's key to our passing game. We had a real balanced attack."

Charlevoix lost leading receiver

Ben Bergmann and quarterback Cody Crain to graduation, but the Rayders still played like a well-seasoned team.

A scoreless first quarter would not be an accurate indication of the evening's events as the Rayders took their first touchdown thrown by new quarterback Matt Kautz followed by Russell Williams who kicked the extra point to make it 7-0.

Travis Burke followed with a two-yard rushing touchdown. Just after the second Rayder touchdown, the Charlevoix defense forced the Saints to fumble at the 38 yard line.

With less than two minutes left in the half, Charlevoix picked up their third touchdown in addition to a two point conversion for a score of 21-0.

Comfortable lead or not, there would be no rest for the Rayders after the half-time break as they stepped things up with their fourth touchdown early in the third quarter to make things 28-0.

The Rayders managed to stave off St. Ignace to the end of the game when, with about three minutes to go Kyle Jones scored the fifth and final touchdown of the game.

Kautz was 11 for 17 for a total of 151 yards. He also lead rushing with 14 carries for 105 yards and one touchdown and threw to Matt Kanine for one two-point conversion.

Kyle Jones had 13 carries for 77 yards and one touchdown. Russell Williams had 13 carries for 48 yards and one touchdown plus three extra points. Travis Burke and Brad Cyr each had a rushing touchdown of two yards.

Eddie Waldron had six receptions for 102 yards and Darren Munson had two receptions for 35 yards.

Jeff Golovich lead defense by forcing two fumbles, making 10 tackles and he tallying one sack. Drew Klooster had 10 tackles.

"It was good win for the program," Jess, who is in his third year coaching the team said. "The program is starting to get where I want it to be."

According to Jess, his team wants to make the playoffs and win a conference championship.

"Right now we're taking it game by game," he said. "One game at a time, I know it's a cliché, but right now it's what we're concentrating on."

There are two new additions to the coaching staff, both of whom graduated from Charlevoix schools: former Boyne City varsity football coach Pat Klooster and former college offensive linemen, Mike Rautio.

"They bring a lot of experience and knowledge to the program," Jess said.

Last season the Rayders had one of their best years in some time with a respectable record of five wins and two losses.

Next the Rayders meet the Benzie Central Huskies from Benzononia who had a record of 7-3 last season and are currently 0-1 after losing against Suttons Bay last Friday.

Jess said Benzie has an outstanding team with a fierce offense.

"We will be working on our blocking assignments up front," he said.

The Rayders meet the Huskies at 7 p.m. Friday Sept. 2, at Kipke Field in Charlevoix for game two.

Braun plays 100 holes to benefit Junior Golf

To get the full impact of local professional golf instructor Steve Braun's "100 holes in one day" event, you just had to be there.

You needed to travel some of the holes in the five rounds of golf spanning over 12 hours that he played to benefit the Charlevoix Area Junior Golf program.

The popular summer golf program has provided scholarships to over 80 youngsters to week-long golf camps at Ferris State University and at Boyne Mountain Academy, primarily due to pledges made by Belvedere Golf Club members and other local supporters of junior golfers at Braun's recent event at the Belvedere Course.

To add to the challenge of playing 100 holes of golf on Aug. 22 was early morning drizzle, strong winds and cool, overcast skies. Braun and his car driver started the marathon at the crack of dawn.

"It's really an exercise pitting a fine golfer against fatigue, distraction, and boredom, but most importantly, Braun plays against the course and himself," said director of the junior golf program, Dean Davenport.

He played the first 18 holes before many people finished their breakfast and scored a respectable 77. After a change of car driver, he set out for the second 18 coming in with a 80 under windy conditions. In the third round he tallied a 76.

Just over the halfway mark Braun ordered a quick sandwich and headed for the first tee to begin his 55th hole.

After a solid round of 75, disaster hit on the 5th hole of his fifth round. A golfer's worst nightmare — his back went into a spasm and he tried to finish the hole and had the worst score of the 100 holes. Gulping down some Tylenol he struggled through the round, carding an 82.

After a slight rest, he scored a 39 on the front nine and then nearly birdied the 100th hole, settling for a par.

At around 6 p.m., nearly 12 hours after starting, he had endured the challenge and played a tremendous day of golf, battling the weather, fatigue, injury and the challenge of the course for 100 holes.

Braun's only comment was, "It gets harder every year as my game deteriorates with age, and I haven't played much this summer due to the many activities on our course and the hot weather. But thinking of our junior's learning to play this wonderful game of golf, motivates me and kept me going again today."

Davenport said, "It's a tremendous athletic feat. I doubt if anyone in our area other than Steve has attempted to play such a marathon. It's a great testimony to his athletic ability, endurance, and dedication to our golfing juniors. Watching the event unfold before your eyes is a thrill and somewhat unbelievable."

Mentors that helped as cart drivers included: Rosemary Corradi, Jill Washburn, Charley Kohs, Kim Shanahan, Stuart Goldblatt and Bob Heath.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the Junior Golf fund-raising effort can do so by mailing their check to the Belvedere Club, 512 Belvedere Avenue, Charlevoix 49720, attention Steve Braun.

State steers new SOS road testing for motorists

The Department of State is in the driver's seat when it comes to making sure that new motorists are ready for the road, according to Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land.

With spring and summer being peak times for driver education, Land outlined steps that the department is taking to ensure greater consistency, communication and collaboration in the instructional process.

These include a comprehensive review of every program aspect and the creation of a Driver Education Advisory Committee to encourage input from all stakeholders.

"Preparing new drivers for their responsibilities behind the wheel demands participation by all partners," said Land, the state's chief motor vehicle administrator. "We're working more closely with instructors and safety advocates to enrich our program. Their expertise will help us to develop the highest testing and training standards that keep our roads safe. This is a tremendous opportunity to make Michigan's program a national model and we're taking full advantage of it."

This is the first full year in which the department is administering Michigan's driver education program. Public Acts 70 and 71 of 2004 transferred it from the Department of Education. One of the primary benefits of giving driver education responsibilities to the Department of State is that it consolidates all program components under one roof. That promotes greater consistency and innovation in curriculum development, training and program oversight.

As more public schools are choosing to discontinue their driver education programs, a greater number of private driver-training schools are opening.

In 2000, more than 470 public schools offered driver education. That number fell to 360 last year. During that same period, the number of private driver-training schools teaching teens climbed from 119 to 183.

The department is responsible for the oversight of nearly 3,000 driving instructors and more than 540 public and private organizations conducting driver education programs statewide.

The majority of schools serve first-time vehicle operators while others teach commercial vehicle drivers.

More than 126,000 students were trained in 2004.

The department and its partners are launching a comprehensive review of the entire program to guarantee consistency in objectives, curricula, driver education program requirements and instructor qualifications.

Changes to the law or administrative rules may be recommended based on the evaluation.

Land also has created a Driver Education Advisory Committee to promote collaboration among stakeholders.

The 10-member committee has a unique chance to shape the driver education agenda by directly working with Land and her key staff. The group is comprised of instructors, school owners, third-party skills testers, law enforcement and traffic safety leaders.

More information about the program, as well as a list of road-skill testing organizations, is available at www.Michigan.gov/sos.

County farmers and land owners eligible for contracts

Agricultural Deputy Secretary Chuck Conner announced that 110 watersheds, including two watersheds in Michigan, will be eligible for the 2006 Conservation Security Program (CSP).

"This voluntary program recognizes farmers and ranchers for their ongoing stewardship activities on working agricultural lands," said Conner. "Natural resource conservation efforts by America's producers benefit everyone through healthier soil, cleaner air and water and improved fish and wildlife habitat."

In Michigan, the Boardman-Charlevoix and Maple River watersheds were selected to participate in the program during 2006. The two watersheds include an estimated 2,900 farms and over 570,000 acres of farmland. The Boardman-Charlevoix Watershed includes portions of Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Leelanau and Oscego counties.

The sign-up period will take place early in fiscal year 2006 which begins Oct. 1, 2005. Farmers/landowners will have only one opportunity to sign up for the program every 8 years.

Farmers will complete a self-assessment of their conservation practices to determine if they are eligible to sign-up. Program participants can receive contracts for five or 10 years with annual payments of up to $45,000.

Information meetings will be held in both watersheds eligible for the 2006 program sign-up. Meeting information will be announced locally and on the Web at www.mnrc.usda.gov/programs/csp.

Skatepark hours of operation

The City of Charlevoix Skatepark is open from 3 to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 2 to 8 p.m. Saturdays and closed Fridays, Sundays and holidays.

Also, it's closed if weather is inclement.

A waiver is required to be signed by a parent or guardian if under 18. The park is supervised.

still regarded as effective.

Anderson is currently taking SEROQUEL, an anti-psychotic drug commonly used to treat schizophrenia and acute manic episodes.

He has also quit using marijuana, a substance he reasoned was a "temporary release from the illness," and has been clean for a year-and-a-half.

According to the National Institute for Mental Health, alcohol and substance abuse is common among people with bipolar disorder as a means of self-medication.

Anderson has also begun to work out three days a week at a Grand Haven gym.

Although employed from 1993 to 1998 without being interrupted by a single episode, Anderson does not have a full-time job at this time — he receives governmental disability funds and food stamps. However, he has submitted an application for employment with Touchstone.

"I'm doing great now," said Anderson, the father of an 11-year-old daughter who he visits twice a week. "I've written articles that could be published in local papers."

One such article is titled "Giving up Grandeur," submitted to the Charlevoix Courier in mid-August, which recounts his rampant ordeal on Beaver Island in 1999.

"Writing has long been recognized as a viable intervention," said Anderson, who conducts support classes at Touchstone. "Journals can be very helpful in keeping track of where you are mentally. People with mental illness may write poems that are usually quite meaningful. In David's case, he wanted to get back to writing and I just encouraged him to do that."

Football team's focus is on balancing offense

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

While the defensive line for Charlevoix High School's varsity football team plays its strong, scrappy game the team's focus will be on maturing its offensive game.

"We have to have balance on offense. We have to be able to run and throw the ball. We've got young kids in skilled positions and they'll have to mature quickly," head coach Don Jess, said.

Jess is in his third year coaching the Rayder football squad. He is joined by a coaching team that includes, Josh Skeel, Mike Rautio, Pat Klooster and Tracy Simpson.

The five-man coaching machine is charged with rounding out the 25-person team's game. Of the players, eight are new and four are returning seniors. Seniors that make up the defensive backbone include linebackers Jeff Golovich and Chris Aepelbacher and running back Russell Williams. They are joined by die-hard junior nose guard Ray Jones.

"We have a lot of tough kids who fly to the ball — we've got good speed on defense," Jess said.

Junior, Matt Kautz will lead the offense at quarterback. Jess said Kautz is working hard and will be a key to the Rayder's offensive success. Kautz showed his talent in the team's first game of the season played at St. Ignace. He went 11 for 17 for a total of 151 yards in the 35-0 Rayder shutout and lead rushing with 14 carries for 105 yards and one touchdown.

With the team's skill weighing heavily on its defensive game, Jess said precision will be the key to their success this year.

"We have to be precise on every play. We can't have any mistakes. The conference is tough, top to bottom," he said.

Game two will be on Rayder turf when Charlevoix meets the Benzie Central Huskies from Benzonia at 7 p.m. Friday Sept. 2, at Kipke Field in Charlevoix.

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross country teams have their sites set on making the state meet

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Ken Plude
Boy's Coach

Charlevoix High School's girls and boys cross country teams have strong veteran leadership that their coaches, Mary and Ken Plude say should lead them to success this fall.

Boys coach Ken Plude, who has coached the team for almost two decades, is leading a group of 21 runners. He said at the core of the team is a band of five returning seniors providing deep veteran leadership.

"We've spent two years building, this is the year we are ready to go," he said.

While senior leadership should provide stability, Ken said sheer numbers also work in the team's favor.

"We have a deep team as far as numbers — 10 can run under 18 minutes 40 seconds for the 5K (3.1 miles)," he said.

While the 10 runners have great individual times Plude said teamwork will take the team the distance.

"We have to run as a team, not as individuals. We have a lot of talented guys that are individually motivated that need to come together and work together," he said.

Ken added that if they are able to come together the team's lack of experience at the state competition level shouldn't stop them from taking the championship.

Ken's wife, Mary Plude, is head coach of the girls cross country team. She will be assisted by Marilyn Morehead.

Mary Plude
Girl's Coach

The two will lead a group of 19 female runners, nine of which are new to the team and three of which are returning seniors.

The team graduated 13 runners in 2004.

In spite of the loss, Mary said tough freshmen and seven runners with state meet experience will help fill the gap and contribute to a successful season.

Mary is looking to leadership from senior Lisa Kuebler and two time all-stater Lindi Edger to help run the roost.

She is anticipating it taking about four meets before the new and returning runners mesh.

The two teams kicked off the season Aug. 27 at the Benzie Central Invitational. The Charlevoix girl's team finished sixth overall with 178 points. The boy's finished seventh out of 14 schools they competed against.

Keys to golf success: balance, senior leaders

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Balance, senior leadership and experience could take the Rayder golf team to the finals.

According to head coach of the Rayder golf team, Jim Glynn, if the team's short game improves they will be unstoppable.

Of the 16 players that made the cut this year two are new and five are seniors.

"I'm senior laden — I have more seniors than I've had in 13 years," Glynn said. Seniors are Kyle DeYoung, Stephen Parker, Kenny Anderson, Matt Novotny and Kevin Kusina.

With veteran leadership at the helm all Glynn said the team needs now is four consecutive scorers.

High school golf is a team sport — the four top scorers out of the six that play are combined for a team score.

On Aug. 15 the Charlevoix Rayder golf team opened the season with a Lake Michigan Conference match against all eight teams at Grayling Golf Club.

"We're off to a fast start. We need to play better, but we're in the hunt," Glynn said. "We've got a shot at playing for the Lake Michigan Conference title of course."

He added, "Traverse City St. Francis is the team to beat."

Last year's champions, Traverse City St. Francis, took first place at the opener with a 318. The Rayders were in third with 327.

On Aug. 26, the team shot 352 to place 13th in an 18-team tournament hosted by Traverse City St. Francis on the Spruce Run course at the Grand Traverse Resort.

Kris Bartling shot 83 to lead the Rayders, followed by J.D. Speigl, 88; Matt Novotny, 90; Kyle Smith, 91; and Kyle DeYoung, 93. Bartling placed 24th, Speigl was 48th, Novotny, 59th; Smith, 63rd, and DeYoung, 70th.

The Rayders play at the Bulldog Invitational at Indian River Inland Lakes on Wednesday, Aug. 31.

Soccer team to build on young talent

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

The Charlevoix High School Boys soccer team is packed with talented players with potential but head coach Josh Block said their success depends on passion.

Block said of the 23 players on the team the majority are coming out for the first time.

"We are rebuilding the program with six freshman and some juniors and sophomores playing for the first year," he said.

The season kick off Aug. 26 when the team faced Gaylord at Kipke Field. This was one of many tough teams Block said the team will face early this season.

"We need to stay focused on where we want to be at the end of the season and not get frustrated early," he said.

Block sees potential in his players and said if their attitude includes a willingness to learn they can be strong.

He said he is looking to get a few games under the team's belt to see what his major focus will be. Thus far, practices and games have focused on the fundamentals — good passing, good positioning and physical fitness.

"I believe at one point I will have some depth," Block said.

The next Rayder soccer show-down will take place at 5 p.m. Sept. 1 at Kipke Field in Charlevoix.

Basketball looks to mature outside game

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

This year's varsity Rayder girls' basketball team has a lot to live up to and the talent to make it happen.

Last year's record setting season which ended with a state championship loss at the Jack Breslin Student Event Center on the Michigan State University campus, Charlevoix girls basketball players tasted the thrill of going to the big dance.

Keith Haske

While coach Keith Haske, who is in his second year heading up the girls program, is optimistic about arriving a second time in East Lansing, he is focusing on the here and now.

Haske said to be successful this season his eight returning seniors will have to step up to lead their seven teammates who have graduated from junior varsity to varsity play.

He said this veteran leadership, which includes standout Laura Nitchman, has seen some intense competition and will have to carry the team while their younger inside game develops.

"We'll need to lean on them heavily early in the year and hopefully the big kids inside will improve throughout the year," Haske said.

To get the immature inside game ready for fierce competition, Haske and assistant coach Dr. Jim Gels have been spending a good deal of practice time on drill work and individual work with those student-athletes.

"We need to continue to establish our work ethic. We have to practice hard," he said.

The team will host Gaylord at its first scheduled home game to take place at 6 p.m. Sept. 6 in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

GOOD LUCK!

Charlevoix resident serves as interrogator

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Charlevoix resident Jamey Spenceley departed for Afghanistan on Monday.

For the next nine months, he will take up residence in one of the poorest and most deprived countries in the world, sleeping in a plywood hut, rising at 6:30 a.m. six days a week to work 12 to 14 hour workdays and spend his single day off volunteering at a shabby orphanage.

Spenceley, 36, had just returned to his hometown, Charlevoix on Aug. 15 and is now embarking on his second stint as an interrogator, contracted by the U.S. Department of Defense. Along with 15 to 20 other officials, Spenceley's job is to question some of the most ruthless and feared criminals in the world — al-Qaeda suspects, members of the Taliban and insurgents at Bagram's prison. "Sometimes you think, 'Wow, this guy would more than likely love to see me dead right now,' but it's also a very controlled environment and, to be honest, 99 percent of the people that I deal with react very well to being treated well," he said. "I usually do about three or four interrogations a day and spend the rest of the time writing reports about those interrogations."

Spenceley said prisoners in Bagram receive three meals per day, clean water and clothes and showers. The quality of life most detainees enjoy while behind bars, he added, rivals that of their free existence — men have begged Spenceley for extended prison terms, while those who remain silent during his interrogations are frequently threatened with emancipation.

Guthrie, Gennett lend a hand to hurricane victims

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

Two local men armed with their skills, faith and a carload of supplies left Charlevoix Sept. 2 en route to hurricane ravaged Baton Rouge, La. where they'll assist in 10 days of relief work.

"Wherever we are needed we'll go," said former City of Charlevoix Fire Station shift commander of 25 years, Lyle Gennett.

Gennett was watching the news Wednesday, Aug. 31 when he saw images of New Orleans, La. a city where he and his wife spent a memorable vacation in December, which is now under water up to 20 feet deep in places.

He saw thousands stranded and he saw the good and had sides of humanity.

"I feel for those people down there, they've lost everything. It's a total disaster," Gennett said. "It's a situation where it doesn't matter who you are or what you did in life — they have nothing."

The mission started when Steve Guthrie, a local chaplain and friend of Gennett's for about 20 years, contacted the Red Cross volunteer coordinator in Baton Rouge, La. who gave him directions and said he and Gennett could help as soon as they could get there.

With directions in hand and a mission in his soul, Guthrie called Gennett early Sept. 1 and said, "Are you ready to go?"

Gennett, a licensed medical technician specialist, plans to administer medical assistance as needed in conjunction with the Baton Rouge chapter of the American Red Cross. He and Guthrie will be stationed at a shelter housing 7,000 people.

They plan to park a camping trailer just outside the shelter.

Guthrie will spend his time ministering to refugees.

"We live in a society today that needs a lot of helping hands," Gennett said.

To lend a hand he packed minimal provisions for himself and he and Guthrie loaded the car with supplies to distribute.

The devastation they will encounter in the week-and-a-half long sojourn was caused by Hurricane Katrina which hit Louisiana Aug. 29 packing 160 mph winds, and driving

Charlevoix's official end to summer, the Little but Mighty Labor Day Bridge Walk took place Sept. 5. The beautiful weather and many enthusiastic walkers made for a great day. Bullet-proof vest grant awarded to Sheriff's office

Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office received three donations in July to replace all the deputy sheriffs' lifesaving, bulletproof vests.

Advanced Energy Services L.L.C. donated $2,500. O.J.L. Energy Corp. donated $2,500 and The Oleson Foundation donated $8,400.

The need for replacing the deputies' vests came about with the inadequate reliability of the Ultima vests made with Zylon fabric purchased from Second Chance.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater can now furnish all deputy sheriffs with a new bulletproof vest and commends these donors for their stalwart concern for the safety of all law enforcement officers.

Jamey Spencley returns to Afghanistan

pation.

"Most of these people are put in a bad situation," said Spencley. "Rather than watch their families starve to death, they accepted bribes from members of the Taliban to plant IEDs (improvised explosive devices, or home-made suicide bombs) or to grab weapons and shoot at Americans."

Because $20 will help these hapless citizens feed their entire family for a week, they are easily bribed to carry out attacks.

"They're very uneducated so they're easily manipulated — easily manipulated with religion," said Spencley. "Most are extremely devout Muslims and can't interpret the Koran for themselves."

Those who can decipher the sacred text, he added, may misinterpret its teachings, steering unsuspecting persons to perform violent acts.

Detainees at the Bagram prison sit with Spencley in a small room for the interrogation process. One interpreter, typically an educated Afghan who fled the country during the Russian invasion in 1979, and a military police guard are present to monitor the scene.

"We make sure everything is done correctly according to the Geneva Conventions," said Spencley. "Ever since Abu Ghraib, things have been heavily scrutinized."

When donning a full beard, Spencley, with dark eyes and an olive complexion, could easily be mistaken for a native Afghan — comparable physical traits provide him an advantage in his line of work.

"With a beard, they (prisoners) trust me more. I've had guys say to me, 'I totally trust you, you look like you're from my village.'"

The absence of facial hair, on the other hand, has also discouraged prisoners from talking to Spencley at all.

"There's a lot of different techniques you can use depending on the person's personality — whether you're going to be harsh and stern and try to scare them or he really nice," said Spencley. "I always go with the really nice guy approach and bring them tea and muffins."

Although 2005 has been the costliest year for American lives in Afghanistan, Bagram, the U.S. military's primary headquarters in the country, is relatively well-secured. Those troops stationed along the Pakistani border, said Spencley, may have deeper concerns about their well-being.

After the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, the U.S. ousted the active Taliban regime in Afghanistan. In October 2004, Hamid Karzai became the country's first democratically elected president. The country is looking forward to parliamentary elections on Sept. 18.

"The Taliban is probably going to pick up their operations a bit and try to disrupt the elections, but if we can make these elections come off without a hitch, that'll be a huge defeat for the Taliban," said Spencley. "Being in Afghanistan is not nearly as dangerous as being in Iraq, so I'm able to get off base and do some other things."

One of those things happens to be dedicating each Sunday to refurbishing a nearby orphanage, which houses 20 girls and 130 boys between the ages of five and 15.

"Their school is in shambles," he said. "There are a lot of broken windows and only one water source that puts out brown water. You could scoop up some water in Round Lake and it would be cleaner to drink than the water in Afghanistan."

Spencley has repaired all four of the facility's classrooms, installed new windows, painted and performed masonry work. Future projects on his agenda, however, include the students' dorms, and financing their uniforms and books.

"I bring the kids something every weekend, whether it's pens and paper or candy," he said, adding that he discovered the site while traveling with a fellow interpreter.

Sally Goodrich, a Vermont resident whose son was onboard one of the planes that struck the World Trade Center, inspired Spencley to revamp the rundown structure. Along with her husband, Goodrich raised nearly $200,000 to build a school in Afghanistan as a living memorial to her fallen child.

"I just thought that was incredibly neat that somebody who lost her son in the 9/11 attacks still had the open-mindedness to look beyond it and not blame an entire country that's in desperate, desperate need of education," Spencley said. "That's the number one problem in that country. Everybody who was educated or had money took off when the Russians came."

According to the CIA Web site, www.cia.gov, the literacy rate for males in Afghanistan stands at 51 percent, while the rate for females is only 21 percent.

Spencley joined the army while earning a degree in forestry from Michigan State University. He spent one year at a language school in Monterey, Calif., where he learned Korean and then moved east to Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., to attend interrogation school for 10 weeks. The remainder of his four-year tour was spent in Oahu, where he took frequent trips to Korea.

The opportunity to work for the U.S. government in Afghanistan is one that "fell in his lap." While managing a restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco, a friend of Spencley's contacted him about a teaching job in Ft. Huachuca. After instructing future interrogators for about two months, word eventually spread to Spencley about full-time jobs for interrogators in Afghanistan.

"I was a bit apprehensive, but after spending four years in the (U.S.) Army, it doesn't really scare you to go because you feel like you probably should go," he said.

Spending the past few weeks in Charlevoix has made it "extremely difficult" for Spencley to want to return to the barren landscape and arid climate of Afghanistan. Similarly discouraging is the "h-hut" he will soon sleep in, which houses his 12-by-8-foot bedroom along with seven other living spaces for fellow government officials. Within the wire of the military base, however, sits Burger King, Dairy Queen and Subway establishments for the troops to savor once cafeteria cuisine loses its luster.

"You don't take grass for granted anymore," he said. "You don't take these vast amounts of fresh water that we have for granted anymore. It's all so precious. After seeing so much squalor, we're just fortunate to have so much up here."

Local reaction to Hurricane Katrina is commendable

EDITORIAL

Most people who hit the road last weekend were headed to a barbecue or a family outing but two road tripping Charlevoix men drove 12 hours to meet their greatest challenge.

We want to thank Lyle Gennett and Steve Guthrie who after watching footage of the aftermath from Hurricane Katrina were compelled to go to Baton Rouge, La. and help displaced residents.

In the face of chaos these two hung on to the strength of their faith and drove into the heart of what has been dubbed as our nation's greatest natural disaster area.

The community should also get a strong pat on the back.

In the 12 hours following their decision to venture on the pilgrimage to Louisiana a truckload of supplies and over $4,000 in cash was delivered for the trip and for the needy.

Charlevoix residents also paped the entryway at Glen's Market off M-66 with donor cards and pulled off a weekend fund-raiser at Lake Michigan Beach.

The Beach House Restaurant in cooperation with the American Red Cross is donating 100 percent of proceeds from its concession sales to the Disaster Relief Fund. The effort will run from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 3-9.

Also during the Labor Day weekend over 90 boats sailed in the Charlevoix Yacht Club's annual Red Fox Regatta. Those who participated donated, purchased hats and gave to raffles to raise $1,500 for the Red Cross.

While we have opened our hearts and wallets this community has also sacrificed its residents like Gennett and Guthrie as well as Detective Mike Wheat from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office who recently left town to assist in the relief effort.

All of these endeavors are part of the one reason we all call Charlevoix home and that is community.

For us the word community encompasses not only our friends, family and neighbors, it is the sense of caring, generosity and sincerity each person emanates as well as the beautiful natural surroundings we are so blessed to live in.

Thank you for letting the warmth of the Charlevoix community shine on Louisiana.

Husband's tales of triumph refresh the human spirit

Gayle Gennett

'A look at life'

The human spirit is forgiving, undaunted and optimistic.

This is what our readers need to know about the effect of Katrina as my husband, Lyle Gennett and his friend, Steve Guthrie venture into unfamiliar territory to help the victims of the hurricane.

It's ironic that such a beautiful name was given to a violent effect of Mother Nature. It took lives but brought back a sense of reality that life is short and we must never take it for granted. Some people say it was God's unhappiness with us, others say they knew this would happen because it's nature's way of maintaining checks and balances.

Whether Biblical, or scientific, the fact remains that the human spirit of these communities lives on. Each and every phone call I receive from my spouse tells new stories of hope and forgiveness, families reunited, families suffering loss, all coming together to help each other. These are the stories that need to be told.

There are many people, particularly the very young and the elderly who, though sick and injured direct the medical personnel to help someone else who may need more attention.

A gentleman who floated on a dumpster for four days was more concerned about others when he arrived at the shelter. A teenage girl, who had been walking for days, slumped in a corner of the shelter and asked only for a cot and some water. With so many people struggling emotionally they are truly appreciative to have anyone take the time to actually listen to their story.

Families are united daily through a database set up with names of the families living in the shelter. Relatives contact the center continually to offer a plane ticket for these displaced families to unite with relatives in another state.

Vans and busses continually make trips to the airport and volunteers stay with them until they are boarded, safe and feeling secure.

The areas most affected by the hurricane have an unusually high poverty area. These individuals have learned to cope with pain, loss and living with very little. As a result they are resilient and strong and feel this too shall pass. What an inspiration they are for all of us.

Prayer services take place daily at the shelters while communion is offered. Individuals are air lifted daily to hospitals to get the best medical care possible. As I write this article, there are children playing games and reading books in the shelters, people are sharing food, stories and many hugs. Neighboring communities have opened up their homes, condos, trailers, churches and schools to complete strangers.

Lessons I have taken away from this are my husband can endure 12 hours of work without food until he goes to bed, that the less advantaged are more resilient than most of us and that the human body may be weak but the spirit remains strong in the south.

Vote down big box

Editor:

I'm writing as a concerned property owner in Charlevoix Township.

The Charlevoix Township Zoning Board has in response to Wal-Mart almost coming to Charlevoix changed the zoning ordinance to block large retail stores from being able to build in Charlevoix. The changes they propose have been passed by the zoning and township boards, but not the citizens of Charlevoix.

The citizens have a vote on these changes on Nov. 8. The changes make it extremely difficult and expensive if not impossible to build a new large retail store. I think it is the township board's responsibility to promote smart growth not to prevent it.

Craft Fair misrepresented

Editor:

Charlevoix, the Beautiful — so says the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

In such a beautiful city setting I find blatant misrepresentation, irresponsible management and the lack of common courtesy of answering a letter/complaint. I am talking about your Chamber of Commerce. I write you so the community will be aware of unfair and dishonest business contracts issued by the chamber.

I speak of my recent participation in the July 9 and 10 art and craft show at the waterfront. The show contract was explicit in forbidding massed produced items and demanded that I send many photos of my work, a photo of myself painting my art and a check for $150. A number of us "first timers" had high expectations of a quality show. All of you who have attended would be quick to agree that it was more of a flea market than quality arts and crafts. Some locals and tourists knew better for the show lacked the upscale art enthusiast many of us count on.

I instinctively feel that this show has declined over the years, and the chamber simply can't admit the downgrade. I only hope they will reconsider and be honest in reclassifying it so others can escape being misled and ripped off. Gaylord openly admits to allowing flea market products for certain shows. They are honest.

Such shows I never consider entering. Putting this issue aside, let me just say that despite the disappointment, my extended family and I had a wonderful stay. The city is lovely with flowers and crystal blue waters, the restaurants are delicious and the bed and breakfast was perfect.

But most of all we enjoyed the beautiful people of Charlevoix, who were helpful and friendly.

Craft Fair quality

Editor:

Comments made in response to letter to the editor, Julie Witthoef, from Robert Nowicki from Loveland, Ohio submitted on Sept. 1 to the Charlevoix Courier.

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce is proud of the overall quality of the arts and crafts exhibited at the 37th Annual Art & Craft Show held July 9 and 10, 2005. The Chamber is pleased with the number and caliber of patrons who attended this show annually.

Chamber of Commerce volunteers and staff members work diligently to improve each year's show, which is reflected in the on-going popularity of this event, which has been held for 37 consecutive years. On occasion an artist or crafter does exhibit work, which did not reflect the original representation submitted for jury purposes. Exhibitors who have misrepresented their work when applying and who do not bring their original work to the show are not invited and are prohibited from participating in future shows sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

We appreciate Mr. Nowicki's concern and continue to address concerns and ways to improve each and every event that we sponsor.

Director of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce

Insufficient response

Editor:

For the past five days we have witnessed some of the darkest days of our nation's history. No one can control nature — it always plays the last card. But we can be prepared for the worst case — especially when it has been modeled and imaged in the past year. And we can move immediately to provide emergency and life-giving services to those in the midst of the destruction. This did not happen. Even today there are thousands of victims of Hurricane Katrina still waiting on roof tops, in befouled evacuation centers, and wandering the streets of New Orleans and other devastated areas of the Gulf Coast.

While there is blame enough to go around, the buck stops at the top. The recently revamped Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and its new host, the Department of Homeland Security, are nominally in charge at the command of the president. It took President Bush two days to even speak of the problem and then with complacency and excuses. No one expected those levees to be breached. This is astounding; many have known for decades that the right storm could have just this effect; in fact, FEMA itself in a hypothetical hurricane modeled just such an event, with the same consequences we have seen. So ignorance is not possible and certainly no excuse.

In fact, this tragedy was years in the making. In June 2004, Walter Maestri, the emergency management chief for Jefferson Parish, speaking of funds for levee improvement, stated to the Times-Picayune in New Orleans, "It appears that the money has been moved in the president's budget to handle homeland security and the war in Iraq. I suppose that's the price we pay. Nobody locally is happy that the levees can't be finished and we are doing everything we can to make the case that this is a security issue for us."

Last year alone when the Army Corps of Engineers requested $105 million for hurricane and flood programs in New Orleans, they received $40 million. FEMA's ability to respond to emergencies has been sharply curtailed by the Bush administration which has led to a mass exodus of experienced professionals, according to James Lee Witt, a leader of FEMA under President Clinton, in testimony before Congress. And when a third of the National Guard including about one half of Louisiana's Guard, and half of all the National Guard's equipment are in Iraq, some of the inability of the federal government to respond in a timely and competent manner becomes clear.

There is no mystery here. Bush and his administration were and are totally unprepared to deal with any emergency; the war in Iraq waged on the basis of lies and the chaos there since, the tax breaks for the wealthiest citizens resulting in huge budget deficits and failure to invest in infrastructure, the cutbacks in social programs which have hurt the most vulnerable the primarily black, poor, old and youngest citizens who, not coincidentally, were Katrina's main victims, have left this country uniquely vulnerable to natural and man-made disasters. Can this tragedy be a wake-up call to all Americans that something has to change? We can only hope so, and the sooner the better.

COMMUNITY

Second annual 'Day of Caring' set for Sept. 15

By BENJAMIN GOHS
Staff writer

On Sept. 15 a group of local workers will shift their focus from the job, to the community.

The local manufacturing company Harbor Industries is working with the CharEm United Way to mobilize the business community in Charlevoix and Emmet counties to volunteer for the second annual Community Day of Caring.

"Harbor Industries has been doing it for probably six years now, but this is our second year that we encouraged businesses to help out," said Jennifer Archambault, human resources manager at Harbor Industries. "Part of Harbor Industries' mission statement is to be the preeminent leader in the community. We always support the United Way but we wanted to give back with some manpower help, not just financial support."

In addition, Archambault said employees of some other area businesses will be out and about volunteering at places like Mt. McSaub, Boulder Park and the Bergmann Center.

For Harbor Industries, this year's focus will be on improvements to the Charlevoix Senior Citizen's Center off Norwood Road.

The volunteer effort will begin at 8:30 a.m. and will go through 4:30 p.m.

The goal is to build a new deck at the center, work on landscaping, prepare food and make some indoor improvements.

Area professionals have been meeting regularly since last year's event to plan the day.

The event takes place in early September in recognition of the lives lost in the terrorist attacks that took place on Sept. 11, 2001.

For more information or to get involved, call (231) 237-6242 or e-mail the group at GetInvolved@harborind.com.

Hunter's ed clinic to take place at Rod and Gun Club

A free Hunter Education Clinic will take place Sept. 24 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, located north of Charlevoix on U.S. 31.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the clubhouse. The days activities will conclude at 4 p.m.

There will be a lunch break and registrants are asked to bring a drink and sack lunch.

This clinic is open to all area residents regardless of age and is required of all first-time hunting license buyers, born since Jan. 1, 1960. Students under 11 years of age shall be accompanied by a parent or guardian or other adult, designated and provided by the parent or guardian, during the course.

A testing session, for those who complete the Sept. 24 clinic, will take place at 6 p.m. Sept. 26 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

Attendance is mandatory at both sessions to receive the Hunter Education Certificate.

For additional information and pre-registration call Jim Hansen at (231) 547-6862 or leave a message at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club at (231) 547-2785.

Wedding

Ann Terryberry and Laurence Milward were married June 18, in Frankfort at the United Methodist Church in a double ring ceremony by Rev. Greg Culver.

A reception followed the ceremony at Crystal Mountain Resort given by the bride's parents.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the groom's parents.

The bride is the daughter of Dale and Mary Terryberry of Charlevoix. She was dressed in a strapless white satin gown with café trim. The bodice and chapel train were embellished with diamond beadwork. She wore a crystal tiara and waist length veil. Her flowers were red and pink roses.

Music was provided by a string trio consisting of Andy Tuck, Josh Pugh and Maury Beth Liederbach.

The groom is the son of Elaine Milward of Grandville and Anthony Milward of New York.

The bride was escorted by her parents. The sister-in-law of the bride Amanda Terryberry, was the maid of honor.

Bridal attendants were Trina Vanderark, Kristen Terryberry, sister-in-law of bride, Carrie Titus, Kary Swanson and Melissa Seigel. The junior bridesmaid was Bailey Zywicki, cousin the of the bride.

Ushers were Brian Titus and John Behnke.

The couples wedding trip was to Punta Cana in the Dominican Republic. They now reside in Wyoming.

The bride is a 2003 graduate of Central Michigan University with a Bachelor's degree in Elementary Education. The groom is employed at Siles Machinery of Grand Rapids.

Rebecca Terryberry, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. Dylan Terryberry, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer.

Bestmen were Michael Milward and Mark Milward, brothers of the groom. Also standing with the groom were brother of the bride, Jason Terryberry and groomsmen Aaron Patrick and Jarret Seigel.

Sheriff warns of traveling criminal scam in the county

A traveling group from South Carolina is currently working Eveline Township trying to contract with senior citizens to paint barn roofs.

Home and business owners are urged by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office to be cautious when approached by persons selling services for painting, asphalt paving and sealing products. If suspicious of fraudulent activity is detected, consumers should call the nearest local law enforcement agency.

Traveling criminals usually leave their customers with a job that will eventually reveal poor workmanship. Poor work is not always evident immediately. Problems may not appear for several weeks or months. The traveling criminal will be long-gone when the job they've done begins to break up, making legal action difficult or impossible.

No injuries reported in plane/deer encounter on Beaver Island

Just after 8 a.m. Aug. 29 the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office was dispatched to an accident involving a plane operated by North Flight EMS after the plane hit a deer while landing at the Beaver Island Airport.

There were no injuries to either the crew or passengers and damage to the plane was confined to the left landing gear and wheel. The Federal Aviation Administration closed the runway pending an investigation.

The patient that the plane was there to transport was treated and released.

Lake Michigan Federation beach clean-up Sept. 17

By NICOLE GRAZIANO
Special to the Courier

Thousands of volunteers are expected to pitch in during the Lake Michigan Federation's annual September Adopt-a-Beach event from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Sept. 17.

Participants in the one-day beach cleanup program, always held on the third Saturday in September, clear shorelines in both Michigan and Illinois of waterlogged and withered waste while recording their findings for educational reports.

This year, Daniel Mann, a family practitioner with Pine River Medical Associates, will coordinate Adopt-a-Beach efforts in Charlevoix County for the third year.

"From Norwood to Bay Shore, volunteers are divided into 10 different cleanup groups," he said, adding that the county's turnout last year totaled nearly 70 people.

After garbage is collected at each site, Mann said, it is compiled into one heap and weighed to track shoreline pollution in the area. Last year, 1,100 pounds of waste were removed from Charlevoix County beaches and 8,773 pounds of trash were collected at more than 120 sites in the state.

About 50 percent of that mass, said Mann, is cigarette butts.

According to the Alliance for the Great Lakes Web site, www.great-lakes.org, cigarette filters are composed of cellulose acetate, a plastic that may take up to five years to decompose.

In addition to disrupting the natural beauty of local beaches, waste such as balloons, food, wrappers and beverage bottles also pose a threat to wildlife and beachgoers. Ribbons tied onto balloons may become tangled in a boat's propellers when washed to sea, while an abandoned wrapper may create a mishap for a hungry animal. Leftover snacks deserted in sand may not only attract unwanted wildlife to beaches, but also increase the presence of animal waste and other harmful bacteria in the water.

Second to smoking-related items, the Alliance for the Great Lakes reports that food-related leftovers such as straws, six-pack holders, lids and wrappers constituted 31 percent of trash collected on Michigan beaches during the 2004 Adopt-a-Beach event. Balloons made up 4 percent of waste collected and other garbage filled the remaining 12 percent.

Since its inception in 1991, the annual cleanup has assisted in the removal of about 109,000 pounds of trash from Michigan's shores.

Mann encouraged volunteers to attend next Saturday's event, but suggested those interested in participating contact him as soon as possible to ensure sufficient supplies are available. The group will meet at 9 a.m. at the Lake Michigan Beach pavilion near the lighthouse in Charlevoix. Mann can be reached at (231) 547-6554.

PARENTING

Back-to-school shots from K-college

Pat Fralick
'Kids corner'

As families get their children ready for another school year they look at what items need to be replaced such as shoes and backpacks. It's also an important time to review a child's health record to see what immunizations may be needed.

Immunizations have been recognized as one of the 10 greatest health achievements of the twentieth century. Vaccines that prevent whooping cough, measles, mumps, meningitis and polio prevent pain and suffering for children and their families.

Children also miss fewer days of school as they are healthier.

Children's immunizations need to be updated periodically from kindergarten through college.

Children entering kindergarten usually need a booster dose of Measles, Mumps & Rubella (MMR), Polio, and Diphtheria, Tetanus and Pertussis (DTaP). They also need varicella (chickenpox) vaccine if they haven't had the disease.

Sixth graders may need a Tetanus Diphtheria (Td) booster. It's also important to complete their series (three doses) of Hepatitis B vaccine if they didn't receive it as an infant. Sixth graders may also need the varicella vaccine if they haven't had chickenpox.

A new meningitis vaccine, Menactra, is now available for 11 and 12 year olds. Meningitis is an infection of the brain and spinal cord coverings.

College freshmen, particularly those living in dormitories have a slightly increased risk of getting meningitis. The meningitis vaccine can prevent four types of meningococcal disease, including two of the three leading types of meningitis. Immunization recommendations for college freshmen include meningitis, Tetanus Diphtheria, and Hepatitis B if needed.

Call your child's physician or the health department if you have questions about immunizations or would like to make an immunization appointment for your child.

A child's general health status and their ability to accurately see and hear have a tremendous impact on their ability to learn. Free vision and hearing screening is available for pre-school and school age children at the health department. Vision and hearing technicians go to our local schools and provide vision screening to children in kindergarten, first, third, fifth and seventh grades and those students in driver's training. Hearing technicians provide hearing screening to children in kindergarten, second and fourth grades. Both services are provided free of charge.

Low-cost and free health care coverage programs are available for many children, including those in working families. In Michigan, these programs are known as Healthy Kids and MICHild.

Healthy Kids is a free health insurance program for pregnant women, babies and children under 19 years of age. Coverage includes doctor and dental visits, hospital care, lab and x-ray tests, prescriptions and most medically necessary health care needs. A family of four with an income below $2,418 per month qualifies for Healthy Kids. If the family includes a pregnant woman or a child under one year of age, the income guidelines are higher.

MICHild is a low cost health insurance program for children up to 19 years of age who have no health insurance. A fee of $5 per month provides health insurance coverage for all children in the family. In our area, the insurance provider is Blue Cross. MICHild covers doctor and dental visits, hospital care, prescriptions, mental health and other health services. A family of four with an income below $3,225 per month qualifies for MICHild. Call the health department if you would like more information on health insurance programs.

Take the opportunity to utilize these community resources and send your children off to school healthy and ready to learn.

Pat Fralick is the family health director for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency located at 220 West Garfield St. in Charlevoix. She can be contacted at (231) 547-6523.

'Must reads' from library director Valerie Meyerson

The following is a list of age specific books selected by Charlevoix Public Library director Valerie Meyerson for September reading.

David Gordon, "The Three Little Rigs," Ages 2-6

Three little rigs look for help when the big, bad wrecking ball comes to destroy their garages. This fractured fairy tale is a fun spin on "The Three Little Pigs" story we all love. The three little rigs, while building their new homes, encounter a bully wrecker who demands "little rig, little rig, let me come in," and each rig in turn responds, "Not by the chrome on my chinny chin chin." Children will delight in the whimsical red, blue, and yellow illustrations drawn by the author, Martin Waddell, "It's Quacking Time."

Ages 4-8

This deceptively simple story about the hatching of a duckling is a charmer. Mommy duck lays an egg and duckling wonders how a baby duck can fit in that shell. Duckling is amazed at the fact that she too once was lived in an egg as well as all the other ducks. The watercolor drawings and story work well together in celebrating life's changes.

Cathy Rodowsky, "Not My Dog," Ages 7-11

For three years, eight-year-old Ellie has been dreaming of getting a dog that will "give puppy kisses" and "skid across the floor." Ellie is sorely disappointed when her great-aunt gives the family her full-grown mutt, Preston, because she doesn't get to watch a puppy grow up. Ellie almost loses her new dog because of her difficulty in seeing his virtues. Eventually though, Ellie finally comes around and welcomes Preston into her heart. For the dog lover in your family, "Not My Dog" is a heartwarming tale of a girl who works through her disappointment to find a loyal lovable pet.

Jeffrey S. Stone, "Tiger," Ages 11-14

The Legend... When China's Cangzhen Temple is destroyed, only five young warrior monks survive. Each is named after an animal — tiger, monkey, snake, crane, dragon — for each is the youngest ever master of that animal's fighting style. The five scatter and begin teaching not only their formidable fighting skills but also their peaceful philosophy of life. It is said that today's martial arts come from the teachings of these five young warrior monks, who are known in legend as... the Five Ancestors.

Foundation's Chicago Club fund benefits area children

For more than a century, members of the Chicago Club have made their mark on Charlevoix — enhancing our summer resort-town ambiance, preserving the unique history of this area, and participating in numerous civic activities.

What many might not know is that the Chicago Club is also a generous benefactor of Charlevoix children.

In 2000, members of the club established a special charitable fund within the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. Focused on meeting the health care needs of area school children, the Chicago Club fund has distributed nearly 60 grants totaling more than $28,000 since that time.

Over the years, the fund has helped provide medical and dental services to youngsters, supported "Fit Kids," a health-screening program that encourages exercise and healthy lifestyles and taken care of numerous other immediate health care needs that otherwise might have gone unmet — from eyeglasses to sports physicals.

This year, Chicago Club members decided to expand the fund's mission to include a broad range of children's issues and promote child welfare.

Richard Platt, a Chicago Club member who helped spearhead the fund, says donors wanted to extend their reach beyond the direct health needs in recognition that modest investments in other areas that affect children's lives could also yield benefits well into the future.

"While our primary emphasis will continue to be on urgent health needs of children, we recognize there are other issues that influence child welfare. Now, our Chicago Club fund will be able to address a multitude of concerns, help kids grow to become healthy, productive adults, and make an even greater impact."

Bob Tambellini, president of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, said the Chicago Club fund will continue to make rapid-response grants for urgent needs, and will also be a resource for other grant making during the year.

"This fund is a flexible, innovative tool for promoting youth initiatives and helping area kids," he explains. "Once again, Chicago Club members have demonstrated their strong attachment to our community, and their commitment to making a positive difference in the lives of our children. We're grateful to all of them."

The Chicago Club fund is one of more than 160 funds held by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, each one designated to support a specific cause or address general philanthropic needs in our area. For information about the fund, or any other programs of the community foundation, call the foundation office at (231) 536-2440.

Boater hits Ironton Ferry cables: No damage reported

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigated an incident on Lake Charlevoix involving the Ironton Ferry that took place at approximately 4 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 26.

Despite warning notices from the ferry operator a boat operated by Gretchen Hoyt of East Jordan attempted to pass into the path of the ferry as it approached the west side loading ramp.

Her boat became lodged on one of the ferry cables requiring the ferry to stop within 20 feet of the loading ramp. Vehicle traffic was delayed while her boat was maneuvered off the cable line. There were no injuries during the incident and no vessel damage was noted.

According to Sheriff George T. Lasater, Hoyt was cited for careless operation and the incident remains under investigation.

Dzwik joins city police department

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Editor

The City of Charlevoix Police Department has welcomed a new patrolman.

Adam Dzwik

A selection committee made up of city police chief Dennis Halverson, deputy police chief Scott Hankins and fire chief Paul Ivan picked Adam Dzwik, 26, out of a pool of 105 applicants.

"Adam rose to the top. His former chief had excellent comments on his work, he has a big heart and comes from a good family. He's a natural fit for us," Halverson said.

Dzwik started with the local department Sept. 2. His primary duty will be patrol work.

While the department has been down a patrolman since Dale Meredith retired in early July and Hankins was promoted to deputy chief, there is no rush to get Dzwik on the street.

Halverson said he has about three weeks of training ahead of him with Hankins to learn the streets and the mobile data computer system.

His prior experience in law enforcement includes four years of work split between the City of Cadillac Police Department and the Lansing Township Police Department.

Prior to his time in the field, Dzwik, a Traverse City native, attended Traverse City St. Francis High School and earned his degree from Northwestern Michigan Community College in Law Enforcement.

He recently moved to Charlevoix and said the new job will allow him to continue to be close to his family while working in his field.
